Santa was good to the Water Commission

"We have been awarded $12.48 million 2 percent low interest SRF loans from the DEP to help us continue our aggressive water systems improvement program," said John McNabb, Chairman of the Water Commission.

The Water Commission received notice Dec. 24 that it has been selected to receive a $12 million low interest loan from the Drinking Water State Revolving Fund for improvements to the water distribution system, wellfields, and treatment plant, and $479,500 from the Clean Water State Revolving Fund for a project to protect the watersheds of Lily Pond and the Aaron River Reservoir from non-point source pollution.

"These loans from the State Revolving Fund (SRF) program will save our ratepayers about $3 million in reduced interest payments over the next 20 years, which will allow us to continue our aggressive system improvements program with the least impact to ratepayers," he said.

"The Drinking Water SRF loan program is very competitive. We were competing with 43 other water systems in Massachusetts who requested about $500 million in funding, and were one of only 14 water systems who succeeded in being awarded some of the total $94 million available. We have applied for this grant program every year for the past five years with no success until now. We succeeded this year primarily because of the excellent work provided by Tutela Engineering, who prepared the application for us," he said.

This funding will be used to replace about 9.5 miles of old and undersized water mains in our distribution system, which will continue the long range plan of continuing to improve fire protection, water service, and drinking water quality throughout town including installation of 90 new fire hydrants, the replacement of about 35 lead water service lines, the looping of dead ends to improve low flows and pressure, and the reactivation of the Ellms Meadow Wellfield and the Sohier Street Well.

The project also includes improvements to the Lily Pond Water Treatment Plant, including replacement of the filter media, replacing the flow and pressure transmitters, replacing the rapid mix motors, drive shafts and motors, installation of adjustable frequency drives for the raw water pumps, and replacing the generator automatic transfer switch.

"The $479,500 Clean Water SRF loan is for a project designed by our watershed protection consultant, Norfolk Ram Group, LLC, who also prepared this successful application. A total of 45 municipalities applied for about $850 million for proposed new construction for this program, and only 21 municipalities succeeded in being approved for the total $170 million available for new construction."

Christmas trees accepted at DPW

Christmas trees may be brought to the D.P.W. parking area. Please remove all wires and decorations.

Residential brush will be accepted beginning Jan. 15 through April 30. No trees over 3 inches in diameter. No contractors please.

New boiler at Town Hall

The old boiler at Town Hall has been replaced to the tune of $20,000, said Town Manager Mark Haddad.

Haddad said the boiler broke last Tuesday, so Town Hall was closed early Wednesday (Christmas Eve) and did not open Friday (Dec. 26).

Town Hall will be open the usual Friday hours from 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Jan. 2.

Haddad said he is filing an insurance claim but isn't sure replacing the boiler will be covered.

Town Hall staffers, who were not on vacation at the time and scheduled to work, will not be charged vacation time for the missed hours. "They lucked out," Haddad said.

Vaccine clarification

A story on the vaccine available for flu shots in last week's Mariner warrants some clarification. The state provided the town with 730 doses of the vaccine; the town bought an additional 270 to bring the supply up to its usual quantity of 1,000. After the supply of 1,000 was exhausted, the state provided 20 additional free doses, which have also been administered.

Apply for CPC funds

Anyone wishing to petition the Cohasset Community Preservation Committee ("CPC") for a funding recommendation at the March 2004 Town Meeting must submit an initial application to the committee no later than Jan. 15. Please note that the CPC may only recommend to Town Meeting those projects involving the acquisition and preservation of open space, historical preservation and/or promote low to moderate income housing.

Qualifying applicants will be asked to make formal presentations to the CPC during January and February.

Copies of the application may be obtained at the Town Hall or by calling the committee Chairman, Stuart Ivimey at 383-2604.

Callahan won't run for reelection

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"I have been dropping hints about this for months, but wanted to make a formal announcement before nomination papers became available."
— Selectman Tom Callahan

Selectmen will lose a familiar face in 2004, as Tom Callahan has decided not to run for reelection this spring. After 15 years of combined service on both the Conservation Commission and the Board of Selectmen, he has decided it is time to take a break, much to the delight of his family that he jokes has threatened to form a "Stop Tom" committee.

Callahan, who works as an attorney while not serving the town, is 45-years-old and has lived in Cohasset for roughly 18 years. He has put a lot of time and energy into the various town boards and projects he has been a part of, which include not only the Board of Selectmen and Conservation Commission, but the Growth & Development Committee, where he serves as a representative to the South Shore Coalition and Suburban Coalition. His wife Alison and their children, Katie, 14, and Peter, 11, will be glad to have him a little less busy.

"I have been dropping hints about this for months, but wanted to make a formal announcement before nomination papers became available," he said.

Callahan said there is no particular issue that has driven his decision, adding he will stay active and vocal in town. He plans to work to attain a fair and comprehensive wastewater policy for all of the town., and continue to make sure the Master Plan he and others "have worked very hard to bring into being, is fully implemented," which was one of the goals he had set for himself in 2001, when running for reelection. He said there are a number of big issues coming up and, as always, he urges his successor to "jump right in and not be afraid to upset the apple cart a bit."

Callahan has served on the Board of Selectmen for six years and said he is "grateful for the opportunity to have served the town," adding he is very thankful for the votes and many appreciative words of the citizens of Cohasset over the years. He also said he has enjoyed serving alongside other selectmen during his time on the board.

"It has been my particular pleasure to serve with Ronnie McMorris, Merle Brown, Fred Koed, Mike Sullivan, Nan Roth, and Diane Sullivan on the board over the last six years, and to have worked with whom I believe to be an excellent Town Manager, Mark Haddad," he said.

Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris said she and Callahan both served on the Conservation Commission together, and have been friends for years. She said while they didn't always have the same opinions, it's healthy for a town to have different viewpoints on its boards.

"He's always been very outspoken, and has been a strong advocate for environmental issues," she said.

Although they always haven't seen eye to eye on issues, Selectman Fred Koed said Callahan has been a very dedicated board member.

"I find him to be very straightforward and I think the board will miss him," Koed said. " I think he'll get a well deserved rest."

Town Manager Mark Haddad said he will miss Callahan's voice on the board.

"I think Tom's been an excellent member of the Board of Selectmen. He's been a good sounding board for me," said Haddad, adding not only does he consider Callahan one of his bosses, he considers him a friend. He said the work Callahan has done for the town, including his role as "one of the driving forces behind the Master Plan," has been invaluable.

"I was very disappointed when I heard he wasn't running for reelection. I wish him the best of luck," Haddad said.

Nomination papers for the Annual Town Election, which will take place Saturday, April 3 will be available Monday, Jan. 5 at the Town Clerk's office. The last day to submit nomination papers is Thursday, Feb. 12.

Voice of Town Meeting, father of sailing club dies

Herb Towle passes away

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Herb Towle in November 2002.

Cohasset Town Meetings have lost one of their most vocal supporters. Herbert R. Towle, 85, who passed away Christmas Eve, had attended Town Meeting for upwards of 60 years and voiced his views on a range of subjects.

"I've always put my two cents worth in," Towle said in a November 2002 interview. "I've never been afraid to voice my opinion."

On a par with Town Meeting was Towle's love for the Cohasset Sailing Club. He was proud of the role he played in founding the organization back in 1960.

To Towle seeing the club benefit more than 10,000 children over the years was a dream come true.

He got involved when his children were youngsters. "It was something I wanted to do," he said. "I had four children that I wanted to be able to learn to sail — I wanted all kids to be able to learn to sail."

Towle's support in the renovation of the Lightkeepers Residence in the early 90s was also invaluable. In recognition of his efforts, Towle was honored, along with Herb Jason, who helped refurbish Minot's Light Replica, on "Herb Day" in May 1996.

"When the Lightkeepers' house was in danger of demolition, there was only one logical person to ask for help: Herb Towle," recalls Joe McElroy, who spearheaded the renovation effort. McElroy said Towle's efforts at overcoming the odds to launch the sailing club had become legendary.

"In 1990, Herb opened up the sailing club after it had shut down for the season so that a disparate group of about 17 residents could meet to develop a plan to save the remaining Lightkeepers house," McElroy said. "At 70 years old, Herb's contagious 'can-do' attitude prevailed and all 17 attendees joined what was to become the Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation."

McElroy said no job was too big or small for Towle to tackle.

"Whether it was using his electrical skills or approaching his myriad friends for financial support – he did whatever was necessary," McElroy said.

Towle was born on Border Street on Feb. 27, 1918. He graduated from Cohasset High in 1936 and attended Wentworth Institute of Technology. He lived in Cohasset his entire life except during World War II when he served as a First Class Petty officer on board the USS Bunker Hill, an aircraft carrier.

Katherine Stanton of Clay Spring Road, who is an old and dear friend of Towle's, said there was no one more Cohasset than Towle.

"He did so much for the town as well as being at times its conscience," she said. "Herb always put the Town's wellbeing at the forefront, whether it was officially or as a private citizen. He was a true Cohasset gentleman."

Towle's daily drives around Cohasset to check up on his many friends and waterfront sites continued until the day of his death.

"In recent years health problems plagued him," McElroy said. "But Herb could still be seen each day checking on his accomplishments and then going to Sandy Beach to sit in his truck and watch the ocean he loved so much."

Although Towle could be counted on to speak at Town Meeting, he was always right to the point.

"I'll put my opinion on anything," Towle said. "But it has to be something worth saying. When I worked as an electrical engineer in Boston and salesmen would come into my office, I would tell them 'Be seated, be brief and be gone.' It was very effective."

For Towle's obituary see page16.

Year in Review

A year of sewer, streetscapes, senior housing and the train

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

As Cohasset says goodbye to 2003 and ushers in a new year, it's a good time to reflect upon the events of the past 12 months. It was a year of streetscapes, burying wires, and "bump-outs," for the Village. It was a year for moving forward as the Greenbush line finally got the green light.

It was a year of senior-housing public hearings as the Avalon, Cedarmere, and Cook Estate developments worked to push their projects through the permitting process. It was also a year to remember for the Zoning Board as it halted the construction of 3 Jerusalem Lane in its tracks.

It was a year of budget cuts, with the town receiving dramatic reductions in local and state aid. It was also a year of questions, as two police officers put on paid administrative leave, opened the door to a host of complications, causing the department to come under scrutiny.

So, here's a look back with text, quotes, and photos from stories that appeared in The Cohasset Mariner in 2003. But make no mistake, as exciting as 2003 was, we're sure 2004 has a lot in store for Cohasset. Here at the Mariner, we promise to be there covering the news and bringing you the features and photos you've come to expect.

Jan. 9

Fernway, a small cul de sac off Red Gate Lane, housed a sea of fire engines, ambulances and police cars Dec. 31 as the two-alarm fire raged, lighting up the dark sky. Firefighters from Cohasset, Hull, Hingham and Scituate worked to contain the blaze that had started in the garage of the McAuliffe home at #34 Fernway.

After narrowly losing to two incumbent selectmen in the last election, Roger Hill is ready to give town politics another try. Hill collected his nomination papers for the upcoming April 5 election in which one seat on the Board of Selectmen will be up for grabs.

Gerard "Gerry" Conte retires from the Cohasset Post Office after 38 years, two months and one day on the job.

Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, and Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, sounded the alarm before the Board of Selectmen, telling them to prepare for a 10 to 20 percent cut in local aid and revenue from the state lottery.

Jan.16

The ZBA issued a ruling that could have reverberations even the oft-litigious Cohasset isn't accustomed to, by halting construction of a million-dollar plus mansion at 3 Jerusalem Lane. The ZBA ruled the building inspector erred in issuing a building permit to homeowner Phil Ayer even though the structure apparently meets all height and setback requirements.

Ed Goff of Ledgewood Drive suggests renaming the Deer Hill School to the William Ripley School after the long-time superintendent, teacher, and coach.

Rachel McElroy receives the Gold Award, the most prestigious award given in Girl Scouts and an achievement reached by only 6 percent of scouts nationwide.

The Sewer Commission denies the application of Jerusalem Road Estates, a proposed 25-home subdivision, to hook up to the Hull Treatment Plant even though the developer already negotiated with Hull to purchase the sewer capacity. The developer plans to go to court.

Town Manager Mark Haddad asks the schools to live with a 4 percent increase or about $434,000 over last year.

Jan. 23

Burying utility wires is the subject of a special election Saturday. While most residents seem to agree that burying the wires now, in conjunction with other planned improvements for the downtown area, could indeed be a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity, they are divided on whether the project is financially sensible.

Chairman Stuart Ivimey tells the Community Preservation Committee that Peter Roy of Margin Street is interested in selling the Mill River Marine Railway boatyard off Border Street to the town.

The Community Preservation Committee is cool to a proposed $800,000 rails-to-trails project that would involve widening the Greenbush rail bed to accommodate a biking-walking trail.

The Growth and Development Committee is drafting an article for the spring Town Meeting aimed at giving amnesty to residents who illegally rent out apartments, allowing them to apply for a comprehensive permit if they agree to keep the apartments affordable.

New library is a gem

The new Paul Pratt Memorial Library opened its doors in March to rave reviews.

Total cost of project was $3.9 million and was paid for through a $1.5 million state grant; $1.1 million in private donations; $700,000 from the sale of Pratt building; $600,000 from town.

Patience Towle, chairman of the Board of Library Trustees, couldn't stop smiling as she welcomed everyone into the renovated building that housed the former Osgood School during the open house March 2.

"This is so exciting," said an energized Towle, as citizens of all ages poured through the front door.

Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan kicked off a brief ceremony that day during which he praised the community spirit that brought the new library to fruition.

"At a time when we're dealing with difficult challenges both fiscally and politically, it's nice to be participating in something so positive and uplifting," he said.

Deborah Hill Bornheimer of the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners — that awarded a $1.5 million state grant for the project — said the new library is "what dreams are made of."

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, said the town should take great pride in its new library.

"It's is a gathering place for the community and speaks volumes for the town of Cohasset," he said.

Selectmen scrutinize a plan to pay for the creation of two moderate income senior housing apartments in the basement of the old Paul Pratt Library building, soon to be the new home of the historical society, through the Community Preservation Fund.

A four-hour Zoning Bard of Appeals meeting results in no new decisions on 3 Jerusalem Lane. The ZBA tabled further debate until May 19.

Citizens at the Annual Town Meeting on Saturday will vote on everything from a $350,000 general override to a $60,000 school bus to an $800,000 project to improve the town's police and fire station. They'll also decide on a few zoning amendments and even vote on expanding the town's smoking bylaw to include workplaces and outdoor patios and restaurants.

In a show of school spirit, a dozen or so Cohasset High School boys have signed up to compete in the first-ever "Mr. Skipper" contest that will help offset the cost of the prom.

The Water Commission and Planning Board presented the strongest argument yet for denying AvalonBay Estates a comprehensive permit, saying wastewater from the developer's proposed 200-unit apartment complex off Route 3A would dump into the Lily Pond watershed and threaten the town's drinking water.

Police Officer Jeffrey Treanor conducts the free service of proper installation of child safety restraints in motor vehicles.

The Zoning Board of Appeals invites residents to comment on the proposed AvalonBay apartment complex at a televised meeting at Town Hall.

The South Shore Chamber of Commerce commissions an opinion poll on Greenbush that finds two-thirds of residents in the Greenbush corridor want the train.

Voters will decide on a $350,000 override and a three-way race for the Board of Selectmen in Saturday's election.

Town Meeting voters approve expanding the Highway Business District 200 feet behind Cohasset Plaza to make way for future retail space.

Runners in Saturday's Road Race by the Sea will be making a contribution to eradicate polio, as the Cohasset Rotary will donate a significant amount of this year's proceeds to the fight against the crippling disease.

April 10

Bad weather didn't stop voters from heading to the polls on Saturday where they approved a $350,000 general override and reelected Michael Sullivan to the Board of Selectmen. Almost half, or 47 percent of the town's registered voters cast ballots.

Residents tell the Zoning Board of Appeals it should deny AvalonBay a comprehensive permit for a 200-unit apartment complex off Route 3A. The greatest concern was the Water Commission's belief that Avalon's wastewater system would pollute the town's water supply.

Selectmen consider reprioritizing the entire village revitalization project after a two-plus hour meeting with representatives from the Waterfield Design Group and village merchants.

The School Committee puts to rest any discussion on revisiting grade realignment, stating grade 3 will move up to Osgood and grade 6 to the middle school in September 2004.

Middle-high school neighbors implore the School Committee to take their concerns about light pollution at the site under consideration, saying the light will have an adverse effect on their quality of life.

April 24

The historic Independence Building on South Main Street is back on the market – it has a storied history, reflected in part by two jail cells that are still housed on its first floor. Built in 1890, the building has served as a fire station, police station, gown museum, a law office, teen center, and flower shop.

Residents from around Cohasset Harbor flooded the Zoning Board of Appeals meeting to voice their opposition to a new parking plan for the Olde Salt House on Border Street.

'Bump-outs' get bumped; brick gets tossed for downtown revitalization

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

There were many proposed changes for the Village streetscape this year, and who knew increasing the width of a sidewalk could have such an impact on a town? While the majority was eventually heard, and the idea was canned, for a short time, a distinct line was drawn in town between those for and against the infamous "bump-outs."

In June, Selectmen voted to accept a plan drawn by the Waterfield Design Group, which would incorporate an underground wire system in Cohasset Village. At that point, the proposal was contingent on the town's receiving $200,000 in private funding, and alternate bids for brick sidewalks were going to be looked into.

As plans began to move along, bump-outs — extended portions of sidewalk that would allow a pedestrian more visibility beyond parked cars while still standing on the sidewalk — were added as a safety feature to the plans for the downtown area. Painted lines were applied to the streets to give residents a better idea of what the bump-outs would look like, and Town Manager Mark Haddad was asked by Selectmen to temporarily place sandbags along their perimeters to give those driving a sense of how the road could change. However, the plan soon changed from sandbags to traffic delineators — dubbed flappers — that bounce back when hit.

When residents saw the downtown area complete with flappers, it gave a better picture of what the streetscape might look like and many were not in favor. Residents and merchants came to Selectmen's meetings in opposition of the bump-outs and said it would take away the charm and character of the village, not to mention the fact that they expected the bump-outs to make the already narrow road even more narrow. From there, Selectmen began discussing whether the bump-outs should be decided by a Town Meeting vote.

But rather than prolong the decision until November, the board took a cue from the town, decided the controversy had gone on long enough, and in mid-June voted 3-1 to eliminate the bump-outs from the Village streetscape plans.

With bump-outs no longer an issue, alternate plans for a streetscape began to take shape, and the town began discussing materials for the streetscape. The two most popular options were colored concrete or brick sidewalks. Voters had to choose to either put the wires underground and opt for concrete or leave the wires above and have brick. Because the funding was not available, brick could only be chosen if the wires were not buried.

Voters chose to go with the colored concrete, but opted not to bury the wires, which saved the town money. In light of that, new colored concrete sidewalks can be extended farther, to incorporate portions of the downtown area which would not have been revitalized otherwise. Selectmen said the project will begin this spring.

The Old Man and The Kid

The Old Man leaned his scythe against the wall and shivered. He was cold. He poked the fire until the coals flared up. Then he drew his robe close around him. He looked at his watch. It was almost midnight. Where was that Kid?

The Old Man hoped that The Kid might show up a bit early on this night of nights so that he could brief him on his duties and wish him well as he entered the unknown. There was a personal triumph to show off, too. There was The Medal.

The Medal was pinned to his sash alongside the tattered numbers 2003. He won the medal for the capture of the evil one, Saddam Hussein, who was taken on his watch. He was proud of that medal. Who knows, the year 2003 may go down in history along with 1945 and 1918.

He was fingering the medal and dreaming of greater glory to come when the door opened and The Kid walked in. He was shiny clean and his diapers shone white and the sash around his plump little body, the one that read 2004, was fresh. And so was The Kid.

"Hiya, Pops," he said with as wave of his hand. "What's new?"

"Well," said The Old Man, "we got him."

"Got who?"

"Saddam, that's who."

"Hey, nice going," said The Kid.

"They gave me this medal for it," said The Old Man proudly, displaying his award for the visitor. The Kid glanced at it briefly.

"What did you do to him? Public hanging? Firing squad?"

"Not exactly. He's still in custody. You'll have to decide what to do with him."

"That's easy. We'll just shoot him. Next?"

"Hold on. If we just shoot him out of hand we might get the world down on us. If we turn him over to the Iraqis, they might do something we don't like. If we turn him over to the world court, they may set him free."

"Why do we kids always get the difficult parts? I thought the hardest thing I had to do was to get Ben and J-Lo back to the altar."

"You'll still have to do that, too," said The Old Man, "and you'll have to catch Osama bin Laden."

"Isn't he the guy who crashed the planes into the towers? That was two or three years ago. And you haven't caught him yet?"

"Well, we have a good idea where he is."

"That's not catching him. I guess that's something else I'll have to do for myself. What else have you got for me?"

"It's an election year."

"That should be easy. They tell me George Bush is a shoo in."

"Yeah. That's what they told Tom Dewey, too. Besides if Bush wins then Alec Baldwin will have to leave the country again. And if Bush loses Rush Limbaugh might have to go back on the pills."

"I'll see what I can do," said The Kid, who didn't sound so confident anymore. "What else?"

"Well, there's that mad cow they found out in Washington. That could do for the meat industry what 9/11 did for the airlines. And there's the matter of gay men marrying gay men. That's up in the air, at least it is in Massachusetts. And then there's . . ."

Say, Pops," The Kid interrupted him. "Lemme take another look at that medal. I wonder if they got one for me."

"I'm sure they have," said The Old Man, "but first you have to earn it."

Train meeting Jan. 13

The MBTA will conduct a meeting on the Cohasset Roundhouse and Rocky Lane grade separator at 9:30 a.m., Tuesday, Jan. 13 at Cohasset Town Hall. The purpose of the session is for the MBTA to present the current design proposals for these parts of the Greenbush Railroad Project and discuss their potential impact to cultural resources. Town officials and members of the public will have the opportunity to comment on the proposed designs. The Cohasset Roundhouse once stood in the vicinity of the Town Parking Lot.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Police officers need answers

TO THE EDITOR:

How truly pathetic. For over two months now, the situation regarding the Police department has been dragging on, and the best the Selectmen can come up with is unspecified allegations of misconduct.

The policemen involved in this matter, as well as the residents of the town, deserve better. If every board or town official were to be suspended based on "allegations" of misconduct, the entire town would grind to a halt.

The two police officers deserve to know what these allegations are. I would not allow any employer to treat me this way, and I am sure that the Selectmen, the Town Manager, and the Chief wouldn't tolerate such mistreatment either. To say that this is character assassination is an understatement at best. Should these allegations prove unfounded, and the two policemen involved re-instated, they would be rendered ineffective by the way this whole sad affair has been mishandled.

That the town is paying $5,000.00 to investigate these allegations only adds to the impression that this is a fishing expedition. Doesn't the DA's office do these kinds of things at no cost to the town?

The Selectmen, Town Manager, and Chief of Police should do the right thing and let these individuals know what these allegations are. The taxpayers who are going to foot the bill for this fiasco, should demand this of the town officials, after all, we are the ones who will be paying the bill for the lawsuits sure to result from such ineptitude.

Village merchants deserve our support

TO THE EDITOR:

Let there be many more "Cohasset Village Holidays." On Saturday, Dec. 13, and Sunday, Dec. 14, the Village merchants jump started this holiday season with bell ringers, a brass ensemble and carolers all invited to perform on pedestrian only South Main Street in front of the shops. I was told Lisa Lynch of Ports suggested this celebration and how wonderfully, enthusiastic all the merchants were by joining in the fun.

A dance for the youngsters was held at the Red Lion on Friday, Dec. 12, as part of the festivities. People of my vintage especially enjoyed the several winery representatives who set up complimentary wine tastings at Village Wine and Spirits. I must make mention of Tina Watson's great Swedish meatballs served at Cohasset Hardware. All the Merchants deserve our thanks and our support by shopping at the Village Stores.

Town employees deserve better

TO THE EDITOR:

If it is true, as has been reported in the Mariner, that:

1) Two town employees have been placed on administrative leave with no formal notification to them for the reason(s) for such action; and

2) The town has hired a private detective who is delving into matters beyond the still-unnamed charge(s), then my comment, as a citizen of this community, is simply this:

No employee of the Town of Cohasset should be subjected to such treatment. Our Board of Selectman — rather than condoning such action which is wasting our tax dollars, subjecting the town to legal liability, demoralizing town employees, and raising questions of conflict of interest among our citizenry — must end this Star Chamber proceeding forthwith.

Although they don't have a crystal ball, members of the school department speculate AvalonBay may attract more schoolchildren than developers estimate.

A recent report compiled by a subcommittee of the School Committee said the proposed 200-unit apartment complex off Rte. 3A may draw as many as 50 school-age children. The project could also have an indirect effect as "empty nesters" may look to the apartments as a way to downsize, leaving Cohasset single family homes open for occupancy by families with children.

It might save the MBTA a few headaches if it would agree to use quadrant gates along the Greenbush corridor. Cohasset selectmen have asked the MBTA and its contractor, Cashman-Balfour Beatty, to stop submitting design documents showing standard grade crossing treatment with median barriers and no quadrant gates.

In a 4-1 vote, the Board of Selectmen decided Tuesday to accept the plan for an underground-wire system in Cohasset Village. The proposal is contingent on receiving $200,000 in private funding, and will require looking at alternate bids for brick sidewalks (the plan calls for concrete).

The Board of Selectmen have decided to move forward with plans drawn by the Waterfield Group, for an underground-wiring system in the Village that would also include new sidewalks incorporating bump-outs at the crosswalks.

While it's unclear if AvalonBay's new plans for wastewater disposal — which will include a leaching field under Title 5 — will pass muster with state and local officials, one thing is for sure, the Zoning Board of Appeals is going to learn a lot about septic systems in the process.

July 10

Selectmen have asked Town Manager Mark Haddad to go forward with plans to temporarily place sandbags along the perimeter of the proposed bump-outs. However, the plans were bumped in favor of installing traffic delineators — dubbed flappers — that bounce back when hit.

The Cohasset Historical Commission is working on drafting a "Demolition Delay" bylaw, which can put plans to demolish a structure on hold for six months to allow time to consider whether a building can be restored and see what other alternatives to demolition are available.

Selectmen aren't happy the MBTA has apparently ignored letters from Town Hall asking the design plans for Greenbush grade crossings be put on hold until the quad-gate issue is resolved. Greenbush towns want the MBTA to use quad gates rather than traditional grade crossings that would necessitate installing median barriers, which the towns say are unsightly and would damage the character of the communities.

Roughly one week after receiving his college degree, former "Garage kid" Tony Bramblett came on board as the development coordinator for the Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum.

It may be up to voters at Town Meeting to decide if controversial "bump-outs" should be an added safety feature in the $1.8 million Village Revitalization Project. With many residents coming to meetings in opposition of the streetscape features, Selectmen began discussing whether the issue should be decided by the town.

Selectmen have decided the controversy has gone on long enough and the bump-outs saga is over. In a 3-1 vote Tuesday, the bump-outs met their fate, and will no longer be a feature of the village plans.

Among a sea of crisp white boats, the antiquated "Elizabeth Tilley" made a grand entrance as she glided into Cohasset Harbor on the first stop of her maiden voyage Monday. Plans continue to move forward for Cedarmere and developers say the project is designed to look as if it had always been there.

Cohasset selectmen are urging Gov. Mitt Romney to make a final decision on whether the Greenbush Line will become a reality. In a letter to the governor, Town Manager Mark Haddad stated the "Board of Selectmen is very concerned with the delay in the decision to either move forward or abandon the project," and asked Romney to make a final decision as soon as possible.

Water runoff and increased traffic were at the top of the list of issues concerning abutters to the Cedarmere project. About 30 concerned citizens packed an upstairs meeting room at Town Hall last week for the Planning Board hearing. Due to the size of the crowd, the meeting had to be moved into a larger room in the basement.

While the Planning Board continues to give Cedarmere high marks, some questions about the development's affordable units have surfaced. Twenty-nine affordable units would be in a separate building closer to Rte. 3A and by having them separate and not invisibly integrated throughout the project, it is not clear whether the units would qualify under the state's Local Initiative Project.

The Water Commission is adamant the Zoning Board of Appeals doesn't have enough detail on how an on-site treatment system would work on the proposed Avalon site, and has urged the board to deny the permit. The Water Commission is taking a zero-tolerance stance on the issue because the Avalon site, which is on the west side of Rte. 3A, ultimately drains to Lily Pond, the town's drinking water supply.

When it comes to the Cohasset housing market — 1997 seems like the Dark Ages. That year only one home sold for more than $1 million in Cohasset. Because the Red Lion Inn is encroaching on the roadway, installing a fence would further restrict it.

AvalonBay approved and appealed

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

After a year-long public hearing, the Zoning Board of Appeals approved with conditions the controversial 200-unit AvalonBay Estates project off Route 3A in October.

The ZBA issued AvalonBay a comprehensive permit under Chapter 40B the more than 30-year-old state law that allows developers to skirt local zoning regulations in exchange for providing affordable housing in municipalities that fall below the 10 percent "affordability" threshold.

The 16-page decision includes 31conditions that the developer must meet for the project to go forward including obtaining a ground-water discharge permit from the state Department of Environmental Protection and paying for a peer review by the town of the groundwater discharge permit process.

But DEP oversight and peer review didn't stop the Water Commission from appealing the ZBA decision to state land court on the basis the project's septic system would negatively impact Lily Pond, the town's water supply.

Here are some more highlights of the ZBA decision:

- Minimizing impact on the schools, all units will be one- or two-bedroom, there will be no three-bedroom units;
- 70 percent of the affordable units will be local preference for Cohasset residents, parents or children of Cohasset residents, or employees of the town;
- Affordable units must remain so for 30 years and conversion to condominiums is prohibited for at least 30 years;
- Avalon must adhere to a comprehensive storm-water management plan detailed in the decision, as well as a landscaping plan.

The most talked about address: 3 Jerusalem Lane

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The Zoning Board of Appeals decision last August to issue a special permit that essentially says the house at 3 Jerusalem Lane that about triples its predecessor on the small cul de sac is OK came after months of controversy.

Homeowner Phil Ayer has contended the ZBA violated his civil rights by singling him out when it required him to obtain a special permit when other houses built under similar circumstances were not required to do so.

After a lengthy public hearing, the board determined the house is not a danger to health and safety, and is not as obtrusive to the Jerusalem Lane neighborhood as it first appeared. Therefore, it is not substantially more detrimental to the neighborhood, the standard in the bylaw used for determining whether a special permit should be granted.

"It's a big house and I wish it had not been so big," Chairman Woody Chittick said in August. "But is it bigger by far than anything else in the neighborhood? No."

From plans to public hearings, Cedarmere makes waves

Year in Review

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

This summer, the town was introduced to Cedarmere, a 105-unit senior housing project, slated to be built on 41-acres of land situated off Beechwood Street on the former Hayes Estate. Where the drafted plans would take developers David and Kelli Calhoun of Sheldon Road and Tom Ragno of Lexington for the second half of the year, the three and their consultants could never have imagined. After numerous public hearings filled with concerned abutters to the project, and many hours of presenting information to various town boards, the public hearing process finally came to a close on Dec. 15.

The project would be the first built under the town's new Senior Overlay District bylaw and its plans have caused much commotion in the short time they have been public. Some of the first issues discussed throughout the public hearing phase were from abutters who worried a development as dense as Cedarmere, which would have 105-units, would affect the quality of life for the area and not fit in with the way the neighborhood currently is.

The Planning Board conducted many late-night meetings which had to be held in the downstairs meeting room at Town Hall, because of the size of the crowds. Concerned abutters packed the meetings, where issues such as traffic, surface water drainage, and septic systems were the main topics of discussion. During the public hearing process, the issue of affordability came up many times, including not only who would be able to afford to live in a development like Cedarmere, but whether the affordable units, which are located in a separate building on site, would "count" toward the town's affordable housing stock without being invisibly integrated into the rest of the development.

Another obstacle developers faced was how to deal with wastewater treatment. While developers were confident Cedarmere would be granted permission to hook up to the town sewer, even though AvalonBay was previously told there was not enough capacity for it's development, and Cedarmere is located outside the central sewer district, Cedarmere was confident studies done by their engineering consultant could prove capacity does exist. However, the Sewer Commission did not agree with the findings of Cedarmere's consultant and denied their project sewer access.

Because developers have said their project is designed around its having a sewer connection, their plans could change from what was originally proposed to plans that would support an on-site wastewater treatment system, if a sewer connection cannot be obtained. The developers have filed an appeal to the Sewer Commission's decision and are awaiting a verdict. They believe the courts will back them up and overturn the Sewer Commission's decision.

But with or without a sewer connection, the project still might not move forward if the Board of Selectmen doesn't approve the affordable portion of the development. Because the developers are filing their affordable building under the Local Initiative Program, the Board of Selectmen, as the highest elected officials in town, has to endorse the project and sign the developer's application, which will allow it to then move forward to the Department of Housing and Community Development for ultimate approval. Only through DHCD approval can a town "count" a project's affordable units toward it's affordable housing stock.

While developers thought the Planning Board, who has guided it through the entire public hearing process, would have the final say on their project, the Selectmen think their board should have more involvement in the approval process, and won't feel comfortable approving the affordable portion of the project when there are still many questions to be answered surrounding the project as a whole, namely how it will deal with wastewater.

A meeting with the Planning Board is scheduled for Jan. 14, and it's expected the board will

Members of the Board of Health will not give up on their quest to make sure Cohasset schools offer the healthiest lunch choices possible. While members of the School Department said students do not have a problem with obesity, which can be evidenced by a walk down the halls, the Board of Health said nutrition cannot be measured by the way a student looks.

Dozens of bargain hunters flocked to the Cohasset Consignment Shop in Tedeschi Plaza for it's "grand opening," to celebrate not only its 50th year, but its reopening with a new management team and a few other changes.

School utilities and transportation are likely to take center stage at the Nov. 17 Special Town Meeting when the School Department is expected to ask the town for roughly $355,000. The schools will seek $260,000 to help cover the rising costs for utilities, which dramatically increased last year and are expected to be high again this year.

Building a house or an addition may soon be news worthy of publication in the local paper. If voters at the Nov. 17 Special Town Meeting say OK, any home improvements, excluding interior and re-roofing projects would have to be printed for townspeople to see.

The MBTA has dug its heels into the ground over the type of grade-crossing treatments along the Greenbush corridor. In an extensive letter to the Army Corps of Engineers, MBTA Director of Environmental Affairs Andrew Brennan stated in no uncertain terms that the safety of stand-alone, four quad gates has not been proven and comparisons to other areas that use the technology aren't valid.

Selectmen conducted a public forum on the Cook Estate project Tuesday to answer questions and hear citizens' concerns. Ensuring the project is truly affordable surfaced as a key issue at the forum.

The Zoning Board of Appeals grappled with questions of affordability Saturday during a special deliberation session on the AvalonBay project at Town Hall. Chairman Woody Chittick explained the issue of whether Avalon sets aside 20 or 25 percent of its 200 apartments for affordable housing could hinge on what the ZBA feels the town's goals are for its citizens who work as firefighters or teachers, for example.

Supt. Edward Malvey has announced his intention to retire, effective in the summer of 2004, after six years in the Cohasset school system.

Officials aren't talking about an apparent shakeup at the Cohasset Police Department that is bound to stir the rumor mill around town. Anonymous callers to the Mariner said two officers were fired, which Town Manager Mark Haddad adamantly denies. It has been reported that Sgt. William Quigley and Officer James McLean have been put on paid administrative leave, although Haddad declined to comment citing privacy and personnel issues.

Appraiser Marly Rabstenek returns home to Cohasset as one of five appraisers who will lend their services to the South Shore Art Center Roadshow Antiques Appraisal Day.

Lance Norris of Norfolk Road is used to the limelight and has met a lot of famous people through his radio career. But even the veteran actor of several small movie roles and work in TV commercials admits it was a thrill to work with Clint Eastwood during the filming of "Mystic River."

Oct. 30

Town officials are still mum on why two police officers are out on paid administrative leave, one of whom is commander of the 4 p.m. -midnight shift and has a high profile in town. Town Manager Mark Haddad said Sgt. William Quigley and Officer James McLean, who are both officers in the police union, are not under any disciplinary action right now. Haddad said he is working with town counsel on the matter that might not be resolved for a month. He said the officers have not been charged with anything and only know that they are on paid leave.

The Zoning Board of Appeals voted unanimously to grant AvalonBay a comprehensive permit for its 200-unit apartment complex, giving them the go-ahead to build the project on 62 acres on the west side of Route 3A, pending the expected appeals.

Members of the Cedarmere development team say they

BHRC is sponsored and underwritten by Fleet Bank as a public service for readers of the Mariner. It is written by Bob Katzen who has covered the legislature for more than 25 years and has been providing this feature to newspapers since 1975.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week. This week, BHRC reports local senators' roll call attendance records for the entire 2003 session.

The Senate has held 416 roll call votes. BHRC tabulates the number of roll calls on which each senator was present and voting and then calculates that number as a percentage of the total roll call votes held. That percentage is the number commonly referred to as the roll call attendance record. Only nine of the state's 40 senators have a 100 percent roll call attendance record.

The top five worst roll call attendance records belong to Sen. Susan Fargo (D-Lincoln) who missed 113 roll calls resulting in a 72.8 percent roll call attendance record; Sen. Andrea Nuciforo (D-Pittsfield) who missed 95 roll calls (77.1 percent roll call attendance record); Sen. Marian Walsh (D-West Roxbury) who missed 48 roll calls (88.4 percent roll call attendance record); Sen. Robert Antonioni (D-Leominster) who missed 37 roll calls (91.1 percent roll call attendance record) and Sen. Frederick Berry (D-Peabody) who missed 32 roll calls (92.3 percent roll call attendance record).

LOCAL SENATORS' ATTENDANCE RECORDS

The percentage listed next to the senator's name is the percentage of roll call votes for which the senator was present and voting. The number in parentheses represents the number of roll calls the senator missed.

SOCCER AND HEAD INJURIES- Legislation that was recently drafted and has not yet been heard by a committee would prohibit soccer players at public schools and public and private colleges from hitting the ball with their heads. Sponsor Bob Edwards, a member of the Massachusetts Brain Injury Association, says the measure is designed to reduce brain injuries, save lives and cut millions of dollars in health care costs. The proposal imposes a $100 fine on an offending player's school, distributes the funds to health facilities that work with brain injuries and creates a Massachusetts Commission on Sports-related Injuries. Edwards cites studies indicating that five percent of soccer players nationwide sustain brain injuries as a result of head-to-head contact, falls or being struck on the head by a ball. He notes that hitting the ball with the head is the riskiest activity because when done repeatedly it can cause a concussion. Critics say that "heading the ball" is an integral part of soccer and note that requiring players to wear headbands padded with foam is a potential solution. They argue that other sports including football pose a bigger danger to players.

PROPERTY TAX BILLS- Secretary of State William Galvin signed a bill that gives cities and towns until January 30, 2004 rather than December 31, 2003 to mail their third quarter property tax bills. Galvin is serving as acting governor while Gov. Romney and Lt. Governor Healey are out of state. Romney filed the bill and says the extension would give taxpayers more time to pay their bills and grant communities additional time to set their tax rates and have them approved by the Department of Revenue.

NOTARIES PUBLIC- Gov. Romney issued an executive order tightening regulations on the state's 125,000 notaries public. The governor says these new standards would help prevent document fraud, crack down on imposters and curb identity theft. Provisions include prohibiting the notarizing of a document unless the person is in the notary's presence and identified by the notary through satisfactory evidence; requiring notaries to keep a journal of their official acts; and prohibiting notaries from advertising themselves as "notarios." Romney notes that "notario" in Spanish means "lawyer" and says the state has fielded many complaints from victims who respond to this misleading advertising and believe that these notaries are lawyers.

CORRECTIONS COMMISSIONER'S RETIREMENT PAY- The State Retirement Board rejected a bid by retiring Correction Commissioner Michael Maloney to place his job in the retirement category of corrections officers and other prison personnel who regularly come fact-to-face with inmates. The change would have doubled Maloney's annual pension from $41,000 to $82,000. Maloney submitted a letter to the board indicating that he is sometimes in direct contact with prisoners during prison inspections and has even received death threats from inmates. The board voted 5-0 to deny the change and noted that the category is clearly not designed for higher-level staff jobs with minimal inmate contact.

Officers are worried if they make a misstep they, too, might be out the door. What the arresting officer described at the time as a "minor altercation" outside the American Legion Hall on Summer Street on a Saturday night in October involving the police chief's son, continues to have major reverberations at the Cohasset Police Department. After conducting an investigation, the Norfolk County District Attorney's Office has removed the Cohasset police prosecutor, Officer Rick Grassie, from Quincy District Court because he didn't sign a complaint involving the arrest of the police chief's son, Keith A. Jackson.

The wild turkey is one of the best comeback stories, and at no place was that more evident than in a clearing in Wompatuck State Park on Tuesday, when four wild turkeys were released in a ceremony that celebrated the 30th anniversary of wild turkey restoration in the state.

Voters pass article four at Town Meeting and approve the purchase of the Cook Estate for $4.5 million.

When construction begins on the downtown streetscape, burying the wires and adding brick sidewalks will not be among the improvements. Voters rejected both proposals at Monday's session of Town Meeting and gave the nod to used colored concrete on the walkways.

Hingham, Hull and Cohasset are working together to preserve the Weir River Estuary, which features more than 100 species of birds and rare volcanic and glacial geology, through a public-private partnership.

Three men including the police chief's son are scheduled to be back in court Dec. 2 for a pretrial conference on charges they broke the handicapped railing at the American Legion post on Summer Street during an alleged fight in October. Keith A. Jackson, 24, and Jerry Cogill, 25, both of Cohasset, and Adam Thibault, 22 of Hingham were arraigned on the charge of malicious destruction of property valued over $250 before Judge Mark Coven at Quincy District Court on

Police story made headlines

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A story that will likely continue to make headlines in the New Year is the ongoing saga at the Cohasset Police Department. Two officers remain on paid administrative leave pending the outcome of an investigation on their fitness for duty that includes a private investigator hired by the town.

Town Manager Mark Haddad said this week he expects the matter to be resolved in two weeks.

Town officials have repeatedly denied the arrest of the police chief's son and issues involving the chief's son-in-law, a former police officer, have anything to do with the officers being placed on leave.

The officers, Sgt. William Quigley and patrolman James McLean, through their lawyer, Doug Louison, insist they do not know what they could be charged with.

The Board of Selectmen have asked the town for patience in the ongoing investigation.

And Sgt. Quigley, speaking as president of the police union, has asked for an independent study of how the police department is being run.

Stay tuned.

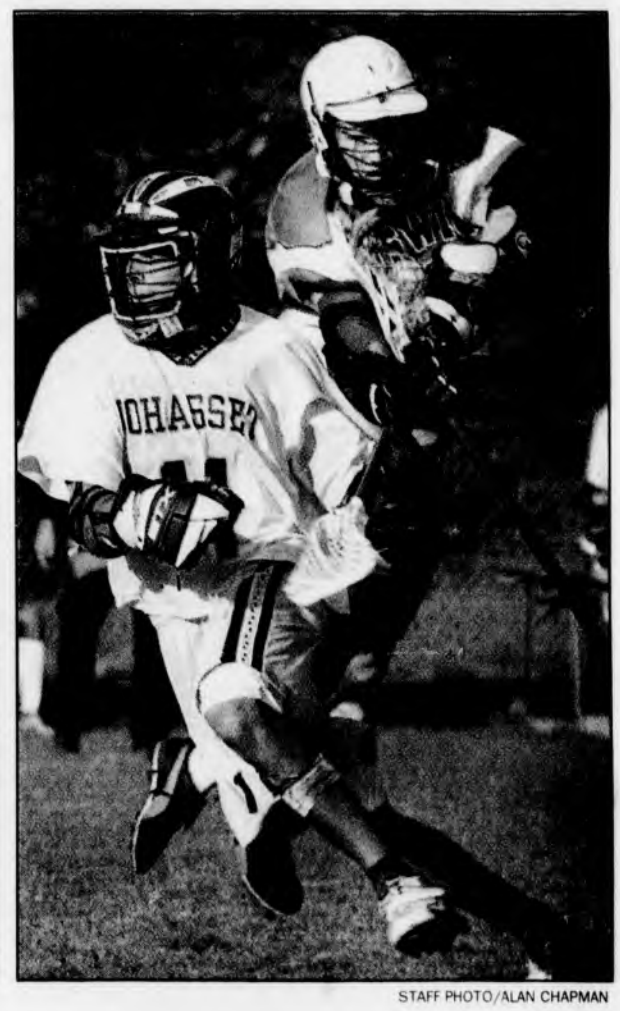
Sports Year in Review



There have been many highlights in the arenas of athletic competition in Cohasset in 2003, among them: (upper left) Lindsay Grossman and the CHS girls tennis team winning a state championship, (above) CHS sophomore Nancy Durkin emerging to help lead the Norwell-Cohasset gymnastics team to an 8-2 season, (upper right) Chris Bilodeau (#32) having a breakout junior season for the boys basketball team, averaging 17 points and 4.5 rebounds per game on his way to earning SSL All-Star and Mariner All-Scholastic honors, (lower left) Senior captain Maura McKenney leading the charge to a second straight postseason for the lady laxers and wrapping up her career with 118 goals, (below) senior Terry Baroudi grappled all the way the New England Wrestling Championships, where he wrapped up his career with a top eight finish, (below right) Curt Kahn and the boys lacrosse team charging all the way to the state semifinals with a program record 19-game win streak, (bottom left) Tony Truglia (seen here making one of his team leading. 100-plus tackles) and the football team going unbeaten in SSL play to earn a second SSL title in three years, (bottom right) Chris Clark (front, white shirt) and the boys soccer team putting together an outstanding 14-4 regular season.

John Durkin (left) was the main man offensively for the CHS hockey team in its second straight run to an SSL crown. The senior captain finished with a league best 22 goals and 20 assists.

After winning a Pilgrim Conference championships. and a program best 18 matches (finishing with an 18-3-1 record), the wrestling team finished second in a 21 team field at the Div. 3 South Sectionals and advanced a remarkable nine grapplers to the Div. 3 state championship in Jonathan Littauer (103 pounds), Dave Kupsc (112), Dave McKenna (119), Joe Kehoe (125), Terry Baroudi (135), Phil Strazzulla (140), Chris McKenna (145), Cosimo Cambi (189) and Matt Baroudi (215).From this group, the quartet of Littauer, Strazzulla and the Baroudi brothers all took top four placings at states to advance to All-States. Senior Terry Baroudi took second at All-States, the highest finish in a decade for Cohasset wrestler, to advance to the New England championships, and sophomore Matt took sixth to join his brother at New England's. Terry went on to finish top eight in an extremely tough class and Matt wrestled well, earning invaluable experience toward his remaining two seasons. Littauer, Chris McKenna, Strazulla and the Baroudis were named Mariner All-Scholastics, while Kehoe was named an Honorable Mention.

The hockey team won its second straight South Shore League championships and finished the regular season with a 10-6-4 under first year coach John Blake led by league leading scorers John Durkin (22 goals, 20 assists) and Matt Davis (15 goals, 19 assists), both seniors. The Skippers won one postseason game before bowing out in the second round of the state tourney. Senior defenseman Tom Anderson joined Durkin and Davis as Mariner All-Scholastics, while juniors Mike Devine and Mike Rasmussen and freshman goalie Stephan Parnell were Honorable Mentions.

A tough luck finish of 7-13 for the boys basketball team could have almost as easily been flip-flopped, as the Skippers lost several close games. The team was led by well-rounded junior swingman Chris Bilodeau (who averaged 17 points, four assists, 4.5 rebounds per game), the lone Mariner All-Scholastic selection from the team. Seniors Ian Kidder, who joined Bilodeau as a South Shore League all-star, and Ben Lynner were Mariner Honorable Mentions. The losses to graduation of Lynner, Kidder and starting point guard Jared Krupczak left some big shoes to fill this winter.

It was a disappointing season for the girls basketball team. The 2002-'03 campaign opened with high expectations, with the team returning four fourth year varsity regulars in quad-captains Maura O'Brien, Lindsay Grossman, La'Raine Langford and Heather Peraino. However, things just never came together for the Lady Skippers, who fell well short of postseason qualification. Grossman led the way offensively, averaging 11 points per game, and was the team's lone South Shore League all-star. She was joined by Langford and junior Jenn Buckley as Mariner All-Scholastic Honorable Mentions. On a brighter note, first year head coach John Levangie took this year's team into the new year with a 4-0 record.

The Scituate-Cohasset girls swim team finished sixth at the Bay Colony Conference Championships, while the boys team took eighth. Scituate senior Coral Yang, an exchange student from China, was the top point scorer on the team, and Scituate senior captain Kathryn Noonan was second. Cohasset senior captain Dave Ingber and Maran Monaco, an exchange student from Brazil, were the main contributors on the boys side, placing high in individual races all season.

The joint Norwell High-Cohasset High gymnastics team also put together a noteworthy season on the mats and various apparatus, running up an 8-2 season, the two losses coming to unbeaten Pilgrim Conference champion Hanover. The team was led by three time Mariner All-Scholastic Meredith Bixby, a CHS senior who qualified for three events at the state individual championships, as well as CHS sophomore Nancy Durkin, another Mariner All-Scholastic, and Catherine Coyne, a CHS junior.

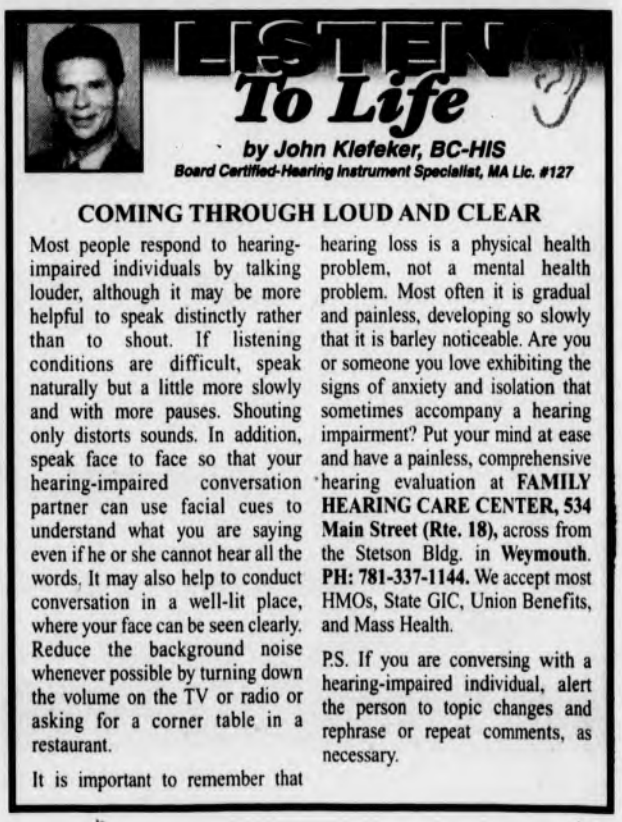
Things did not go quite the way La'Raine Langford (center) and her senior mates were hoping they would in their final season last winter, but Danielle Pinkus (#24) and mates are off to a promising 4-0 start in '03-'04.



Spring

Of course, the story of the Cohasset High sports year, never mind just the spring season, was the girls tennis team's unbeaten run to a state championship. After putting together a 16-0 regular season, the Lady Skippers bested Norwell, Hingham, Canton, and Bourne to win the Div. 2 south sectional crown, then ousted defending state champ Manchester-Essex to capture the Eastern Mass title and finally Tantasqua for the state championship. The way was led by sophomore sensation Liz Stone, who battled through injury to go 12-0 in the regular season and 4-2 in the postseason out of the number one singles spot, senior captain Lindsay Grossman (20-4, including 5-1 in postseason) and the top doubles team of Julie Shea and Courtney Caron (23-1, the lone loss coming in the postseason). All four of these girls were Mariner All-Scholastics — Grossman for the third straight time, Stone and Shea for the second— while third singles standout Holly Graham and the second doubles team of Emilie Sullivan and Corey Evans were named Honorable Mentions.

The boys lacrosse might just have been the second best sports story at Cohasset High in 2003. After opening the season with a loss to defending Div. 2 state champ Duxbury, the Skippers ripped off 19 straight wins, that run ending with an 11-6 loss to Ipswich in the Div. 3 state semifinals. The team was led by a superb senior class that included starters John Durkin, Curt Kahn, Matt Davis, Nick Spirito, Robert Hickey Evan Pestone, Ben Lynner, Tom Anderson. Many feel things might have gone better had the Skippers not lost two-time Mariner All-Scholastic Davis to a broken collarbone late in the regular season. Davis was joined on the Mariner All-Scholastic team by team leading scorer Kahn (52 goals and 32 assists to finish his career with 227 points), also a second-time selection, Durkin and Spirito, while Anderson, junior goalie Nick Murphy and sophomore Jake Previte were named Honorable Mentions.

The boys track team came back to earth somewhat, as graduation claimed the core of a team that had gone unbeaten the two previous spring season. However, there were still some noteworthy individual accomplishments, as 11 from this team qualified for the Class D meet. Here, senior co-captains Jared Krupczak and Ian Kidder enjoyed quite a day. Jared took third place in the 200 and Ian was fourth in the javelin, both qualifying for the All-State meet. The captains were also half of the All-State qualifying 4x100 relay team (along with sophomore Peter Bunstein and junior Eric Belz), which took third at the Class meet. Unfortunately, Cohasset High graduation took place the same day as All-States, and the two captains opted for the caps and gowns over extending their high school athletic careers. Krupczak, Kidder and the 4x100 team were all named Mariner All-Scholastics, while discus thrower Braun Goodson received an Honorable Mention.

The girls track team advanced eight athletes to the Class D meet. Half of this group then qualified for the All-State championship, as the 4x800 squad of Jenn Buckley, Mary Silvia, Nicole Whitney and Lisa Musto took third place at the class meet. Silvia, a sophomore, also qualified individually in the 800 with her second place finish, while Buckley just missed moving on in both the javelin and mile (0.96 seconds off the final qualifier). The 4x8 team then shattered the school record at all-states with a run of 10:03.99, good for 16th place, and Silvia was ninth in the 800. Buckley, Silvia and the 4x8 team were named Mariner All-Scholastics, while Whitney and senior La'Raine Langford (the lone athlete lost to graduation) were chosen as Honorable Mentions.

The undermanned boys tennis team, featuring the bare minimum of seven player, also made the state tourney for the second year in a row after a 9-7 regular season, including 8-4 in South Shore League play, and won one match before bowing out. Senior Dave Ingber, a three-time Mariner All-Scholastic, led the way, finishing with a 9-4 record out of the number one singles spot. Junior Tim Anton and freshman Nils Sceery were named Mariner All-Scholastic Honorable Mentions.

The girls lacrosse team snuck into the postseason with a 7-7-2 regular season, and was then ousted by Milton in the first round. Senior captain Maura McKenney led the charge to a second straight postseason for the Lady Skippers, finishing with a team best 41 goals and 15 assists to wrap up her career with 118 goals. McKenney earned her second straight Mariner All-Scholastic selection, while seniors Catherine Coyne and Julie Lordan, junior Nicole Turgiss and sophomore Lauren Strazzulla were tabbed Honorable Mentions.

The baseball program received a big shot in the arm when Al Gallotta, a year removed from retirement from Archbishop Williams as Athletic Director and an extremely successful tenure as baseball coach, took over the CHS varsity team. The team finished with a record of 7-11, but was much more competitive than it has been in recent years in the top heavy South Shore League. The Skippers started and ended the season strong, but a 12-game stretch that saw just one win killed any postseason aspirations. Sophomore Ted Straughn hit .283 and emerged as the staff pitching ace. Seniors Chris McKenna and Mike Snowdale, the team's lone SSL All-Star, were Mariner All-Scholastic Honorable Mentions.

Softball returned to Cohasset High after a seven-year hiatus, with popular field hockey coach Deb Bostwick agreeing to lead its return at the helm. The team finished with a 4-14 record, but lost just one player to graduation, senior captain Heather Peraino. She and junior shortstop Danielle Pinkus were named Mariner All-Scholastic Honorable Mentions.

Even after a disheartening 2-1 loss to Sacred Heart in the state tourney, senior captain Holly Graham found something to smile about.

Fall

The football, field hockey and both soccer teams all made it to the postseason this past fall, while the golf team came up just one win short of making it a clean sweep.

The highlight, arguably, was the football team, for the second time in three years, winning the South Shore League championship and advancing to the Super Bowl playoffs. Unfortunately, the Skippers 2003 season ended the same way as it did two years ago, with a first round loss. This time, the CHS gridders fell on a frigid night at home to Westwood, 20-7, to close out their season. The 9-2 finish, including 5-0 in SSL play, lifted the Skippers record for the last three years to 26-6 (the two postseason losses included). Seniors Stephen Davis, Mike Dooley (quarterback), Tony Truglia and Chris Bilodeau were named Mariner All-Scholastics, while 1,200-yard rusher DeWayne Morris and junior defensive end Kelvin Ferreira were named Honorable Mentions. All six of these players were SSL all-stars.

The field hockey team made it back to the playoffs for the first time since the run to the sectional semifinals in 2000. The Lady Skippers finished the regular season with a 9-8 record and were then ousted in the first round of the playoffs by higher seeded Mansfield, 5-1.Leading the way for the CHS squad were seniors Danielle Pinkus, a team co-captain who held things together on both ends of the field from her center midfield spot, and Courtney Caron, the team's leading scorer by far with 23 goals and 12 assists. Both of these girls were named Mariner All-Scholastics, while senior Rachel Doyle was named an Honorable Mention. All three girls were South Sore League all-stars.

Fueled by a strong senior class, the boys soccer team put together an outstanding 14-4 regular season under first year coach Rob Leary, and then crushed Avon in the opening round of the state tourney, 7-1. This Skippers then lost a hard luck 2-0 game to SSL rival Norwell, who would go on to win the Div. 3 South Sectional championship. Among the nine players this team loses to the caps and gowns are two-time South Shore League all-stars Chris Clark, Conor Buick and Craig Laugelle and first item all-stars Dave Santiago and Jesse Brewer. Brewer, the team's keeper, also earned All-Eastern Mass honors, and Buick, the team's sweeper, missed the honor by one spot in the league voting. Clark, the team's leading scorer each of the past two seasons (17 goals, 11 assists this season), was an All-Eastern Mass selection last year. Clark, Buick and Brewer were Mariner All-Scholastics, while Laugelle was an Honorable Mention.

After a lengthy postseason draught, the girls soccer team notched its second straight berth in the state tourney with a 10-8-1 regular season. The Lady Skippers then lost a 2-1 heartbreaker to higher seeded Sacred Heart in the opening round despite clearly outplaying the host Lady Saints throughout much of the contest. Senior captain Jenn Buckley earned her second straight Mariner All-Scholastic selection with outstanding two-way play and offensive production (team best seven goals and five assists) and senior sweeper Holly Graham joined her on our team. Both were four year regulars and two-time South Shore League all-stars. Junior Christine Lavallo was also a league all-star, as well as a Mariner All-Scholastic Honorable Mention.

Another outstanding fall was also turned in at the youth football ranks, as the Scituate-Cohasset program sent five of its six teams to league Super Bowls. The Midget Sharks and Midget StingRay teams each brought home the big trophy.

Summer

The Cohasset Swim Team won its second straight South Shore Swim League championship.

The A's win the Cohasset Youth Baseball League Major League championship, the Cohasset boys Under-The Cohasset Gunners (Conor Buick, Dave Santiago, Chris Clark, Craig Laugelle, Jesse Brewer, Andrew Wise, Jon Andrade, John Oronte, Aidan Buick, Matt O'Connell and Ben Libby) won the silver medal in 18-and-under 7x7 boys soccer competition at the Bay State Games.

The Cohasset Post 118 Legion baseball team suffered through a 4-16 regular season, but saw several talented younger players emerge to give hope for the future.

Year in Review

Thursday.

Cohasset's big win over Norwell last week has qualified the school for post-season football, and Cohasset has been asked to host the Division Five Superbowl playoffs, which could be the biggest sporting event of the year.

Dec. 4

The Sewer Commission rejected Cedarmere's second application for sewer access.

Police Chief Robert Jackson says the low number of arrests in November is not due to reduced manpower. Two veteran officers are still on paid administrative leave and another is still out sick. But several officers, who asked not to be identified, say arrests are down at the police department because officers and afraid of being second-guessed and if someone complains, they think they'll be the subjects of an investigation or forced out of their jobs.

Dec. 11

There are railroad rumblings that four-quadrant gates without median barriers may be used at some grade crossings along the Greenbush line after all.

Although winter doesn't officially begin until Dec. 21, few Cohasset residents mistook the weekend nor'easter for a late fall storm.

Come springtime, there will be at least one School Committee incumbent who will not be out on the campaign trail. Mark DeGiacomo,, who has served on the School Committee since 1998 has decided to cal it quits, leaving his three-year seat up for grabs.

Since 1997, art teacher Ann Berman has been teaching Deer Hill students to knit and has invited them to participate in making hats for the homeless, which students deliver to area shelters for the holidays. To date, Cohasset has donated more than 1,000 hats to the cause.

Dec. 18

Selectmen say the First Assistant District Attorney of Norfolk County acted inappropriately by dismissing former police prosecutor Rick Grassie from the court for not processing the paperwork following an arrest. The news came via a prepared two-page statement read by Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris to the live TV camera during the board's weekly meeting Tuesday night. But David Traub, spokesman for the DA's office said the District Attorney is the final arbiter of who prosecutes on behalf of the Commonwealth.

Emergency management officials want consumers to be aware, when it comes to dialing 9-1-1, there's a difference in the way "land lines" and cell phones send help. When calling for emergency help, land lines make it possible for the address to automatically pop up on the screen of a dispatcher, where cell phones are not as exact.

Town Manager Mark Haddad has been working on preliminary budget figures and at this early stage, the financial situation doesn't look good for fiscal year 2005.

After decades of rusting in a shed at the Beechwood Cemetery, the intricate wrought iron gates which guarded its entrance more than 100 years ago have been restored and are now standing proudly back at their post.

While Town Manager Mark Haddad said he won't ask for a Prop. 2-1/2 override this year — the School Committee said it doesn't see how the budget can be balanced without one.

The holidays are a time for giving, but the present no one wants to get this year is the flu. With the numbers of cases on the rise and news of flu deaths spreading across the nation, many Cohasset residents have been searching for a flu shot in vain, as the town has already run out.

OBITUARIES

Warren F. Hicks

Warren F. Hicks, 83, of Cohasset, died December 29 at Cohasset Knoll Nursing Facility after a long illness. Previously, he lived in New Jersey for over 30 years and in Florida for 20 years.

Mr. Hicks was born in Virginia. He and his three siblings moved often in their youth, finally settling in Kingson, Pennsylvania, for their high school years. There, he met Mary Martin, who became his loving wife of 62 years.

While attending Syracuse University, Mr. Hicks spent summers writing for the Dallas Post newspaper in Pennsylvania, following in the footsteps of his mother, who wrote for and edited that weekly for many years.

As World War II began, Mr. Hicks graduated early from Syracuse to serve as a fighter pilot with the 88th Fighter Squadron of the Army Air Corps. He flew his P-4 on 125 combat missions over the jungles of Burma, earning a Distinguished Flying Cross.

After the war, Mr. Hicks and his family, which eventually numbered seven children, moved to New Jersey. He gave up his newspaper ambitions along with an earlier interest in professional tap dancing and settled into a career as general manager and chief salesman for Cheston Co. of Newark, N.J., a maker of electric rivet heaters.

Mr. Hicks coached a Pop Warner football team for many seasons and pursued a longtime interest in the theater by directing productions for the local theater group. He was an avid bridge player and a passionate golfer, often rising at dawn to play. When the snow flew in Jersey, he would look wistfully out the window and say"You know, somewhere it's 72 degrees and people are playing golf!"

Finally, he found that place, moving with his wife to Florida after the children were grown. During his 20 years in the sun, Mr. Hicks played golf nearly every day while keeping up a part-time sales career at Andrews Filter Co.

Mr. Hicks leaves his wife, Mary (Martin), of Cohasset, and children Michael W. of Florida, Martin of Vancouver, B.C., Edward F. of Oconomowac, Wisconsin, Daniel of Cohasset, Molly (Hochkeppel) Pierson of Cohasset, Patricia O'Rourke of Weymouth and the late Timothy. He is also survived by his sisters, Barbara Harding of Herndon, Virginia, and Persis Martin of Londonderry, New Hampshire, and by 17 grandchildren, 12 great-grandchildren and many nieces and nephews.

A memorial Mass for Mr. Hicks will be celebrated at 11 a.m. on Jan. 3 at St. Anthony's Church, Summer St., Cohasset. It will be followed by a reception for family and friends at the parish hall. Arrangements will be made by McNamara Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., Cohasset. There will be no visiting hours. Donations may be made in Mr. Hicks' name to Beacon Hospice, 8 Samoset St., Plymouth MA 02360

Herbert R. Towle

Herbert R. Towle, 86, of Cohasset, died suddenly on Dec. 24, 2003, at South Shore Hospital.

The son of the late Anna (Kimball) and Odin Towle, he was born on Border Street, adjacent to Cohasset Harbor and he spent his childhood summers fishing, swimming, and building small rafts that he paddled around the harbor.

As a teenager, he worked at Cohasset Yacht Club for a number of years, running races, teaching sailing, and otherwise working around boats.

Mr. Towle was a community activist throughout his life, especially around issues concerning his beloved Cohasset Harbor. He is perhaps best known for his key work in founding the Cohasset Sailing Club, a non-profit organization that aimed to teach Cohasset residents to sail. Since its start in 1960, thousands of children and adults have benefited from instructional programs in sailing, racing, and rowing at the club.

He was also an energetic force behind the renovation of the Lighthouse Keepers Residence, overlooking the Cohasset Sailing Club on Government Island. His daily drives around Cohasset to check up on his many friends and favorite waterfront sites continued until the day before his death.

Herb graduated from. Cohasset High School in 1936 and from Wentworth Institute in 1938.

He joined the Navy soon after the start of World War II. He served aboard the USS Bunker Hill in the Pacific, receiving an honorable discharge from the Navy in 1945.

He ran a successful electrical contracting business in Cohasset for many years. He and his wife, the late Eleanor (Burke) Towle raised their family in Cohasset.

Mr. Towle leaves three daughters, Barbara Towle of San Francisco, Christine Towle of Wakefield and Sandra Towle of Cohasset; one granddaughter Jamie Golden of San Francisco; many nieces, nephews. He was the father of the late James Towle of San Diego.

A memorial service is planned for a later date.

Arrangements were handled by the McNamara Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made in his memory to the Cohasset Sailing Club, P.0. Box 111, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Joseph S. Hoffman

Joseph S, Hoffman, 64, died Dec. 21, 2003, at Cape Cod Hospital in Hyannis.

Mr. Hoffman was born, raised and educated in New York City.

He worked many years as a sales executive for International Paper Co. in New York. He then started his own business in New York called Clayton International Paper Co. from 1961 to 1977. He eventually opened an office called Cellmark Paper Co. running this business until the time of his death.

He was a long time resident of Cohasset until moving to East Orleans in 2001 where he had a cottage for 30 years.

He loved Cape Cod, its beaches and loved long walks and was an avid golf player.

He leaves his wife, Joyce (Dwyer) Hoffman of East Orleans; two sons, Joseph P. Hoffman of Norwalk, Conn. and Jamie C. Hoffman of East Orleans; one daughter Justine A. Hoffman of New York; two sisters Barbara Deery of Orleans, Elizabeth Cuccovia of Palm Coast, Fla.; one grandson Tyler Hoffman of East Orleans; many nieces and nephews.

A funeral Mass will be celebrated in St. Joan of Arc Church, Canal Rd., Orleans on Saturday, Jan. 10, 2003, at 11 a.m.

Memorial donations may he made to The Davenport Mugar Cancer Center, 4 Bayview St., Hyannis, Ma, 02601 or The Orleans Rescue Squad C/O The Fire Dept., Assoc., Eldredge Parkway Orleans Ma, 02653.

DEAR SCATA:
THANKS FOR THE MEMORIES!

Student Camp & Trip Advisors (SCATA) helps families create memorable summers for their sons and daughters. Over the past 34 years SCATA has built an international network of representatives and built an extensive portfolio of safe, exciting camps and quality teen programs. Directors of over 80 programs will be available to provide information and answer questions at the SUMMER OPPORTUNITIES FAIR on Sunday, January 11 from 1 to 4:00 at Milton Academy.

The SCATA wheel of activities offers summer programs for every child from ages 8-18. Camp is the first introduction to summer excitement. Today, camp can mean many things and SCATA offers a myriad of varied experiences. Beverly Shiffman, SCATA's President, states, "There is a camp or program to meet every child's unique interests." Traditional overnight camps will always be popular. These camps offer a balance of activities from sports to arts and crafts to waterfront activities to horseback riding to outdoor living. Some camps specialize in one particular activity and offer campers the opportunity to concentrate on their special interest. These offerings include sports clinics, theater and dance programs, fine arts, scuba diving, and outdoor living. All of these programs offer a nurturing environment where new skills can be acquired and lifelong friendships developed.

When a camper reaches the teen years, other choices on the SCATA wheel are available. There are teen camps, specifically designed for the 13 to 17 year old camper. Cross country travel appeals to many teens. It offers an opportunity to see America up-close with groups of peers. SCATA represents educational programs that offer enrichment courses of study on college campuses in the US and abroad. Language skill and cultural awareness can be expanded through time spent in a foreign country. Outdoor living trips are offered at all levels of ability from beginners to wilderness survival training. Travel is available around the world -- a chance to explore both exotic cities and back roads. SCUBA diving, sailing and surfing opportunities are offered in exotic locales. And for the teen that wants to "give back" to the community, there are opportunities for service available around the world. A recent addition to the SCATA wheel is semester study, an opportunity for growth and exploration for 13th year students.

Every summer SCATA representatives visit hundreds of camps and programs in the US and abroad. These visits give SCATA a unique perspective and first-hand knowledge of a wide range of programs and directors. It is with this depth of personal experience that SCATA recommends a particular program to their client families.

Let SCATA help you plan a memorable and rewarding summer for your child: an opportunity to gain a sense of independence, to experience adventure, to learn cooperation, to build self-confidence, and to accomplish new feats in a safe environment. Call to arrange a personal appointment or attend the SUMMER OPPORTUNITIES FAIR on Sunday, January 11 at Milton Academy.

"Our goal is happy campers."

School board race shapes up

Other candidates also pull papers

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Cohasset's Town Election 2004 already has the makings of a humdinger.

With open seats on the Board of Selectmen, School Committee, Planning Board, Water Commission, Recreation Commission and Housing Authority, excitement is starting to build.

By the close of the day Monday — the first day nomination papers became available — seven citizens were poised to throw their hats into the ring. Tuesday and Wednesday two more candidates pulled papers with one race already shaping up.

In a four-way race for two seats, incumbent School Committee member Pat Martin of Linden Drive plans to seek a third term while Adrienne MacCarthy of Doane Street, Jamie Williams of Surry Drive and Scott O'Grady are hoping for their first. Incumbent Mark DeGiacomo is not seeking a third term.

Martin said the school system is at a critical juncture.

"I believe the Cohasset school system is at a critical point of impending transition with a new superintendent being chosen this spring and with continued budget and program reductions looming," Martin said. "I would like to continue working on the committee to ensure its current commitment to excellence and guide our system through these upcoming challenges."

MacCarthy, who ran against Martin three years ago, said she is up to the task.

"My desire to sit on the Cohasset School Committee is not new," MacCarthy said. "I have continued to work for the schools and the town since my last bid for a seat three years ago. I am ready to bring my experiences as a School Building Committee member, a PSO representative and a parent to this important seat."

Williams said she would bring a fresh voice to the School Committee.

"As an experienced businesswoman, I am seeking to bring my proven record of leadership in planning, budgeting and for-

Popular longtime village gift shop closes

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Not many people can say Jack Nicholson ate here, especially about a card and gift shop.

But then again, not many people own a shop in Cohasset Village in an antique house that provided the setting for the deli in the 1987 movie "Witches of Eastwick," which was filmed in town.

The "deli" was just one of innumerable memories that bring a smile to Sue Straley's face.

"I wanted to be here every minute. My children used to say to me at night, 'can't you talk about anything but Cards and Shards?'"
— Sue Straley

In fact smiles come easily to Straley, whose face lights up when she talks about Cards and Shards, the shop that had become a second home to her over the past 26 years.

"I wanted to be here every minute," she recalls. "My children used to say to me at night, 'can't you talk about anything but Cards and Shards?'"

But the time has come for Straley, who lives in Hull, to move on and she is doing so without regret.

"I decided I can make better use of my time right now," she says. "I have other things I'd like to do including doing some traveling. I still have time to do something different."

Straley bought the shop and building with her husband Dick after a lunch at what was then Hugo's some 26 years ago. They were driving by and saw the for sale sign.

"We went in and looked around and the rest is history," she says.

The shop was on the books as a souvenir shop so it could be open Sundays at a time when few stores were. Even malls were closed on Sunday, Straley recalls. "It was also the days when women weren't really working yet."

After thinking about closing the store for about a year, Straley started telling customers about three months ago when she put the stock on sale. The reaction was one of disbelief and shock.

"People would say 'you can't, the shop is Cohasset – you can't do this,'" she says. "I found out how really important we were."

No override in FY'05 budget

Schools to be in crunch mode

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Town Manager Mark Haddad said he is standing firm on his decision not to recommend a Prop. 2-1/2 override for fiscal year 2005, which means the School Department will have some decisions to make in order to balance its budget.

While the schools are asking for $719,000 over last year to cover only contractual obligations and increased utility expenses, Haddad said the money will not be available from the town unless either personnel cuts are made on the municipal side, or the town has an override, which are both unwelcome solutions in his eyes.

"I am pretty solid on the fact that I'm not asking for an override," said Haddad, adding he, as always, will be more than willing to work with the School Department to help find a solution to its budgetary problems.

Haddad said the amount of new revenues available for FY2005 is $563,381, which is almost $200,000 short of being able to fund the minimum $719,000 the schools need just to cover contractual raises and costs for utilities. Extras such as a new math teacher, or any other additional employees or supplies aren't included in that figure.

However, before Haddad can give any funds to the schools out of that $563,381, the costs for benefits and insurance for employees needs to be taken care of. This year, without any changes in the health insurance policy, it is necessary to increase that line item by $233,800, which leaves only $329,581 in additional new revenue for all remaining budgets. In light of that, Haddad recommended increasing the school budget by $324,971 or 2.9 percent, in contrast to the town's increase of .68 percent, as the only way of presenting a balanced budget without an

Cook project takes a step forward

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Town Manager Mark Haddad is slated to come before the Advisory Committee tonight, to request a reserve fund transfer of $25,000, which will allow the next stage of the senior housing project at the Cook Estate to move forward.

An on-site septic system is planned for the project. Haddad said the system should accommodate 14,000 gallons of wastewater. When a system is over 10,000 gallons, the town needs to obtain a groundwater discharge permit from the Department of Environmental Protection. A hydrogeologic study must also be conducted on the land as part of the process.

"We're pretty confident we can get a groundwater permit," Haddad said.

During a hydrogeologic study, test pits are dug which allows the path of the groundwater to be tracked. The test pits are dug roughly 25 feet into the ground, and the entire process takes a month or two, Haddad said. He added the process will be able to start immediately, and will not be affected by the cold weather.

Haddad went to the Advisory Committee before for $25,000 to pay John Cavanaro Consulting to conduct the due diligence for the Cook project. That money was turned back to the town at Town Meeting.

"We're basically asking for that $25,000 back again," said Haddad.

Haddad said he sought money from the Community Preservation Fund first for both the due diligence process and the hydrogeologic tests. But the CPC opted not to fund the project and

Train meeting Jan. 13

The MBTA will conduct a meeting on the Cohasset Roundhouse and Rocky Lane grade separator at 9:30 a.m., Tuesday, Jan. 13 at Cohasset Town Hall. The purpose of the session is for the MBTA to present the current design proposals for these parts of the Greenbush Railroad Project and discuss their potential impact to cultural resources. Town officials and members of the public will have the opportunity to comment on the proposed designs. The Cohasset Roundhouse once stood in the vicinity of the Town Parking Lot.

The MBTA is also conducting a meeting on the Greenbush Layover Station at 2 p.m., Jan. 13 at Scituate Town Hall.

Ventilation concerns at middle-high school

During its annual health inspection of the middle-high school, the Board of Health noted ventilation hoods were not operable in some of the laboratories and chemical storage rooms. The board also received anecdotal information that the air quality in the labs and sometimes in the adjacent hall might not meet air quality standards.

The board sent a letter to CMHS Principal Michael Jones on Dec. 10 requesting the "fume hoods" be made operable no later than Jan. 15, or the board would request air-quality tests be conducted. If the schools don't pass the tests, the board said it would take appropriate action, which would include prohibiting the use of the classrooms to ensure students are not being exposed to hazardous breathing conditions.

Jones stated in a letter to the Board of Health, the fume hoods installed during the construction project are not operational because motors which were ordered from the manufacturer have not yet arrived. "They will be installed as soon as they arrive, and at that time the fume hoods will be operational," he stated.

Jones also said fume hoods are not intended to vent air on a daily basis, and are used only when chemicals are mixed during laboratory work. No chemicals have been mixed in the classrooms and no chemical work will be conducted until the hoods are operational, he stated.

The board's concern regarding air quality would be investigated, said Jones, who has informed Building Project Manager Simon Tempest, who will arrange for air testing in the schools.

In addition, Jones said the chemical inventory was reviewed and examined on site by a professional consultant, and all inventory which was no longer needed was disposed of through Clean Harbors. "Everything remaining in the laboratories is properly sealed and stored," he stated.

Board of Health Chairman Steve Bobo said Jones "sounds like he's on top of it," but asked Office Manager Tara Tradd if she would take a look at the progress made at the school. He also requested a letter be drafted asking the school to ensure air testing is conducted soon, because gas jets are being used in the labs even if chemicals are not. It's important to have a reading on the air quality, Bobo said.

Great Neck developers submit preliminary plans

The Board of Health got its first look Monday at preliminary plans for another proposed senior housing project under the Senior Overlay District bylaw.

Ellen Morrissey,488 Jerusalem Road, previously filed an application with the town to build a 40B project on her 14 acres of land located off Beach Street. Although she did not attend Monday's meeting, she said previously she reconsidered her development plans to provide a project she thinks would be more beneficial to the town.

"This is a preliminary plan. They're giving you a pretty good idea of where the drainage is going to go," said Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik, adding the plans show there is enough area to support an on-site wastewater treatment system. He said a good portion of the property is flat and the soil is basically sand.

However, Godzik said more definitive data is needed for the board to vote on the plans, including storm-water management information and results from a hydro-geologic study.

"Tentatively, it looks OK," said member Peggy Chapman.

Cedarmere developers file records request

The Cedarmere developers have filed public records requests, asking the Board of Selectmen, Town Manager, Director of Finance Michael Buckley, and members of the Sewer Commission, Ray Kasperowicz, John Beck, Sean Cunning, and associate member Gary Vanderweil, to provide information and records which date back to 1996. Much of the information is regarding town sewer issues, as well as discussion surrounding any aspects of the 105-unit Cedarmere project. The requests includes all written records, records stored in a computer medium, electronic mail, and audio or video recordings.

"This is kind of an onerous request," said Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris. The Board of Selectmen has been asked to provide documents which apply to 16 sets of criteria by the development team.

Town Manager Mark Haddad said he will seek the advice of Town Counsel because it will be virtually impossible to provide the long list of records, of which his list includes 17 different items, to the Cedarmere developers in a 10-day time frame, as is required by state law. The lists for the other boards all exceed 10 points of criteria as well.

CPC funds possible for CHS field repairs

Town Manager Mark Haddad said he has been in contact with Community Preservation Committee Chairman Stuart Ivimey about submitting an application for funds to cover maintenance costs on Alumni Field. After speaking with Town Counsel, Ivimey said the request is in his board's purview and Haddad said Ivimey has been very receptive to the request.

"That field has been in bad shape all fall," said Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris. Selectman Merle Brown added there was a problem with the field from the very beginning, because there was never money in the budget to "do it the way it should be done — with sand."

Brown said under the field is mostly clay, which does not drain well and has caused many problems with the field. Haddad said now that he knows the request can be addressed by the CPC, he will file an application for the money soon.

End of 'blue law' opens door for Sunday sales

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Cohasset package stores aren't exactly feeling "blue" about the new state law giving towns the option to allow liquor stores to be open Sundays, but they're not thrilled about it either.

"Unfortunately we're being forced into it," says Rick Curtis, owner of Curtis Liquors at Tedeschi Plaza. "Once one town does it — other towns have to jump on board."

So far on the South Shore, Abington and Marshfield have given the OK; Weymouth plans to hold a public hearing with license holders on the issue, as will Pembroke, Hingham and Cohasset. Cohasset's public hearing is scheduled for Tuesday, Jan. 27.

"A lot of stores I spoke with don't want to open on Sundays," said Town Manager Mark Haddad. However, to remain competitive, he believes businesses will begin to change their schedules if other stores in the area choose to open. Haddad said individual stores can set their own Sunday hours but no earlier than noon and run no later than 11 p.m.

"It's probably going to be a domino effect," said Selectman Michael Sullivan.

Thanks to Gov. Mitt Romney and the state Legislature that recently amended the existing law by expanding the opportunity for licensees to sell on Sunday on a statewide basis, the Sunday liquor ban — a Colonial-era "blue law" — is no more. The Board of Selectmen, which is the local licensing authority, can now issue a permit for Sunday sales to package stores that want one. Those that open will have to pay time-and-a-half.

"Not every store will open," says Curtis. "But the medium and large stores will feel obligated to do so."

Massachusetts had already permitted liquor stores within 10 miles of New Hampshire and Vermont – where Sunday liquor sales are allowed — to open that day. The bill came in response to a recent New York law allowing Sunday alcohol sales. Massachusetts liquor stores on the New York border said they were losing business to their neighbors across the state line.

Ryan Staszko, manager of Cohasset Plaza Liquors, wrote to selectmen expressing interest in being open on Sundays. Staszko said his interest is not about profit but about staying competitive and maintaining market share.

"I don't want customers to drive to other places if we're not open and then continue to shop there," he said.

While the package stores are bemoaning the change in the law, convenience stores that sell wine and beer and are already open Sundays welcome it.

"It's a convenience for our customers," says Paul Orrall, night manager at Cohasset Food Mart. "There were 14 who came in last Sunday and asked for it, and we couldn't sell to them."

Approval from the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission is not required under the new law. Stores cannot sell liquor prior to noon or after 11 p.m., or 11:30 p.m. on a Sunday preceding a legal holiday, although selectmen can set shorter hours. Stores that open Sunday can close another day of the week if they choose.

Sales will not be permitted on Memorial Day, Thanksgiving day, Christmas day or the following day if Christmas falls on a Sunday. And no employee may be required to work on Sunday.

Cliff Chase, owner of Village Wine & Spirits, said if he had his druthers, the state wouldn't have changed the law.

"In this business, so much of the weekend is taken up already with Friday night, Saturday and Saturday night," he said. "Now it's going to be totally gone."

Curtis of Curtis Liquors, who also has a store in Weymouth, said he predicts his stores will do the same amount of business but spread over Saturday and Sunday.

"Customers won't feel it's necessary to shop on Saturday – so some of our traditional Saturday and Saturday night business will move to Sunday," he said, adding the exception in this area might be on hot summer Sundays when customers might come in for some cold beer or other alcoholic beverages for barbecues or parties.

For roughly the past 10 years, with selectmen's approval, liquor stores in the state have been allowed to open Sundays between Thanksgiving and New Year's.

The State House News Service also contributed to this report.

About the Colonial blue laws

The following is from www.u-s-history.com

- Puritan church members in the Massachusetts Bay Colony, and later Congregationalists elsewhere in New England, believed their relationship with God required them to enforce proper behavior.
- Blue law refers to an edict regulating public activities on the Sabbath, which meant Sunday to the Congregationalists of the time.
- All forms of trade or commerce were outlawed on Sundays. No public entertainment or meetings were permitted, excepted church services. Even travel was banned.
- The origin of the term blue law is disputed. Some authorities argue the early laws or book describing regulations were printed on blue paper; others suggest the name comes from "blue blood," a term conveying a disapproving view of common behavior.

Buying alcohol on Sunday not so simple

By Amy Lambiaso
AMY.LAMBIASO@
STATEHOUSENEWS.COM

Despite a new law, consumers looking to buy a six-pack of beer on a Sunday afternoon might have to drive a bit further than they expected to get it.

Local and state authorities say the new state law abolishing the so-called "blue law," which banned liquor store openings on Sundays, has confused many storeowners and turned off many others. The result: consumers this past Sunday, the day the law went into effect, found many liquor stores were still closed.

Lawmakers abolished the Sunday openings ban in November as part of a larger job creation package. According to the Massachusetts Package Store Association, only a dozen storeowners contacted the group to acknowledge they took advantage of the first Sunday opening this past weekend, after receiving local approval from licensing boards.

While it's likely that more than a dozen stores were open, the association represents 650 storeowner members and there are 1,800 liquor stores in the state, according to the association.

Frank Anzalotti, executive director of the association, said the delay in openings is mainly due to communities having to sort out and explain the new regulations to retailers and consumers.

Anzalotti said many storeowners originally believed they could be open for business on Sundays immediately following the holiday period in which alcohol can be sold at stores seven days a week between Thanksgiving and New Year's.

But it's not that simple. Storeowners first have to obtain permits locally.

"We've told people no openings without new permits," Anzalotti said. Currently, most liquor stores have six-day alcohol licenses, with the one-day closure falling on Sunday.

In order for that to change, stores must apply to the local licensing board for a seven-day license or a license change to specify another day of the week to be closed, said William Kelley, general counsel for the Alcohol Beverages Control Commission (ABCC). Local licensing boards have the full discretion to deny any permit request, in essence resisting the law change.

But Kelley said another kink in the law change has local authorities scratching their heads. The community's legislative body can vote to "accept" the opt-out provision of the law, in which case not only package stores, but restaurants and bars would be banned from selling alcohol on Sundays.

"We haven't heard from anybody that would go dry," said Anzalotti. "And we can't believe anyone would do that."

Rep. Daniel Bosley, one of the leading proponents for abolishing the ban, said the "dry provision" was unintentional and needs to be amended. "In an effort to get things done quickly some laws were included in the statute that may not be applicable," said Bosley, a North Adams Democrat who co-chairs the Government Regulations Committee.

Bosley said he would lead legislative efforts during the next couple of weeks to clean up any "quirky" wording that is confusing people and may have created unintended consequences.

Currently, the local licensing board dictates which day a liquor store must close. Bosley said he will file corrective legislation to ensure storeowners more flexibility in choosing their own schedule. "However we do this, we are leaving it up to the city or town to decide whether their stores should open," Bosley said.

ward-thinking to the School Committee, to best manage the challenges facing our school system and Cohasset taxpayers, while ensuring that the best educational opportunities are available to our children," Williams said.

O'Grady said, as a parent and member of the community, he wants to be involved in the decision-making process as the schools select a new superintendent and move forward.

"I want to help establish new priorities now that the buildings are finished," he said. "What we need now is a new formula in what we are looking for in a superintendent and for leadership in our schools."

So far incumbent Selectman Merle Brown of Beechwood Street, who is seeking a fourth term, and Rob Spofford of Heather Drive are running for two seats on the Board of Selectmen. Incumbent Selectman Tom Callahan is not seeking reelection.

The Mariner caught up with Brown at 8:50 a.m. Monday at the Town Clerk's office. He was the first to pull papers.

"I'd like to continue to work as a selectman for the town," said Brown, who served 11 years on the Conservation Commission before being elected selectman. "I enjoy the people of the town and I hope I can make a difference as I think I have in the past."

Spofford said with nine years on the School Building Committee, he's ready for the challenge of being a selectman.

"As the school projects come to a close I have reflected on how much I care about Cohasset," Spofford said. "I would like to use my time and energy to continue to address our town's needs. I feel well suited and prepared to provide input based upon my nine years of experience with the school projects and my own business acumen."

Nathaniel Palmer of Little Harbor Road plans to run for the seat being vacated by Rob Kasameyer on the Water Commission and Elsa Miller of Reservoir Road is seeking reelection to the Board of Assessors. Palmer said a seat on the Water Commission is a natural for him.

"I have been involved with and concerned with environmental matters for the last couple of decades, particularly as they relate to watershed protection," he said. "I have been generally pleased with Cohasset's water system (everything but the taste), however, through my involvement with the board over the last couple of years I have come appreciate the vital importance it plays in the health and safety of Cohasset.

"I want to ensure that all three members of the board reflect an understanding of that responsibility," he said.

Planning Board member Bill Good said he will not seek a fourth term on the Planning Board.

"I've loved working with such great people on the Planning Board," he said. "It's been a great 15 years."

Water Commissioner Rob Kasameyer won't seek reelection to the Water Commission.

"I believe the Water Department I am leaving has become one of the Town's strongest departments," he said. "Commissioners John McNabb and Glenn Pratt are committed both to the Town and to its water. They are spearheading a number of programs to keep the Department performing at the highest levels, benchmarked against the best"

Town Clerk Marion Douglas said it was exciting to see so many citizens interested in seeking office. However, she hopes all the spots on the ballot will be filled including those for two-year, unexpired terms on the Cohasset Housing Authority and Recreation Commission.

Rick Grassie recently resigned from the Recreation Commission leaving a one-year unexpired term and Joanne Young moved away leaving a one-year unexpired term on the Cohasset Housing Authority.

School Committee member Rick Shea, who was appointed to fill the Jane Pescatore's seat in September, pulled papers Tuesday for the one-year remaining of Pescatore's unexpired term. Pescatore resigned to accept employment with the school department.

Incumbents who had not pulled papers by press time include: Recreation Commissioner Anthony Carbone; Board of Health Chairman Steve Bobo; Ann Barrett, Cohasset Housing Authority; Sewer Commissioner Sean Cunning and library trustees, Barbara Power, Sarah Pease and June Hubbard.

Bobo said he will seek reelection to the Board of Health. "I think it's going to take at least three more years to get out of what I've gotten myself into," Bobo said.

The last day to take out papers for the April 3 Town Election is Thursday, Feb. 12.

A snapshot of the annual budget process

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Every year when the annual Town Meeting rolls around, residents vote to approve a fiscal year operating budget.

While casting a vote may be easy, coming up with the figures to balance the books is not. It is a painstaking process which begins in November, months before any local aid numbers are final from the state. With the timeline the town has to work with, it's a wonder the budget is ever close to being on target.

When the term municipal budget is used, it refers to the budgets associated with the Town Hall, Police Department, Fire Department, DPW, Library, and Council on Elder Affairs. The budgets for the Water Department, Sewer Department, School Department, employee benefits, and debt service are not included in the municipal budget, Town Manager Mark Haddad explained.

Cohasset holds its annual Town Meeting every March, during which the budget for the following fiscal year is approved. This means at the last annual Town Meeting in March of 2003, the budget for the 2004 fiscal year, which runs from July 1, 2003 to June 30,2004, was approved.

The fall Special Town Meeting provides a way to adjust the budget to reflect figures that were unknown in March and have become known in the meantime. The town's new growth has been certified by November, and the State aid allocation is set. In addition, there have been five months of tracking estimated receipts, overtime, and legal expenses, and the actual deficit in the snow and ice budget from the previous fiscal year is known. The fall Special Town Meeting therefore provides an opportunity to finalize the budget before setting the tax rate.

Even with all the estimates, the town only had to approve a little more than $440,000 to balance the FY 2004 operating budget at last year's special Fall Town Meeting, which is a relatively small figure considering the total budget was a little more than $29 million.

Keeping in mind that a finalized, balanced budget needs to be presented for approval in March, it is necessary to begin working on the budget in November of the preceding year. For example, in November 2003, Haddad began working on the FY 2005 budget, which will be presented at the March 27 Town Meeting.

When presented, the FY2005 budget will need to be balanced, which requires figures be included for available funds, a determination of the tax levy, estimated receipts, and estimated state aid, although the actual figures are unknown at the time the budget is compiled.

To determine the tax levy, figures for new growth need to be estimated in November. That number is based on what the expected value of new construction will be as of July 1 of the following year. The Board of Assessors will not have had time prior to Town Meeting to review all building permits, which usually total more than 400 pieces of property, and all require inspections to determine value. Because anticipated new growth is not certified by the Department of Revenue until the summer, new growth figures for the FY2005 budget will be only estimates until four months after the budget has already been approved.

To determine estimated receipts, the Town Manager and Director of Finance need to estimate how much revenue is going to be generated 18 months down the road. While figures from previous years are available to help guide the process, there is still no way of knowing what the exact finalized number will be in advance.

Because the Legislature and Governor do not finalize the state budget until June, or sometimes even later, it requires the Town Manager and Director of Finance to put forth their best estimates on what they believe will be the actual numbers, roughly eight months before the figures will be finalized by the state.

In addition, the tax rate cannot be set until all values and state aid has been certified by the Department of Revenue, which usually takes place in December, or nine months after the original budget is voted on in March.

In addition to the tax rate, there are other unknown numbers which need to be accounted for in the budget process. The snow and ice deficit and overtime needs of the Fire and Police Departments can only be predicted, as well as the legal budget, which poses some problems because there is no way to tell what lawsuits will come before the town eight to 12 months in advance. However, several items are known, such as salaries, maintenance contracts, and insurance, which give some concrete numbers to use as a basis for the rest of the budget.

override, he said. While that will not cover the over $700,000 the school needs, Haddad said there is no other money to give without an override.

As a way to recoup some funding for the town, Haddad said it might be possible to negotiate insurance packages. He said he has been talking to the various unions in town, and many said they would be willing to increase their health insurance co-pay from $5 to $15 to help offset some costs in the budget.

"A majority of the unions are very agreeable," he said, adding if the change went forward there would be an additional $150,000 available for the budget, but without the consent of all the unions, the plans cannot move forward.

The town had been in a cycle that required an override every three years in order to maintain services, based on the fact that the town has a tax base which is 93 percent residential without a significant commercial base. Due to a dramatic reduction in local aid, that cycle was altered and an override was passed last year, when an override wasn't scheduled until 2004. Haddad said he doesn't think it is fair for the taxpayers to have to go through an override two years in a row and will do everything he can to make sure it doesn't happen.

On the municipal side, Haddad said he has done his best to make the numbers work by not giving raises to municipal employees, level funding wherever possible, and increasing very few line items. There were only three major proposed increases in line items.

An additional $40,000 was allocated to start paying back the Water Department for emergency services fees and hydrant rentals. Haddad said the Water Commission has been extremely helpful and understanding of the town's situation financially, and have been very accommodating in their allowing the town to form a plan to pay the money back, and it's time for the town to start repaying that debt.

Haddad has also appropriated $50,000 for field maintenance, which was cut from the budget in FY2004 due to budgetary shortfalls. Therefore, the town needs to begin funding maintenance again, or be faced with significant costs to reconstruct the fields in the future. Currently, Alumni Field needs more work than can be included in the line item, and funding from the Community Preservation Committee is being sought.

The third increased line item will cover the salary for a part-time maintenance supervisor, which will cost the town $40,000. Haddad said he thinks that is a small price to pay to have someone who will be responsible for the oversight of maintenance on the town's $55 million investment in buildings around town.

Haddad said he along with Selectmen and the Advisory Committee will be working with members of the School Department as soon as possible to come up with a solution to the bud-

Cook project takes a step forward

Haddad went to the Advisory Committee instead.

Haddad said for the hydrogeologic tests, he approached the CPC and, in an effort to get things started as soon as possible, asked for $25,000 out of its administrative budget, which would not require waiting for a Town Meeting vote. However, CPC Chairman Stuart Ivimey said he needed to double check with Town Counsel to see if the tests would qualify in the administrative budget, which he was informed they do not.

"Even if they wanted to, in this instance, they couldn't provide the funds," Haddad said, adding the administrative budget funds can only be used to cover costs specifically accrued by the CPC.

Haddad said he has not signed a contract yet, but will be hiring Coler and Colantonio to perform the tests. He explained the project did not go out to bid because under the Uniform Procurement Act, or Chapter 30B of the Mass. General Laws, which sets up the rules and regulations for procurement, engineering work is not required to go through the bidding process.

"If we want to have any chance of closing by September, I think it is important that we do this now," said Haddad. If all goes as planned, this phase will be complete by February or March. From there, only the design of the system would be left, and "If everything falls into place," Haddad said he hopes a groundwater discharge permit would be issued by September of this year.

Haddad said he will also ask the Cook heirs if they would be willing to help cover the costs of this stage of the process, because it will help the sale go through in a more timely fashion.

"This is huge," Haddad said, adding he believes this project will be great for the town, and will not conflict with any other Cohasset developments. To date, 63 Requests for Proposal have been given out, and Haddad expects a developer will be chosen sometime in March.

CEES gives Little Harbor sewer project a big push

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Sewer issues have been a hot topic in town since Jimmy Carter was president and 2004 won't be an exception.

The town has been directed by the Department of Environmental Protection to solve its wastewater woes including the area around Little Harbor and at least one group is going to make sure Cohasset stays out of court

CEES (Citizens for Equitable Environmental Solutions) became a familiar acronym around town in the mid-1990s when voters were asked to subsidize the North Cohasset Sewer Project. CEES formed and became vocal about ensuring sewering was accomplished in a fair and equitable manner throughout town.

Although CEES hasn't been grabbing the headlines of late – it is still actively working and will present an article to Town Meeting that would set the stage for sewering the Little Harbor area, by asking for funding for the project. It also wrote to the DEP asking the environmental agency to remind the town that it can't turn its back on Little Harbor, in light of the Second Amended Final Judgement — the legal pact in which the town agreed to solve its wastewater problems.

In a letter to Town Manager Mark Haddad, the DEP stated, the judgement, among many things, required the Town of Cohasset to develop a Wastewater Management Plan. But based on past sewering needs in Cohasset, the Town decided to pursue the sewering of the Little Harbor area in lieu of implementing the Wastewater Management Plan that would have required septic system inspections among other environmental efforts.

"The Sewer Commission has to draft a response to the letter," said Town Manager Mark Haddad, adding the commission is responsible for formulating a plan for hooking up that area to the sewer. Haddad said while Little Harbor isn't specifically mentioned as an area which has to be connected to sewer, it is a problem area which the DEP could choose to include in the suit, and as far as he's concerned, Little Harbor will be hooked up to the town's lines.

The town has contracted with Tutela Engineering to do the design work necessary for the construction of the sewers for Little Harbor. The DEP letter asks within 30 days of its receipt, the town submit a status report as to tasks completed to date, and a schedule for the completion of the project. The letter asks at minimum, the schedule includes dates for submitting final plans, going out to bid, commencing construction, completing construction, and connecting the homes to the sewer.

While CEES has been working behind the scenes – new housing projects have come to the forefront including Cedarmere – a 105-unit senior condominium complex that is seeking sewer capacity.

CEES members were alarmed to hear Cedarmere argue, because the funding to connect Little Harbor to the system is not available, Cedarmere should be able to take advantage of any available capacity. Cedarmere offered to upgrade the treatment plant to provide capacity for its own project, Little Harbor and other areas. However, the Sewer Commission turned Cedarmere down and the issue is now the subject of a lawsuit.

"Cedarmere believed the project was dead," said CEES member Stacey Weaver, adding both CEES and the Sewer Commission will keep the project going.

Sewer saga

The issue of sewering the Little Harbor area of town has been a point of discussion since the 1970s. In 1975, Cohasset was the first town in the state to receive a citation under the Clean Water Act when the town's treatment plant was cited for violations of its permit. The town then became eligible for federal money to expand, refurbish, and modernize the town's existing treatment plant. However, the town kept voting the plan down.

In 1979, the state took Cohasset to court to complete upgrades to the sewer plant, and in 1980, was given the first judgement. The state said it would fine the town $10,000 per day unless it went forward with a project which would sewer the major parts of town with the highest populations, while also being large enough to accommodate additional use in the future. The town also had to develop alternative plans for homes not included in the new sewer project. Town meeting approved the project, although the state did fine the town one token penalty of $10,000.

When Ronald Reagan was elected president, he immediately delayed all public works funding to rein in inflation and high interest rates. By 1982, the federal government began releasing public works funds again, and Cohasset was informed funding for the sewer project was available at that time.

However, a group of residents opposed the project, which led to a lengthy legal battle with the state. In 1988, the town approved a debt-exclusion override of $2.2 million to hook up to Hull's wastewater treatment plant. But later that year, state funds dried up.

The judgement remained unenforced until 1994, when the State Attorney General's office dug out the old files and decided to enforce the agreement. But completion dates for implementation of the agreement had long-since expired.

In 1996, the state revised the plan with new dates. The revised plan became the Second Final Amended Judgement.

The new agreement called for the town to undertake a number of sewer projects. The town would build a sewer in North Cohasset and expand the sewer system in central Cohasset. A third key element of the agreement was a plan to implement an on-site waste-water management plan for homeowners in environmentally sensitive areas of town. The key areas are a section around Lily Pond, and a triangular area where Nichols Road, Jerusalem Road and Atlantic Avenue intersect.

Weaver said CEES will not take any legal action to ensure their place in line for sewer at this time, but the group will continue to work toward making sure their project continues to move forward.

Satellite treatment plant is floated for Lily Pond

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Board of Health may ask Town Meeting to give the go ahead for a satellite sewer treatment plant for the 62 homes that surround Lily Pond. While the board hasn't made its final decision on whether it will bring the article forward to be included on the Warrant, or let another interested group bring it to the table, members thought it was a great idea and made many positive comments on the draft.

Because Lily Pond serves as the town's water supply, sewering its surrounding area has been a concern of the Board of Health for some time.

"This happens to be the highest priority," said Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik, because of the area's close proximity to the pond. While the board acknowledges there are other areas of town, such as Little Harbor, which are also in dire need of wastewater treatment, plans for that section of town are already in place.

While Little Harbor may have to wait a while until it hooks up to the town sewer, it has been deemed a priority by the state, and the Department of Environmental Protection will be keeping tabs on that project's progress. Godzik said the Lily Pond area has been a concern of the Board of Health for some time and he believes satellite treatment facilities could satisfy the board's concerns.

While Monday was the first time the board had seen the proposal, which was written by Daniel Coughlin, Senior Associate for Tutela Engineering Associates Inc. — the town's wastewater consulting engineers — it is not the first time the board has discussed possible alternate wastewater solutions for the area surrounding the pond.

While the town is working toward forming a comprehensive wastewater treatment plan for the entire town, the existing treatment plant has not been up and running long enough to be able to predict how much future capacity there will be, if any. Until a study can be done, which spans a few years and would allow a better prediction of what capacity could be available once all planned hook-ups are made to the town's system, new connections aren't being allowed.

"We don't want to do anything until the town has a better way of handling massive changes in growth," said Chairman Steve Bobo about hook-ups to the existing plant. He said satellite facilities could give the town a way to address the top wastewater priority areas in a timely fashion.

Member Robin Lawrence said if the article goes through at Town Meeting, it "may set a precedent," for the town, and there could be an increase in those looking to build their own treatment facilities on site, rather than seeking town sewer capacity.

"Satellites may be the way the town gets sewered," said member Peggy Chapman.

The board did not take any action on the proposal, as it was the first time it had seen it, and Bobo said he wouldn't be surprised if once word gets out about Coughlin's idea, other groups in town show interest in working on the draft and possibly including it on the Warrant. However, no matter who brings the article froward, with the wastewater problems the town currently has, the board believes something needs to be done soon.

"When is the question, not will it be done," said Chapman.

Thanks for speaking up

Before 2004 gets too far along, we still have some important 2003 business to attend to. Some of the following names may be familiar to you, others may not be. But the people attached to these names all have one thing in common: they wrote at least one letter to the Cohasset Mariner in 2003.

A few wrote thank you notes to the people of Cohasset or organizations for their help or support; others complained about a decision or lobbied to have their views considered; while still others educated us about programs, problems or activities.

But no matter what the subject, putting pen to paper to share your views with your fellow citizens is important. The First Amendment is close to our hearts here in the newspaper business and at no time do we appreciate it more than when ordinary citizens, like those listed here, take advantage of their Freedom of Speech. And what better vehicle is there than your local paper?

So here at the Mariner, we salute the following citizens:

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Unfair treatment of a respected officer

TO THE EDITOR:

First, as I am sure is the case in most towns, the relationship between Cohasset students and the police in the past in could at best be described as weak. If one were to have asked any student to give their opinion on the Cohasset Police force the response would undoubtedly be snide. There was a hole in this town and something needed to be done. While indeed we applaud the work of Mr. Grassie and Ms. Mattos, who have both strived to reach out to local students, we must also extend a debt of gratitude to Sgt. William Quigley.

I first met with Sgt Quigley when I approached the Police Department with the idea of forming some sort of group that would essentially fill this hole. I will admit, I was skeptical that such a program could be formed, but let me make this clear: Sgt Quigley was not. From our very first meeting Sgt Quigley, with the utmost professionalism, represented the Cohasset Police Department in this effort to unite students and officers. It was Sgt. Quigley with whom I drafted a course syllabus; it was Sgt. Quigley who pulled together all of the departments resources and made them available to the students; and it is Sgt Quigley who deserves all of the credit for the success of that program. The time that it took to construct The Cohasset Student Police Academy may have been a burden to a typical officer; dealing with a group of students may have seemed a nuisance but Sgt Quigley, on his own time, took on these "challenges" with full energy and truly made the program a boon for this community.

This town owes a lot to Sgt Quigley, and while it may be unpopular for a student to side with a police officer, I must support Sgt William Quigley in this instance. We are not privy to the full details of which Sgt Quigley is accused. We do not know who is right, or who is wrong. We don't even know if there is a right or a wrong. We do know this: A Cohasset Police officer, and asset to this town, has been removed from the job without a thorough explanation to the community. This is unfair. We have read that Sgt Quigley has asked to hear what exactly it is that he is being accused of and been denied this right. This is certainly unfair. Finally, we know that Sgt Quigley has in the past represented the Cohasset Police Department, and concomitantly the Town of Cohasset with the highest degree of honor and respect. Has this respect been reciprocated? Like I said, we do not know the details of this matter. All I am asking for is an explanation. Anyone would demand an explanation if he or she were in Sgt Quigley's place. Why has he been denied one? Why have we been denied one? Is this fair?

Planning Board intent questioned

TO THE EDITOR:

The recent comments by some members of our Planning Board regarding their intent to give some sort of preliminary approval with conditions for the Cedarmere project are dumbfounding, to say the least.

The Senior Overlay by-law clearly states that every application for a senior overlay project "shall provide sufficient information...to make a determination that adequate provision is made for the disposal of septic waste or written confirmation from the Town of Cohasset Sewer Commission detailing an agreement to accept the wastewater flow." Cedarmere has neither at the present time. This clear, black-and-white language of the by-law (which was brought to Town Meeting by this same Planning Board) requires one or the other as a condition precedent to submission of an application. A developer cannot even get its foot in the front door, let alone receive some sort of conditional approval from the Planning Bd., without this information in its application.

That some of our Planning Bd. members are considering the Cedarmere application at this stage of the process is an obvious case of placing the cart before the horse. Not only is their proposed action contrary to the by-law, but it will open up the town to a lawsuit from abutters who quite rightly will have a basis for judicial review of this matter. Moreover, these comments of some board members and their anticipated action cause every resident to question whether there is any semblance of proper procedure and adherence to town by-laws by our town officials.

North Cohasset is being overlooked

TO THE COHASSET WATER COMMISSIONERS:

Although this letter is addressed to you, I am asking that the Cohasset Mariner also print it as an open letter particularly to the residents of North Cohasset.

For at least two years, I have received telephonic reassurances that you (the water commissioners) would provide a written explanation of your reasons for selling water to Hingham while North Cohasset dangles in the wind with a 100-year-old (plus) water distribution system run out of the town of Hingham. While we pay the highest water rates in the state and are subject to onerous Hingham water restrictions, you trumpet the surplus water capacity of Cohasset. Aren't we part of Cohasset?

Has your business inclination to make water a "profit center" for Cohasset taken priority over the traditional responsibility of a community to provide utilities support to all of its residents?

Is Hingham going to buy more and more of Cohasset's excess capacity at a premium price and then the same water is going to be sold back to North Cohasset residents at a further profit to Hingham's private water company?

If nothing else, can you at least play the role of an "honest broker" to assure that our distribution system is updated, water rates do not exceed Cohasset's and water restrictions mirror the town of Cohasset?

The residents of North Cohasset are owed some very important answers. Please put it in writing and then sponsor a public meeting to explain the long-range plan.

Sewer connection rebate

TO THE EDITOR:

Those who have connected their principal residence to the town's sewer system should be aware that part of the cost can be recovered by filing Schedule SC "Septic Credit" as an amendment to the latest state income tax. The credit is 40percent of the cost, up to $6,000, with a max credit each year of $1,500. One must obtain a letter from the sewer department confirming that the hook up was mandated, and enclose a receipted bill from the hook-up contractor. The form SC is filed with form "Application for Abatement/Amended Return", both obtainable by phoning the Mass Dept. of Revenue. One does not file an amended return, only these two forms

Please don't call me for further info; that's all I think I know. The instructions that accompany Schedule SC provide all needed information.

TO THE EDITOR:

The beginning of a new year is a time in which many of us analyze the past year's accomplishments and failures with the hope of learning so that we can improve upon the prior year's results. As a group of neighbors living near the proposed Cedarmere development, we feel we have ineffectively communicated to the community our concerns with the proposed development and would like to use this forum to clearly state our major concern, which is the density of Cedarmere. It is not an "as of right" development and can only be built if the Town of Cohasset, through its elected officials, specifically the Planning Board, grant it a "Special Permit". Please listen to our appeal as this precedent setting case impacts the entire town.

The land upon which Cedarmere is proposed to be developed is zoned "Residence B District" which allows for single family residential development, subject to a minimum requirement of 35,000 square feet of land per home. Cedarmere's developers have applied to the Town of Cohasset for a "Special Permit" that would allow them to significantly increase the density of development on the site to 10 residential units per acre. The developer's application is the first that has been filed with Cohasset's Planning Board under a new zoning bylaw amendment, which created the "Senior Multi-

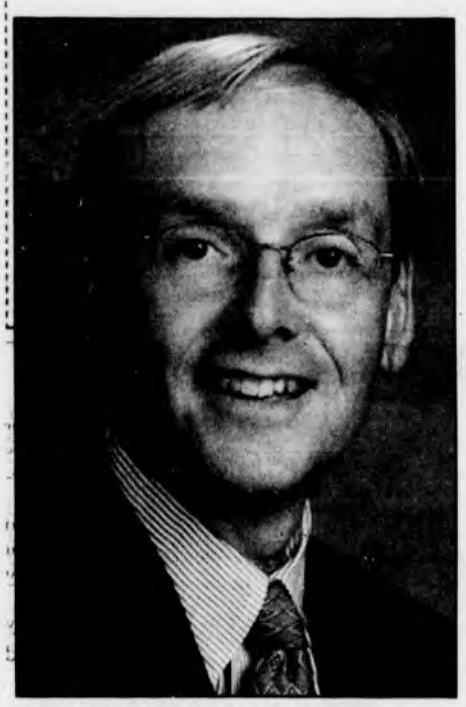
HEALTH NOTES

Should you be concerned about Mad Cow disease?

Between 1991 and now, Mad Cow disease essentially destroyed the beef industry in Britain, requiring the slaughter of hundreds of thousands of cattle, and has been implicated in the death of more than 150 people. Only 10 people outside of the UK have died, and there has never been a case of death associated with mad cow that did not have a history of exposure within a country where the disease was occurring. Further, in those cases where humans were infected, there appears to have been widespread use of beef byproducts such as blood used in black pudding and brains in the food supply.

Bovine spongiform encephalopathy (BSE) or Mad Cow disease is a neurological disorder of cattle that results from infection by an unconventional transmissible agent. Since 1991 more than 183,000 cases of BSE were confirmed in the United Kingdom in more than 35,000 herds. There is strong evidence and general agreement that the outbreak was amplified by feeding rendered bovine meat-and-bone meal to young calves. The use of such feed material was banned from use in the US and Canada in April 1997 when cow parts were prohibited from cattle feed. In the United Kingdom, where more than a million cattle may have been infected with BSE, a substantial species barrier appears to protect humans from widespread illness. As of Dec. 1, 2003, only 153 cases of the form of the disease which has infected humans had been reported worldwide; of these, 143 cases had occurred in the United Kingdom. According to the Center for Disease Control, the risk to human health from BSE in the United States is extremely low.

It seems that appropriate safeguards have been put in place to prevent tainted meat from reaching consumers.



There is strong evidence for a causal association between BSE and a variant of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease (CJD). The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) monitors the trends and current incidence of CJD in the United States by using data, compiled by its National Center for Health Statistics. The only case of variant CJD in the US occurred in 2002, in a 22-year-old Florida resident who was born in and grew up in the United Kingdom. In contrast to the classic form of CJD, the variant form apparently predominantly affects younger persons (median age at death around 29 years) and has atypical clinical features. These atypical features include prominent psychiatric or sensory symptoms early in the course of the illness, delayed onset of neurological abnormalities, duration of illness of at least 6 months, and an abnormal electroencephalogram.

On Dec. 23, 2003, the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) announced a presumptive diagnosis of bovine spongiform encephalopathy (BSE, or "mad cow" disease) in an adult Holstein cow from Washington State. Samples were taken from the cow on Dec. 9. The diagnosis was made on Dec. 22 and 23 at the National Veterinary Services Laboratory, Ames, Iowa. An extensive tracking process has managed determine that the cow was from a Canadian herd which had probably been fed tainted cattle feed before the ban. The incubation period for BSE can be as long as 6 years. Most of the animals which could have been a part the herds from which the sick cow was diagnosed have been identified. As a result, several US herds have been quarantined.

In summary, it seems that appropriate safeguards have been put in place to prevent tainted meat from reaching consumers. However, there may well be additional cows identified in this country which have contracted BSE. If so, it will be up to the USDA meat inspection program to effectively ensure that the food supply will remain free from tainted meat products. This will require tightening of a program which has recently received criticism for relaxed standards. From a health prospective, the risk is extremely small, but any such threat would create a major dislocation in our food distribution system. Although it is always necessary to be vigilant about the food products one buys, and to remain current on developing news about threats to our food supply, there seems to be little else that needs to be done to protect ourselves from the disease.

CANDIDATES CORNER

Robert "Rob" Spofford

Rob Spofford to run for Board of Selectmen

Robert "Rob" Spofford, current chairman of the Cohasset Schools Building and Facilities Committee, is pleased to announce that he will seek a seat on the Cohasset Board of Selectmen in the spring election.

"Being actively involved in this community has always been important to me," he says. "As the school projects come to a successful conclusion I wish to continue to serve Cohasset by running for this office. The experience I've gained through the school projects from working with numerous town committees to state officials will help me serve the community as we head into the future."

In addition to his work with the School Building Committee, Spofford has served on the board of the Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association helping to re-establish Cohasset's softball program and serving as its coordinator.

Professionally, Spofford is founder and president of The Spofford Group, a Hingham-based specialty insurance firm offering management liability and deal facilitation insurance coverage. He graduated from Northeastern University with a B.S. in Finance.

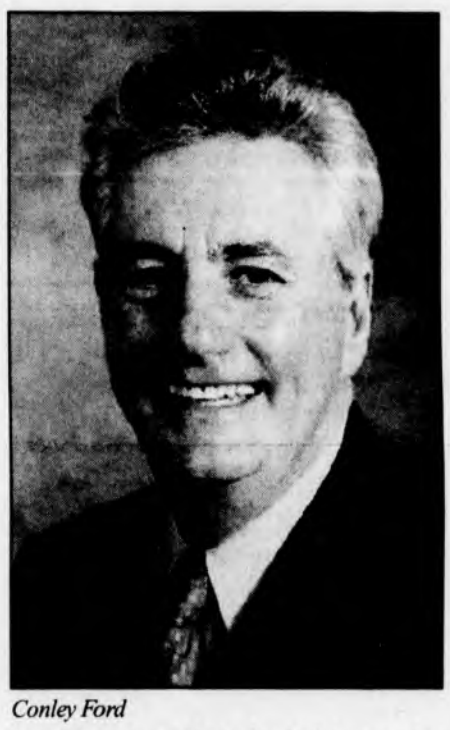
Palmer running for Water Commission

Having filed papers Jan. 5 in Cohasset Town Hall, Nathaniel Palmer announces his candidacy for the position of Cohasset Water Commissioner.

"I am running for Cohasset Water Commissioner to ensure that we have a world-class water supply – abundant, reasonably priced, and above all safe," Palmer states. "Upon election my goal will be to sustain these values, but also to see that Cohasset has the best tasting water on the South Shore!"

Palmer cites his work with the Water Commission over the past two years on matters such as the Avalon 40B development as key to the motivation for his candidacy. He believes that the combination of his business background and concerns for public health and environmental matters are well matched to the board of Water Commissioners.

Nathaniel Palmer



"Through my interactions with the Water Commission and attendance at board meetings, I have gained an appreciation for both the good work of the commission and the very real threats facing our water supply," Palmer explains. "I have also gained a new perspective on the operation of our water system, which is unlike any other area of government in that is truly run and managed as a business."

Palmer describes the coming years as a "new phase" for the Cohasset water system. "Cohasset is today on the cusp of a new and exciting phase for our water system, defined by the opportunity to truly revolutionize the business of delivering water and the quality of the water we deliver."

If elected to the three-member board, Palmer will be working with John McNabb and Glenn Pratt. Rob Kasameyer, who has served on the commission for nearly a decade, will not be seeking reelection.

For information on the campaign contact Nathaniel Palmer directly at 781-383-3339 or nathanielpalmer@msn.com

Palmer is an active member of the Cohasset community, and has been involved most recently on matters relating to protection of the Cohasset water supply watershed. He is a principal and Vice President of Delphi Group, a management consulting firm headquartered in Boston. Palmer is a graduate of Bentley College with a degree in Computer Information Systems, and has completed post-graduate study at Babson College's Olin School of Management.

Conley Ford

Ford is running for GOP State Committee

Conley Ford has announced his candidacy for the Republican State Committee for the Plymouth-Norfolk District that includes Weymouth, Hingham, Hull, Scituate, Norwell, Cohasset, Duxbury and Marshfield.

As a current member and immediate past chairman of the Scituate Republican Town Committee, Ford has first-hand knowledge of the effort it will take to make the state GOP a force to be reckoned with on Beacon Hill.

Ford says it is critical that a two-party system return to Massachusetts government.

"What we have now is a governor whose hands are tied because there aren't enough Republican legislators to sustain a veto," he says. "I will work tirelessly to ensure unenrolled Massachusetts voters realize the importance of registering Republican, electing Republicans, and getting involved in the political process."

A veteran of the U.S. Air Force with two sons now serving in the Army, Ford is proud to be an American and a resident of one of the very first states.

"Our government was founded on checks and balances — that balance is out of whack here in Massachusetts with a one-party State House," says Ford. "I have the energy, enthusiasm, drive and passion to see that changed."

Ford, 62, retired after 35 years in the telecommunications industry. He holds a Bachelor of Science degree from Wentworth Institute of Technology. Ford is a member of the Association of Massachusetts Republican Committees, the Plymouth County Republican Club, the Scituate-Marshfield Lions Club, the George H. Mealy American Legion Post, and is a graduate of the 2003 Citizens Legislative Program.

"With close to 2 million unenrolled voters in the state — which is approximately half of all registered voters — the Democrat-dominated Legislature is not representative of the people," Ford says. "I will sound the battle cry loud and clear that it's OK to be a Republican in Massachusetts. In fact, it is critical to the future of this great state and the lives of our children and grandchildren.

"Without a viable two-party system, Beacon Hill is like a runaway train," Ford says. "We need to put the brakes on and work toward a smaller, more efficient government and lower taxes. The economy of Massachusetts depends on it."

To accomplish that goal, the Massachusetts Republican Party has to attract unenrolled voters and new voters. "I will use my leadership skills to invigorate the party," Ford says. If you'd like to help the Ford campaign, call 781-545-0054 or email: cfordcon@comcast.net

DECEMBER - Principal of Amherst Regional High School is fired for permitting students to wish each other a Merry Christmas on school grounds. ACLU says it would like to help him but is saving its energies for serious Constitutional questions.

Cohasset Mariner Town Election Policy

Although the last day for taking out nomination papers isn't until Feb. 12, a great deal of interest is already being generated in this year's annual Town Election.

Therefore the Mariner wants to clearly state its election policy so there is no confusion.

As in keeping with our tradition, we will pose a Question of the Week to local candidates for the School Committee and Selectman and certain other races but not until after papers close in February.

All candidates opposed or unopposed, who have not already done so, are invited to submit photographs and formal statements announcing their candidacies. These will be run as space permits on a first-come, first-serve basis. There is no word limit, but candidates are advised to be as concise as possible.

Between now and the election, we will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (no more than 150 words per week), from any candidate — opposed or unopposed — who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers or brief position statements. Candidates must observe the word limits; submissions that exceed the word limit will be cut from the bottom.

Candidates may send by e-mail at mford@cnc.com; by fax at 781-741-2931, or by dropping off their responses at the Cohasset Mariner office in the Hingham Journal Building, 73 South St., Hingham Square. However they choose to deliver their answers, candidates should adhere to the noon, Tuesday deadline.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

If you have questions, or would like to suggest a Question of the Week, call Mary Ford at 781-741-2933 or contact her by e-mail at mford@cnc.com.

Editors' note: Candidates for Republican State Committee, which is also generating interest, will not have a Question of the Week. They are invited to submit formal announcements, if they have not already done so, and may submit weekly candidates corner items of no more than 150 words. That race will be decided March 2 during the Presidential Primary.

Gay marriage ruling tops the 'top 10' story list for 2003

STATEHOUSE ROUNDUP

CRAIG SANDLER

The Supreme Judicial Court's historic ruling on gay marriage was the top story of 2003 in Massachusetts state government, according to the reporters who cover Beacon Hill.

The gay marriage story was the easy winner of the annual State House News Service survey of Statehouse reporters. The ouster of William Bulger as president of the University of Massachusetts was ranked second. Reporters were asked to list the top 10 stories of 2003. Responses were ranked by a weighted point system.

Other stories of note mentioned by the scribes: the deployment of Massachusetts troops to Iraq as part of the number one national story of the year; the approval of Sunday liquor sales statewide after four centuries of Blue Law prohibition; the beginnings of an economic turnaround; and the presidential campaign of US Sen. John Kerry.

• Gay Marriage Ruling by SJC and Continuing Fallout — The eyes of the nation turned toward Massachusetts Nov. 17, when the Supreme Judicial Court ruled that to deny same-sex couples marriage licenses was to consign them to second-class citizenship. And, the court ruled, the Massachusetts Constitution bans second-class citizenship for anyone. The justices gave the Legislature 180 days to write a law recognizing same-sex couples as legitimate legal entities, but did not specify whether a "civil union" arrangement would satisfy the dictate. Debate over how to respond to the ruling, including the possibility of a constitutional ban on marriage for same-sex couples, is likely to occupy a great deal of time and attention in the coming year. The Legislature has asked justices to state whether a civil-union (legal rights but no marriage license) statute would satisfy the demands of the ruling.

• Bulger Ousted as UMass President — The new governor made former Senate chief William Bulger the personification of the "mess" he'd promised to clean up on Beacon Hill. When Bulger was forced to testify before a Congressional committee investigating whether the FBI had broken the law in its use of informants, the relationship between William Bulger and his gangster brother was brought front and center in the public consciousness. Attorney General Thomas Reilly earned the attention of the Beacon Hill community, and the wrath of many Democrats, for agreeing with Romney that Bulger should resign. After the dust had settled and vacation season began, Bulger did step down — but with a severance package and pension that added to the infamy Romney had helped create.

• Romney's First Year and Attempts at Reform — Though his approach is polite, Romney's arrival at the State House inaugurated a year of conflict, and no one should have been surprised. After all, he'd spent the prior year, an election year, arguing that the cast of characters already on Beacon Hill was a problem that needed solving, and he was the one to do it. While the governor's budget initially generated a fairly friendly response, within weeks the Democrats were calling it "dishonest" and relations between the parties went downhill from there.

• State Budget Cuts — One of the most significant consequences of the new governor's appearance on the Hill was the approach to solving the biggest budget problem (in dollar terms) in state history. Though predictions were repeatedly made that eventually, taxes would have to be raised again to cure the $3 billion problem, they never were. The solution: a mixture of fee increases, reserve fund spending and budget cuts. The cuts were felt most keenly by human service agencies, by local government as aid from the state was reduced, and in the higher education system.

• Big Dig Opens Major Highways — Never a simple story, the saga of the Central Artery was marked by irony in its 2003 chapter. As he guided the project into its crowning phase - the opening of three more tunnels created by all that Big Digging — Turnpike Authority Chairman Matthew Amorello found himself under escalating assault by CEO Romney, even as the project stayed under its (massively enlarged) budget and passed milestones ahead of schedule. Amorello invited ridicule by scheduling an expensive celebration of the ribbon cutting for the southbound side of the Central Artery, a party he finally had to call off after the governor called the event inappropriate.

• Workplace Smoking Ban Advances — One by one, communities around Massachusetts had adopted ordinances making smoking illegal in workplaces, including bars and restaurants. The tipping point for a statewide ban seemed to occur when Boston put its ban into effect, following New York's lead. With the state's capital city on board, and the Mass. Restaurant Association having dropped its longstanding opposition to the ban, the Senate followed the House in approving the ban just before formal sessions ended for the year Nov. 15. Final details remain to be worked out.

• Robert Travaglini Takes Over as Senate President — A half-dozen senators had vied to succeed Thomas Birmingham as president, but it was the affable, unassuming Travaglini who surprised many in the building by coming out on top. Though the election barely registered on the general public's radar screen, having a new person atop the Senate changed the dynamics of power for everyone with an interest in legislation or funding on Beacon Hill, and the implications spun out all year long.

• John Geoghan Murder - Prison Reform — After pedophile priest John Geoghan was killed behind maximum-security prison walls, the governor called the slaying a "failure of government" and ordered two investigations. The first was a review of whether lax policies or holes in standards led to the Geoghan killing specifically. The second, a commission headed by former Attorney General Scott Harshbarger, is likely to make headlines when it issues a report next year.

• MCAS Results and Controversy — The conventional thinking said the Massachusetts Comprehensive Assessment System test wouldn't last as a permanent graduation requirement, because as soon as kids started failing in large numbers, state leaders would be forced to abandon the system. What the conventional thinkers failed to anticipate is that the state's students would rise to the challenge. In a story with shades of "Stand and Deliver," kids statewide did in fact respond to higher standards by learning more, and the pass rate on MCAS turned out to be 90 percent. The success rate rose somewhat during the multiple retest phase, and while the controversy did not die out — the first high-stakes year of MCAS generated nothing like the protest and trauma that had been expected, because the system had done so well.

• Casino Gambling Defeated — The conventional wisdom was proved wrong on another front this year. For most of the year, those who thought they were in the know at the Statehouse anticipated that eventually, expanded gaming was going to be part of the solution to the budget problems. New Senate President Travaglini was far more tolerant of the idea than his predecessor, and House Speaker Finneran's opposition had palpably and publicly softened. But in the end, Travaglini kept his promise to listen to his members on the question, and after an intense and dramatic week of off-camera lobbying and on-camera debate, senators rejected casinos and slot machines — for now, anyway.

QUESTIONS

BHRC is sponsored and underwritten by Fleet Bank as a public service for readers of the Mariner. It is written by Bob Katzen who has covered the legislature for more than 25 years and has been providing this feature to newspapers since 1975.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week. This week, BHRC reports local representatives' roll call attendance records for the entire 2003 session.

The House held 476 roll call votes in 2003. BHRC tabulates the number of roll calls on which each representative was present and voting and then calculates that number as a percentage of the total roll call votes held. That percentage is the number commonly referred to as the roll call attendance record.

Several quorum roll calls, used to gather a majority of members onto the House floor to conduct business, are also included in the 476 roll calls. On the quorum roll calls, members simply vote "present" in order to indicate their presence in the chamber. When a representative does not indicate his or her presence on a quorum roll call, we count that as a roll call absence just like any other roll call absence.

The top five worst roll call attendance records belong to Rep. Mary Jane Simmons (D-Leominster) who missed 457 roll calls resulting in a 4 percent roll call attendance record; Rep. Brian Golden (D-Allston) who missed 261 roll calls (45.1 percent roll call attendance record); Rep. James Fagan who missed 195 roll calls (59.0 percent roll call attendance record); Rep. James Vallee (D-Franklin) who missed 183 roll calls (61.5 percent roll call attendance record) and Rep. Thomas George (R-Yarmouthport) who missed 158 roll calls (66.8 percent roll call attendance record).

LOCAL REPRESENTATIVES' ATTENDANCE RECORDS

The percentage listed next to the representative's name is the percentage of roll call votes for which the representative was present and voting. The number in parentheses represents the number of roll calls the representative missed.

GROUP INSURANCE DISCOUNTS (H 4295)- The House and Senate approved and sent to the governor a bill extending for one year an existing exemption to a state law that allows businesses and groups to participate in group discount auto and home insurance plans if at least 35 percent of the group's members participate. The exemption waives the 35 percent requirement for any group that received the discount in the prior year. Supporters said that the exemption expired on December 31 and noted that without the extension, hundreds of groups that qualified in 2003 will not be eligible for the 5 percent to 15 percent reduction in 2004. They noted these discounts save drivers millions of dollars and drive prices down by allowing insurance companies to compete.

VOTING EQUIPMENT (H 4243)- The House and Senate approved and sent to the governor a measure giving cities and towns until January 2, 2004 to purchase or lease new voting machines for use in the March 2, 2004 Massachusetts presidential primary. Current law establishes an earlier November 2, 2003 deadline. Sponsors say that the new machines are necessary to comply with new federal laws. They note that the extended deadline would allow communities to test the machines at the lower voter-turnout March 2 election in order to work out any problems. They point out that without the extension, communities would not be able to use the new machines until the November presidential election when voter turn out would be higher.

GAY MARRIAGE RULING- The Supreme Judicial Court ruled that the Legislature did not violate the Massachusetts Constitution in July 2002 when it adjourned the constitutional convention without voting on a proposed constitutional amendment to ban gay marriages. Massachusetts Citizens for Marriage gathered over 130,000 signatures for this initiative amendment that required the approval of 50 of the 2002 legislature's 200 members and 50 of the members of the 2003-2004 session in order to go on the 2004 ballot. The group had filed a suit alleging the violation and arguing that the adjournment was illegal and should be construed as "approval" of the proposal by the 2002 convention so that the matter would then be considered by the 2003-2004 convention and be eligible to go on the ballot in 2004. The court cited a 1992 case in which it ruled that there is no judicial remedy for the failure of a constitutional convention to act on a proposal. A similar proposal is on the agenda for a new convention in February. That proposal is a legislative proposal that is handled differently than the initiative one for which signatures were collected. It requires twice as many legislators' votes and would have to be approved by 100 members of both the 2004 and the 2005-2006 sessions in order to go on the 2006 ballot. The court ruled separately last month that denying gays and lesbians the right to marry violates the constitutional guarantee to equality and liberty under law. The court also gave the Legislature 180 days to take action it may deem appropriate in light of the opinion.

PROPERTY TAX HEARING- Gardner Auditorium at the Statehouse was the site of a special commission's public hearing on the problem of residential property taxes rising by as much as 40 percent in some communities because of increased residential real estate values, flat commercial real estate values and a state cap on commercial property taxes. The commission has until January 12 to make its recommendations. Many municipal leaders urged that the cap on commercial taxes be raised so that businesses would shoulder some of the burden along with residents. They said this simple and fair approach would prevent low and middle- income people from being forced to sell their homes. Business leaders testified that business owners are unable to afford the increased taxes that would simply result in businesses subsidizing all residents including wealthy ones. They urged a more balanced approach including targeted residential property tax exemptions that will offer relief to lower and middle-income taxpayers.

Family Residence Overlay District". It represents the trial run for an amendment that is not site specific and could be applied to any 10-acre assemblage of land in Cohasset zoned as "Residence B or C District ".

This is not just our battle, as abutters and neighbors to the proposed development, for Cedarmere will set a precedent for the implementation of the "Senior Multi-Family Overlay District" that could affect the majority of residential real estate owners in Cohasset. Remember the bylaw is not site specific. If a group of your neighbors assemble 10 acres of land by aggregating their home lots, they can apply for this "Special Permit" and if it is granted, demolish their homes and build 100-plus units on their former home sites. Think of the devastating impact the granting of "Special Permits" under this bylaw will have on property values in Cohasset, when the public recognizes that a neighborhood's zoning density is unprotected and that the Planning Board can issue a "Special Permit" that increases your neighbor's density by a factor of eight. If you think it can't happen to you, think again, we have spent months trying to control the density of the proposed development to no avail.

One of the five stated purposes of the bylaw, as stated in Section 16.2.4, is "to promote flexibility in land use planning in order to improve site layouts, protection of natural features and environmental values and utilization of land in harmony with neighboring properties". Anyone who has taken the time to review the proposed site plan and schematic design for Cedarmere in the context of the actual land parcel will be baffled as to how this purpose is served. The site, the former Hayes estate off Beechwood Street, is surrounded by established single family homes and currently improved with an approximately 5,000 square foot home, a barn, a pool house and a cabin. The proposed development demolishes all but the barn and the foundation of the former Hayes residence then adds 41 additional buildings, including a large "Manor House" near the Flint, Kennedy and McCullough residences. This building is approximately the same size as the Sunrise Assisted Living Facility on Route 3A. The introduction of such a large commercially inspired building with underground parking in this residential setting is totally out of context with the neighbors' property.

Another stated purpose, Section 16.2.3, is " to provide a type of housing which reduces residents burdens of property maintenance and which reduces demands on municipal services". We find it inconceivable that increasing the Town's housing stock by approximately 5 percent with units that reportedly average 2,400 square feet in size will result in a reduction in the demands on the town's municipal services.

A third stated purpose, Section 16.2.2, is "to promote the development of housing affordable to low, moderate and median income elderly persons". It has not been determined whether the proposed "Affordable" units will qualify as "Affordable" under the state's guidelines since they have been designed as significantly smaller units and are segregated from all but six of the "Market Rate" units in a separate building on Route 3A.

The developer's have asked the Planning Board for numerous variances to the conditions prescribed in this new bylaw establishing the "Senior Multi-Family Overlay District", the most troubling of which is approval prior to addressing the disposal of wastewater generated by the project. The Sewer Commission has prudently denied the developer's request for a pre-emptive hook-up to the Cohasset's sewer system. Granting a permit with such a significant unresolved issue as wastewater disposal is irresponsible and illegal according to research conducted by both our counsel and reportedly the town's counsel. Why grant even a conditional approval when logic indicates that it will be invalidated in the future?

In spite of attending all of the public Planning Board meetings addressing the proposed Cedarmere development and expressing our collective concerns with the project, no material modifications have been made. The density of the project remains as initially proposed, 105 units in August 2003, 105 units in January 2004. While we have continued to voice our concerns about the density of the project, surface water discharge, wastewater disposal, environmental impacts, traffic congestion and noise during construction, our commentary has fallen on deaf ears. We have been told of the "many" concessions made by the developer, but to date have seen none. The only concessions made, which are very clear and numerous, are those made by the Planning Board in its effort to approve this project.

We ask you to call the members of the Planning Board prior to the Jan. 14 meeting and request that they deny the application. This proposed development has been pushed through the approval process at warp speed in spite of significant unresolved concerns. The treatment and handling of wastewater from a 105-unit development on a difficult site that yielded eight "percable" lots in an environmentally sensitive area is not a "loose end". We are privileged to live in our beautiful town of Cohasset - together we should make the effort to ensure it is developed responsibly.

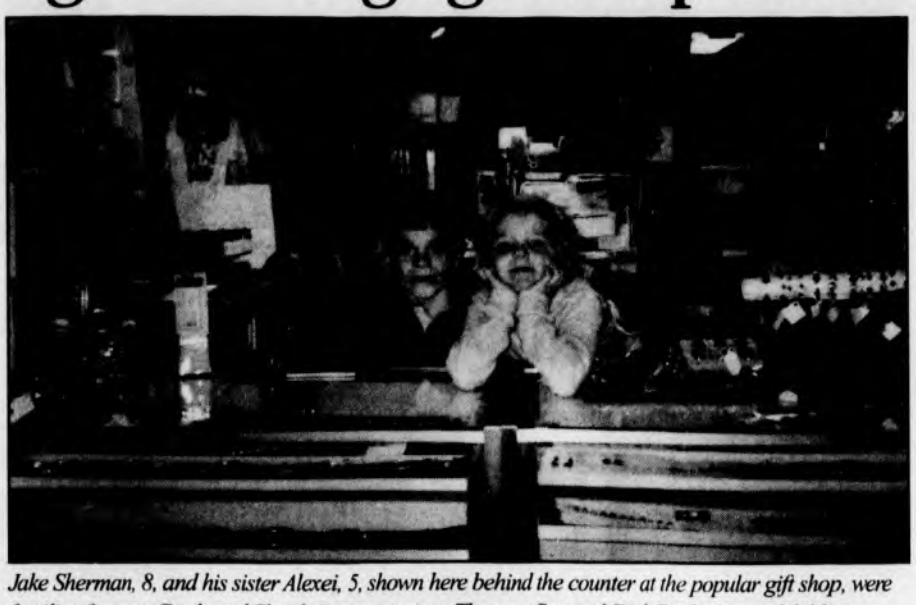
her Tuesday, are going to miss the camaraderie as much as anything.

"I've worked here for four years and I came here for 30," says Betty Driscoll. "I'm going to miss the people I work with and work for.



"The Straleys are fantastic people to work for, they would never ask you to do what they wouldn't do themselves."

Nancy Pottenger, who has worked at Cards and Shards for 35 years including nearly a decade with former owner Bob Fesler, says "shards" means treasures. "The kind you find in an archeological dig," she says.

The definition provides the perfect metaphor for the shop that offered everything from jewelry to hand-painted furniture and souvenirs where customers could have fun digging for the right gift.

The oldest customer, Straley recalls, was 102 and the youngest was just three days old, when some parents stopped by with their newborn on the way home from the hospital to buy birth announcements.

With the Music Circus around the corner, Julie Andrews, Ann Murray and even Liberace have stopped in to shop.

Jake Sherman, 8, and his sister Alexei, 5, shown here behind the counter at the popular gift shop, were familiar faces at Cards and Shards in recent years. They are Sue and Dick Straley's grandchildren.

When the front half of the store was transformed into a deli for "Eastwick," customers got "really confused," Straley says.

"They swore we were a deli and wanted us to sell them a sandwich," she says with a laugh. "We had to put a sign up saying 'this is a gift store not a deli.'"

She and her staffers at the time recall eating lunch with Michelle Pfeiffer, Susan Sarandon and Cher in the back yard behind the shop for 10 days.

Jennifer Sherman, the Straleys' daughter, says it took some time to find a new tenant for the space They wanted to find a company that would adhere to the same principles of integrity, commitment and service that has been the hallmark of her family over the years. Altbough she declined to reveal the name of the new business, she says Cohasset won't be disappointed and that there will a retail element in the space.

The Straleys are interested in selling the 200-plus year old building that includes five apartments and Cohasset Dog Wash.

Straley thinks of her customers and staff as friends and is grateful for their support.

"I want to thank all of my friends for the best years of my life so far," she says.

Lady hoopsters split decisions with Sacred Heart

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

The Cohasset girls varsity basketball team rocketed into 2004 with four straight wins and only one setback. In the latest matchups the Lady Skippers traded wins with a very tough Sacred Heart team.

The first contest came on the last Monday of December in Cohasset. After the initial jump ball, the visitors fired away with six unanswered points. In short, the Sacred Heart team blew past the Skippers defense. When the buzzer rang at the end of the first half, the outlook appeared mighty grim.

Whatever coach John Levangie said to his team at half time remains a mystery. But the fire he lit under his team probably matched the fireworks on New Years Eve. The Skippers totally turned the game around in the second half. The imaginary lid came off the Skippers' hoop. They clamped down hard in their defense. At the buzzer, the Lady Skippers walked off the court with an impressive 48-40 victory.

"What a great game," remarked coach Levangie. "In the second half, the girls put together a solid offense and solid defense. They saw what they were capable of doing".

Leading the team in scoring, Casey Anderson tallied up 17 points. Ashley Faber followed with 15 and Danielle Pinkus with 10. On defense, senior Courtney Caron shut down

CHS boys basketball team loses three tough ones in a row

By Mark Goodman
CORRESPONDENT

How easily could the record of the Cohasset boys basketball team be 4-2 right now rather than 2-4? So easily it hurts...literally.

Playing a 40-minute game is the norm at the college level, not high school.

That is exactly what happened, however, to the Cohasset boys hoops team, as they lost a tough double-overtime game to Canton, 69-66, in the opening round of the school's holiday tournament on Dec. 27.

The Skippers appeared to have things in hand halfway through the second extra frame, as a Trevor Brady 3-pointer put them up 66-59 with two minutes left.

Canton called a timeout and got its offense together, scoring seven quick points to tie the game. Bulldog forward Sean Talbot then drew a foul with 8.6 seconds remaining.

After making the first, Talbot missed the second, but the rebound was bobbled by two Cohasset players and fell into the hands of Canton's Chris Feeney. After a timeout, Canton's Bryan Cogliano was fouled and made both free throws.

The situation was desperate for Cohasset, as they had 1.1 seconds to go the length of the court and hit a three to force a third overtime. A long inbound pass from Sean Connolly to Chris Bilodeau produced a decent look from 25 feet out, but Bilodeau's shot came up short.

It was the culmination of a riveting game, as neither team had a lead higher than six points until the second overtime. It was also a breakout game of sorts for Cohasset sophomore guard Trevor Brady, who had 18 points.

Fourteen of those came after halftime, including a trio of clutch treys down the stretch. Highlights of Brady's performance included a trifecta to tie the game at 53 with two minutes left in regulation, and another three that gave the Skippers their seven-point lead in the second overtime.

Head coach Ron Ford's team was shorthanded to begin with, and then saw two more players foul out during the course of

Norwell-Cohasset gymnasts knock off undermanned Hanover

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

A win is a win is a win.

Considering both of her Norwell-Cohasset gymnastic team's losses last year came to Hanover, coach Kara Connerty was quite happy to take a victory 119.5-105.4 win over an undermanned Hanover squad on Monday.

With a couple of gymnasts out due to illness and/or injury, the Lady Indians had just four gymnasts available for this week's much awaited showdown, and thus had to take zeroes in two events.

Junior Molly Fanning took firsts in the floor (8.85), bars (8.65) and vault (8.4) on her way to a win in the all-around (33.35), and senior teammate Keri Gerrish won the balance beam (8.0) and took second in the all-around (33.1) for Hanover (0-1).

"I think it would have been a close match if Hanover had had its full roster," asserted Connerty, whose team improved to 2-0 with the win. "Some of our gymnasts didn't have their best days. I think the rematch (with Hanover on Jan. 22) will be a very competitive."

The Nor-Coh's received a strong performance from Norwell's Samantha Rosen. The junior captain took third in the all-around (31.0). She tied teammate Nancy Durkin for second on floor (8.15) and teammate Jenn Guiney for third on vault (8.05).

Guiney also took third place points on the bars (7.45) and

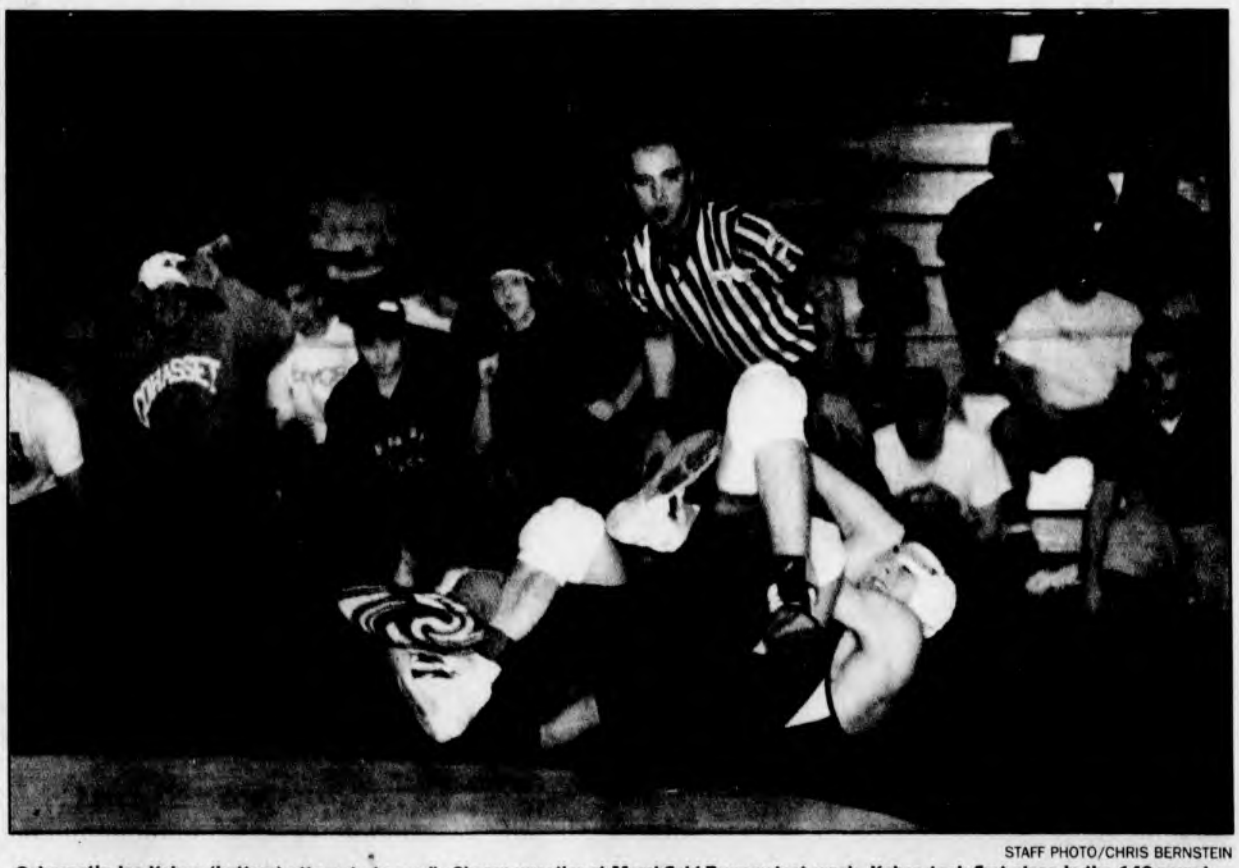
CHS grapplers show well at Marshfield, W-H tourneys

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset High wrestling team is still not where coach Torin Sweeney would like it.

"I'm happy with the record and some of the results, but I still feel we have to work a lot harder the next couple of weeks to get where we need to be," said the 21st year CHS coach. "We lost some practice time with the snow days and the football season going long. So we're behind where we should be at this point in the season."

Of course, as any one familiar with CHS wrestling is aware, coach Sweeney sets the bar a good deal higher than most wrestling coaches in this area. All he did last winter was direct the Skippers to a program best 18 wins, a Pilgrim Conference title and second place at the Div. 3 south sectionals last year. Never one to rest on his laurels, coach Sweeney has set those achievements as the benchmarks for this season.



"I think we should compete for our league championship and be at the top of our section too," stated Sweeney matter-of-factly.

The CHS grapplers are off to a 5-1 start, their lone loss a tough one to Div. 1 power B.C. High with a couple of starters out of action due to illness or injury, including junior Jonathan Littauer, the defending sectional champion at 103 pounds.

Littauer, recovering from double knee surgery, made his season debut this weekend at the annual Whitman-Hanson Tourney at 130 pounds and won three matches before falling to Rockland's Bryan Sforza on points in the championship bout. Included in those wins was a decisive semifinals victory of Whitman-Hanson's Andrew Biggins, who earlier in the week had won the Marshfield Tourney title at 130.

"I think Jonathan just had nothing left in the tank for that fourth bout," assessed Sweeney. "It's pretty amazing to think what he did, though, coming into this thing without any fights and not a lot of training.

Norwell stuns Cohasset in early SSL hockey showdown, 5-0

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Hockey, as much as any other sport, is a game of momentum. Norwell's 5-0 win over Cohasset on Saturday is proof positive of that.

Two-time defending South Shore League champion Cohasset was viewed as the favorite heading into the Saturday night showdown at Pilgrim Arena versus the league rival Clippers. However, the favored Skippers simply seemed unprepared for the emotion the Norwell squad came out with and, before they could right their ship, the Clippers had scored three times.

"We just came out flat, the same way we have the last few games, and this time it cost us big" said first year Cohasset coach Ben Virga. "We just didn't do the things we've been doing in practice, and Norwell did do those things. That's why they won."

Junior Mike Guerra put the Clippers on the board first and senior Terry Smallcomb made it 2-0 a few minutes later on the power play. The lead swelled to 3-0 when first year senior player Kris Tedeschi scored his first high school goal.

To the surprise of no one, Cohasset came out flying in the second period. However,

Mite C1

The Mite C1s came out strong and focused this week against Hingham. They played solid positional hockey from beginning to end, earning Stars goalie Derek Benson the shutout by a score of 9-0. Each line worked well together, especially the first line off the bench which scored 7 of the 9 goals. Pat Shea, Brodie Jackisch and Tucker Ambrose played up front with Tommy Prendergast and Brendan O'Connell on defense. Shea had an impressive 3 goals, demonstrating his stick handling and skating skills, and of course, his accuracy shooting the puck. Ambrose had 2 goals thanks as always to his keen sense of timing out in front, great shooting and good passing from his linemates. Prendergast also scored one, reacting quickly and successfully shooting and scoring on a deflected shot by Shea. The second line off the bench was much more challenged by Hingham, but defensemen Charlie Blackington and Colby Comeau were sharp and focused and played sound defensive hockey. They held their positions and kept Hingham out of the zone except for a few plays. Their offense, Adam Benson, Jake Burchill and borrowed player Brian Bowman, worked the puck for several good shots each, but Bowman was the only one to be able to get the puck past Hingham for a goal. The third line off the bench got the last two goals for the Stars, both coming from Colin MacDonald. MacDonald was supported on offense by Charlie Michalowski and Brian Palmieri, who both played hard and had several very good scoring bids. The defensive team of Kevin Meehan and Justin Fein were definitely challenged by the forward line of Hingham but worked hard to protect Benson. The drama of the game came on this line in the last few seconds as the Stars raced to catch a breakaway, only to be called for tripping. The tension and excitement rose as Hingham took a penalty shot, but it ended in a save by Benson and thus the shutout, much to the relief of all the Stars.

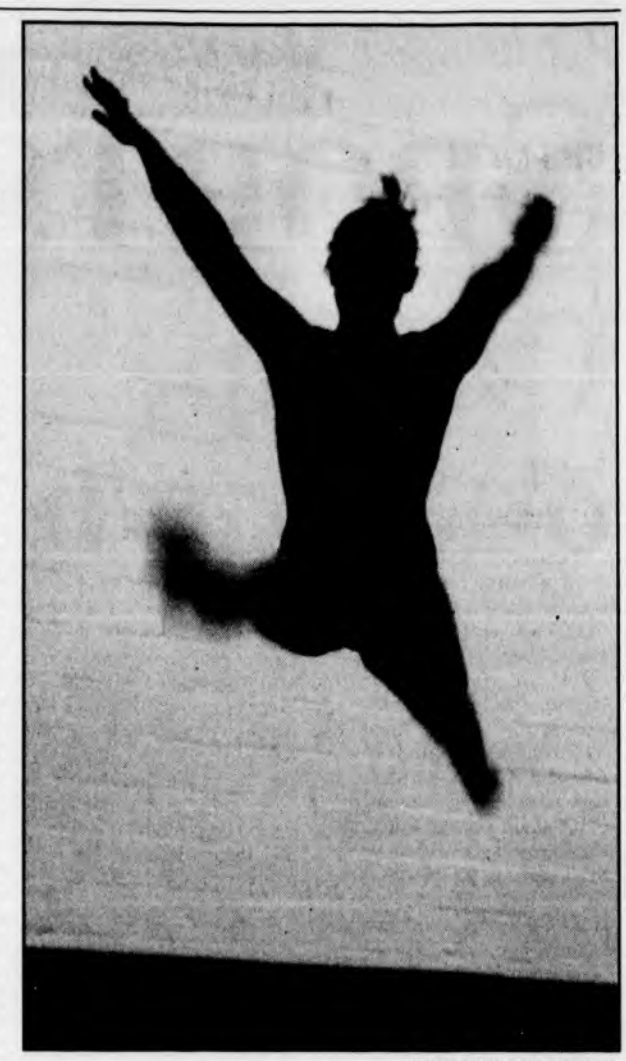
Mite C2

On Sunday, the Coastal Stars Mites C-2 skated to a 2-2 tie with Pembroke at the Hobomock Arena. From the opening minutes, this was an action packed game with plenty of up and down play. Pembroke carried the early advantage with several scoring opportunities and offensive pressure on Stars goalie Kal Maier. Maier was phenomenal in net for the Stars thwarting Pembroke from building an early lead. The Stars began to shake off some early jitters with a couple of strong shifts by the front line of Jack Evitts, Joey Redfearn and Patrick Graham. This line combined for some good passing and shots on net during the latter half of the first period. Matt Boudreau played well on defense and provided good blue line support to his line. Fellow defenseman Mike McPartlin made a key defensive play stopping a Pembroke drive that would have resulted in an uncontested shot on goal. The Stars defense held strong in the second period with defenseman Jeremy Archibald displaying his all out skating skills and puck control in the defensive end. As the period wore on, the Stars began to put it together with quality scoring opportunities from both Tristan Wiggin and Robbie Bertone. Pembroke countered with another break away that resulted in Maier's best save of the game. With three minutes left in the period, the Stars got on the board first with Patrick Graham scoring on a nifty curl to the net. The Stars kept up the pressure for the remainder of the period with strong offensive play from center Joe Proctor and wings Robert Reidy and Jack Kaetzer. Trailing 1-0 in the third, Pembroke was finally able to put one past Maier, tieing the game with 14:33 left in the period. About a minute later, Pembroke scored again to take a 2-1 advantage over the Stars. For the rest of the period, the Stars battled back and contained Pembroke with solid defensive play and puck control by Matt Doyle and Aitlan Beresford. With a minute left to play, Brendan Evitts picked up the puck behind the Pembroke goal and wrapped one around the left post tieing the game 2-2. The Stars continued to apply offensive pressure in the final moments but were unable to break the tie.

Mite C4

The Coastal Stars Mite C-4 team played a lively match against the Eagles at Rockland Arena, and came out with a hard-fought 2-1 victory. The Stars played an excellent game in front of Joe Deyeso, making his goaltending debut this season. The Eagles did manage to get some excellent chances late in the game, but Deyeso stood tall and preserved the victory with some terrific saves. Jeff Nagle played his typically stong game, staking the Stars to a 1-0 lead in the first period, capitalizing on some hustling forechecking from linemates Sam Rice and Tommy O'Brien. Mickey Barry and Ryan McGovern had excellent games on that line as well, providing ferocious backchecking and giving the Eagles little room to work with on the ice. Christopher Lund was an offensive powerhouse in the game, scoring a brilliant goal after being sprung on a breakaway on a sweet saucer pass by brother Michael Lund, putting the Stars up 2-0 and rekindling fond memories of the Hull brothers glory days for the Chicago Blackhawks. Zack Coggins turned in an outstanding game, generating many scoring opportunities, as did Teddy Craven, who was a force in the offensive zone all game long. The Star's were able to keep the Eagles offense at bay for much of the game, thanks in large part to Seamus Feeney and Colin Bell, who made a number of strong lead passes and clearing efforts to relieve any pressure in their own zone. Robert Bothwell played an inspired game, controlling the play on several occasions, and fending off as many as four Eagles players single-handedly while cycling the puck in the corner. The Eagles scored late to pull within a goal, but the Stars were able to maintain control and preserve the lead thanks to the dominating play of Mats Nelson and Eric Weinstein. Their strong effort helped offset the absence of Liam McHugh, who was a late scratch due to illness but has been a key ingredient to the Star's successful season thus far.

Mite A



The Mite A Coastal Stars ran into an undermanned South Shore Eagles team that gave the Stars all they could handle. Tommy Dixon's goaltending proved to be the difference in an exhilarating 5-4 win that was in question to the very end. The Eagles played with determined energy throughout a game of up-and-down, two-way hockey. After giving up the early lead, the Stars responded a couple of minutes later after Kenny Parnell's rifle shot from the right circle was saved. Colin Whelan crashed the net through a crowd and slammed the rebound home. The Stars defense stepped up as Andrew Geddes played the body to stop a rush, and Jared McCrystal thwarted a rush at his blue line with a poke check. With six minutes left, Kenny Parnell flipped in the rebound off a Frank Lemieux wrister for the Stars' first lead. Kevin McDougall hustled back to break up an Eagle rush, then passed off the boards to spring Terrence Doonan on a break that was saved. Colin Whelan was somehow robbed by a glove save after he worked the puck in from the blue line and fired one from the slot that was headed for top corner. In the second period, after the Eagles tied the score, a Jeremy Duchini pass through center ice sprung Frank Lemieux, who lifted the go-ahead goal over the goaltender's shoulder. Will Golden was rejected on a rush and shot from the left side. Chris Cohen, Will DeCoste, and Jonathan Spitz applied pressure with their forechecking, but the Eagles tied the score with a shot from the slot with 4:17 left and the period ended in a tie. The Eagles kept pressuring the Stars in the third. Tommy Dixon saved a 2-on-0 breakaway with the glove, and Brian Smith blocked a shot out front. With a little over three minutes left, Colin Whelan again hustled to the rebound of a Frank Lemieux shot, and the Stars had a 4-3 lead. A minute later, Terrence Doonan backchecked and gained the puck at center ice. He passed to Connor Maher, who worked the puck for a hard riser from the slot. Doonan got to the rebound and fired it to the top right corner for a 5-3 lead. But the Eagles never quit. They scored with six seconds left on a breakaway, and ran out of time when the buzzer sounded.

Squirt A

Kevin Kelly earned his first shut out of the season, but as has been the case all season with the Stars Squirt-A team it was a team effort that lead to 3-0 victory. Before the game the boys talked about the odd man rushes and less than acceptable backchecking effort that were a part of their previous game, and were determined to put in a better showing against the Eagles. They played such a complete defensive game that they allowed no more than five shots on net. The defensive four of Pat Cull, Matt Entwistle, Brian Scott and Will Schorle made good decisions coming out of the defensive zone and stood up the Eagles at the blue line for three periods. Their ability to play aggressive at the blue line was a result of the solid backchecking support the got from all of the forwards during the contest. Tyler Martina, John Collins and Alex Evans were tenacious backcheckers as were the rest of the forwards. The game went into the third period even at zero and the Stars realized just how important their defensive work was. They were once again outplaying their opponent, but were not ahead on the score board. That changed when Travers Craven, on a pretty feed from Ryan Donovan, wristed a hard shot past the Eagles goaltender to draw first blood. Connor McLean earned an assist on the play as he made a terrific play forcing a turnover that lead to the offensive chance. The Stars struck again on a John Meehan goal that was set up on a pretty pass by Tyler Martina and they put the Eagles away on a goal by Pat Cull from the right point position. Connor McLean showed great patients on the Cull goal as he fought off a defender and waited for Cull to break into open space before making a enabling Cull to score. The Stars improved to 8-3 -2 on the season.

PeeWee C1

The Pee-Wee C1 team won its ninth game of the season on Sunday, beating Westwood with a score of 5-2. The Stars played solid two-way hockey through all three periods. The defensive unit comprised of Geoff Evans, Mike O'Halloran, Connor Ofsthun, and Joe Fitzsimmons played another very strong defensive game. The Stars defense was aided with great goaltending from substitute net minder Willie Lundberg, who turned back countless shots throughout the game. Although Westwood capitalized on an ill-timed line change early in the first period that led to a two-man break and gave Westwood its only lead of the game, the Stars came pounding back with terrific passing and shooting throughout the game. Gordie Smith scored the first goal for the Stars. Smith's goal was set up with perfect passing from winger Mike Caira and center Justin Yeager. Smith returned the favor a short time later with a nice lead pass of his own to set up Caira for the Stars' second goal. The Smith-Caira duo combined once again later in the second period to put the Stars up by a score of 3-1. Westwood pressed on, however, and late in the second period reduced the Stars' lead to only one goal. But, the Stars dug in and benefited by the fine play of Center Andrew Bell and wingers Kevin O'Connell and Phil Murphy. The Stars' tenacity paid off a short time later as they scored their fourth goal on a great rush by Chris Fazzina that was set up with a terrific lead pass by defensemen Connor Ofsthun. The Stars' final goal was scored by winger Brian Meehan who rushed the length of the ice and beat the Westwood goalie to his weak side.

Obviously, we've got pretty high hopes for him this season now that he's healthy."

Cohasset finished second in the nine team field to perennial Div. 1 powerhouse Weymouth, who Sweeney believes may have its best team in years. Weymouth, whose wrestlers bested their Cohasset counterparts in all but one bout, took championships in nine of the 14 weight divisions and finished with 252 points, while Cohasset was a distant second with 150, barely holding off King Phillip (148).

Senior captain Phil Strazzulla was the only champion for Cohasset. He dominated all comers at 145, winning all four of his bouts by major decision.

Second place finishes were turned in by freshman Ryan McLellan at 103, junior Joey Kehoe at 140, junior Matt Casey at 160 and junior Matt Baroudi at 215. Baroudi, who advanced to New England's last fall, lost to Weymouth's Sid Reeves in the finals.

Sophomore Jake Watts was third at 103. Ditto for Kevin Dinsmore at 125 and Dave McKenna at 135. McKenna was wrestling up from 130 to make room for Littauer, and the coach was impressed with the toughness and determination shown by the sophomore.

The Skippers were almost as impressive at the annual Marshfield Tourney, held last Monday and Tuesday at Marshfield High, taking fifth out of 24 teams.

Kehoe (140) and Baroudi (215) each swept their respective classes to win championships, while Strazzulla lost in the finals and had to settle for second place points.

Casey was fourth at 160, while McKenna took seventh at 130 and McLellan did the same at 103.

Division 2 powerhouse Somerset won the Marshfield Tourney with 174 points, followed by Div. 1 monsters Plymouth South (142) and Bridgewater-Raynham (128.5). Carver, both a Pilgrim Conference and Div. 3 rival to Cohasset, edged the Skippers for fourth place. However, Sweeney believes the return of Littauer as well as the "shaping up" of a few other key wrestlers will level the playing field with Carver before it's all said and done.

"I think that's going to be a dogfight when new get together with Carver," asserted Sweeney, looking ahead to the Jan. 21 showdown at home. "We're strong in a lot of the same areas as them. It'll be a good one."

Prior to that showdown, the CHS grapplers were set to face Hull yesterday, will travel to Holliston for a quad meet this Saturday with Duxbury, Barnstable and the host Panthers.

Youth lacrosse signups Jan. 10

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse will hold its sign-up for the spring season on Saturday, Jan. 10 from 9 a.m. to noon at Cohasset High School.

This will be the only day to register. Spaces are limited at all age levels; while Cohasset Youth Lacrosse endeavors to accept everyone who files their paperwork on registration day, the program has had to turn children away at some age levels in the past.

Registrations will be taken for both boys and girls in the 14 & Under (7th and 8th graders) and 12 & Under (5th and 6th grades) age groups. At the 10 & Under level (grades 3-4), Cohasset will field teams for boys and sponsor a weekly skills-development clinic for girls.

The youth lacrosse program is dedicated to introducing children to the sport. All players receive roughly equal playing time regardless of ability. Cohasset participates in the Mass Bay Youth Lacrosse League, the nation's largest youth lacrosse organization, which does not keep standings or have playoffs. Every team makes several road trips per year, which be as close as games in Scituate or as far away as Martha's Vineyard.

In addition, the program is hopeful of attending a jamboree near the end of its season, and is working to develop a special Memorial Day weekend program with teams from Vermont. The season ends with Cohasset's annual Family Day in June.

The youth program may field as many as 12 teams this spring, depending on demand and available coaching. In spite of that growth, roster spots at all levels will be limited and it is possible that some youngsters will be turned away.

"As popular as the program has become, the challenge for us is to keep rosters small enough so that everyone gets the right kind of experience," says Chuck Jaffe, coordinator of Cohasset Youth Lacrosse. "To that end, we are willing to guarantee anyone who makes sign-up day a spot on our teams. But if our rosters are at or beyond the ideal size when we close our registration, there will be no late registration whatsoever."

Parents who can not attend the Jan. 10 registration should contact Jaffe by e-mail at CAJaffe@aol.com in sufficient time to have registration materials mailed and returned prior to Jan. 10. Include your name, address and the number of children being registered.

The registration fee is $135, which includes a uniform and a youth membership in US Lacrosse, the national governing body for lacrosse. US Lacrosse membership includes mandatory insurance coverage and a subscription to a magazine especially designed for kids. Cohasset Youth Lacrosse does offer discounts to families with two or more players; the cost is $250 for two players and $360 for three. The girls 10-and-Under clinic costs $85, or $75 if a family has two or more players in the program. Clinic players do not receive US Lacrosse membership.

Late registrations, if roster spots are available, will cost $225.

The program is limited to Cohasset residents; players at the 14-and-Under level can play regardless of whether they are active on Cohasset's Middle School teams, or if they play on the team of a private school.

In general, both boys and girls games are played Sunday afternoons. The spring practice schedule has not yet been set. The teams will begin practicing indoors in early March and begin playing games in April. The season concludes in mid-June.

In addition to players, the program is looking for additional coaches at all levels.

Lacrosse is a contact sport; at all levels for boys, practices and games include hitting. In accordance with Mass Bay Youth Lacrosse League rules, all boys must be equipped with sticks, gloves, shoulder and elbow pads, and helmets with mouthpieces. Hockey helmets are not allowed, although hockey arm and shoulder pads are (hockey gloves are not flexible enough to allow a child to manipulate and control a lacrosse stick).

The girls game has less contact, but practices will be every bit as physical and demanding as for the boys. All girls must be equipped with sticks, mouthpieces and approved goggles.

There will be more information on the Cohasset Youth Lacrosse program available at the Jan. 10 sign-up. If you need more information, or are interested in volunteering to coach, contact Jaffe at 781-383-9858 or CAJaffe@aol.com.

If it wasn't for bad luck...

the game. Taking that into consideration, Ford said he liked the effort from his team.

"We played great for 38 minutes," he said. "Everyone played well. It would have been nice to win, but it wasn't from a lack of effort. I'm really proud of our kids."

Bilodeau matched Brady's 18 points, and also had six rebounds and nine assists. Connolly turned in a great performance with 16 points and 13 boards. Ford praised his center's effort after the game, as he played well down the stretch despite having four fouls.

Cohasset got off to a rough start in this game, as the visiting Bulldogs scored the first six points. The Skippers had trouble taking care of the basketball and were not making shots when they had them.

At about the 10-minute mark, things started to pick up for the home team. The Skippers switched between a 2-1-2 and a 1-2-2 zone to confuse the Canton offense, while they started getting to the basket on the other end. Brady and Connolly were particularly effective in this area, as they combined to take nine free throws in the first half.

The Skippers ended the half on a positive note, as point guard John Andrade made a three off of a broken play to give Cohasset a 26-25 lead at the break.

The second half went back and forth throughout, as both teams started to run more and pick up the pace on both ends of the floor. Brady and Canton's Greg Lyons (15 points after halftime) both got hot with their outside shooting.

The game also got a little chippy in the final minutes of regulation, as numerous fouls were called on both teams. The result was a lot of free throws, including 16 by Cohasset in the second half.

Had one more of those free throws gone in, the Skippers would have played in the next night's championship game. But it was not meant to be.

Cohasset's Sean Connelly (#4) and Dan Tarpey (#44) give Holbrook's Sean Gavin something to think about on his way to the hole in recent non-league action.

The tough loss may have carried over to the next night, where Cohasset lost to Hull, 60-46, in the tournament's consolation game. This game was closer than the score indicated, according to coach Ford, as the Pirates opened up their double digit lead inside the final minute.

The tough luck continued when the Skippers got back into action on Tuesday, and lost a 53-52 heartbreaker to Archbishop Williams to fall to 2-4 on the season. This game followed a script eerily similar to the Canton loss.

The Skippers led by eight with four minutes left to play, but saw the visiting Bishops come all the way back and send the game into OT. The Skippers also took a lead in overtime, but again failed to hold it.

The gamewinning hoop seemed a symbol of the hardships the CHS boys have endured the last three games. With the Skippers up two, senior point guard John Andrade (15 points on five 3-pointers) took an elbow to the head as he attempted to bounce around a screen, allowing his man to pop wide open for the go-ahead three with eight seconds to play.

Bilodeau (18 points) again got the final look for the Skippers, but his runner in the lane rolled off the rim as time expired.

Despite the loss, coach Ford was extremely pleased with the effort put forth by his troops

"Our effort was tremendous all night," said the veteran coach. "The kids executed everything I asked. They did everything but hit their free throws."

In point of fact, the Skippers missed all 10 of their final chances from the charity stripe, including the front end of a few one-and-ones at the end of regulation.

"Those were killers," continued Ford. "We make just one of those 10 shots and it's a much different story. I just feel bad for the kids, though. They played really hard.

"The bottom line, though, is that we've got to find a way to pull these games out. We're putting ourselves in a position to win, but then not doing those things we need to to push us over the top."

The boys will play again tomorrow at Abington (6:30 p.m. start).

Norwell — a team seemingly made to protect a lead, with returning league all-star goalie Tom Sullivan and four strong skating defensemen—did a very good job of holding the Skippers to one shot and preventing prolonged assaults, and the third period started with the same score as did the second.

"Sully stood on his head like he always seems to in big games," said Norwell coach Paul Hurley of his senior netminder, who came up with 24 saves for the shutout.

"All four of the defensemen also did a great job," the Norwell coach noted, lauding the work of seniors Nick McDonough and Rob Weber, and juniors Brian White and Myles Clancy.

McDonough got it going at both ends of the ice, scoring both Clippers goals in the third to put the game away.

The win improved the Clippers to 1-0-1 in South Shore League play (2-2-2 overall) and seemingly elevated them to favorite status in the league. This was the first loss for the Skippers, dropping them to 1-1-2 overall, and their first league game.

Cohasset was slated to face off with Abington last night on the road, a game that could reveal much about the upper echelon of the SSL. Virga sounded hopeful that his charges would give a better accounting of themselves in that one.

"If there's one silver lining to this loss it's that the kids seemed to start getting it in the second period and doing what we've been asking," said Virga, a former assistant coach at B.C. High, Catholic Memorial, and, most recently, Milton High. "Sometimes you have to take a step backwards before you can go forward. Hopefully, we're done moving backwards now."

Virga was also not pleased with aspects of last Wednesday's effort that produced a 3-3 tie with Scituate. Most specifically, he was unhappy with his team's continuing bent toward "bad penalties." The Skippers were whistled eight times for infractions, leading to seven Scituate power plays. The Sailors cashed in on two of those chances, the second with just 42 seconds to play in the game.

"If there was a trophy awarded for penalties, we'd be getting a pretty big one," said a clearly miffed Virga following this game. "We've committed 19 penalties in three games now, and that's unacceptable. We're putting ourselves in these bad situations."

All of the scoring in this tie came off the sticks of two players. Cohasset had a hat trick from junior Ted Straughn and Scituate junior Chris Travis matched that output.

The Skippers never trailed in the game. Straughn put Cohasset on the board first at 12:33 of the first period, as he followed a nice rush by linemate Rob Carpenter, lifting the rebound over downed Scituate netminder Bob Dillon. Travis answered that late in the second period on the power play when he whistled a slapper from the left dot over the shoulder of screened CHS netminder Stefan Parnell.

Straughn's second tally came 4:09 into the third period, and it was nearly a carbon copy of the first one, as he trailed Carpenter on a rush and cleaned up on the carom.

Travis got that back with 6:10 to play when he gained position by the left post and knocked home the rebound of a Mike Noonan shot.

Cohasset appeared to be in good shape when Straughn deftly deflected a Carpenter slapper out of the air just inside the right post with 3:53 to play. However, Travis drew a tripping call with 2:14 to play after getting by his man with a nine one-on-one move.

Scituate worked the power play masterfully, and a nice cross ice pass from Andrew Elsmore at the right point to Travis on the edge of the left circle resulted in a one-timer that got just over Parnell's glove with 42 seconds to play.

Sacred Heart superstar Kim Reske, holding her to a season low six points.

"Though it was a rough start, we pulled ourselves together in the second half," Faber reflected on the game. "We could have won by even more if we shot better from the foul line."

High scorer Casey Anderson added: "In the second half we came out fresh. We looked and felt like a brand new team."

The outcome in the second showdown between the two teams this past Monday was not as pleasant. Playing at Sacred Heart's home gym, the Lady Skippers played with intensity. Their second-rate shooting, however, cost them the game and the first loss of the season.

Despite the final outcome of 38-32, the Lady Skippers protected their sense of confidence and enthusiasm.

"This was a tough loss for us," said coach Levangie "The girls really gave it their all, but just couldn't sink their shots. Though the girls were discontent with the outcome, they see the loss as merely a bump in the road. Our confidence remains high."

Despite the loss, the low scoring reflected the solid defense turned in by Casey Anderson, Chelsea Grossman, and Ashley Faber. According to the players, the Skippers have become infamous for their steadfast defense. Observed starter Casey Anderson, "We started out flat in this game, and just couldn't come back. Our offense just didn't click."

Looking ahead, this week includes two very crucial games. On Friday the Lady Skippers face a daunting Abington squad. The following morning they leave at 7 a.m.for a ferry ride to Nantucket. Let's hope for smooth sailing on and off the court.

Grand opening

Cohasset youth girls basketball teams sweep Hanson

The four Cohasset girls basketball teams in the Old Colony League, representing the 5th, 6th, 7th, and 8th grades, opened their season with a sweep of Hanson on Sunday, Dec 20, in games played at Cohasset High School.

The fifth grade Cohasset girls set the tone for the day with a 26-12 win over their Hanson counterparts. The fifth graders got off to a slow start in the first half. Amy Costa earned the distinction of scoring the first hoop for this fledgling group of ladies – all of whom were playing in their first-ever travel league contest – but that would prove to be the extent of the Cohasset offensive production in the opening 20 minutes as Hanson walked off at the half with a 6-2 lead.

The Cohasset girls predictably had some trouble adjusting to the realities of travel league play in which all of the rules, most notably traveling, double-dribbling, and three-second violations, were whistled by the refs. Only some solid defense and rebounding by Olivia Murphy, Emma Musto, Jen Curley, and Logan Pratt kept Cohasset in the game during their first-half scoring drought.

However, the second half proved to be a different story for the Blue & White. With Emma Quigley and Rachel Fredey working effectively in the backcourt to reduce the turnovers, the Cohasset offense finally picked up the pace. Buckets by Fredey, Pratt, Curley, and Musto pushed Cohasset ahead for the first time since Costa's hoop early in the game. Although Hanson came back to tie the score at 12-12 with about 7:00 to play, the Cohasset offense went into high gear behind a scoring surge by Musto. The lanky Emma M. raced downcourt for a pair of end-to-end hoops which pushed Cohasset ahead for good. Two more hoops off offensive rebounds by Musto and buckets by Fredey and Quigley sealed Hanson's fate. Musto, who led all scorers with 14 points, then put the icing on the fifth graders' first-game victory cake with another pair of hoops for the 26-12 final score.

The sixth graders followed with a runaway 34-12 win. Lindsay Allard proved immense in the early going at both ends of the floor, while Isabel Franklin and Samantha Crough added valuable support.

The seventh grade team also had an easy time with a 40-20 triumph.

The eighth grade team, which was playing with only five eighth graders and needed to borrow some players from the seventh grade team, made a it a clean sweep for Cohasset with a 28-15 win. The Blue & White got off to a slow start, but pulled ahead for good in the middle of the first half and never looked back. Maura Barnes tallied 10 points to lead the way for Cohasset with Carly Salerno adding six in the winning effort.

Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

GETTING AN EARFUL

The most popular hearing instrument is the In-The-Ear (ITE) instrument, which fits entirely in the outer ear and is custom made to fit each individual. All its parts are encased within the custom-made shell, making it easy to handle for people with dexterity problems. Its convenient size allows for larger sound amplifiers and more features, such as a telephone switch. Unlike some smaller instruments, the ITE instrument is appropriate for mild to severe hearing losses. Its flesh-colored case also blends into the overall appearance of the ear and is barely noticeable, particularly if the wearer's hair covers his or her ears. In-The-Ear instruments offer the right combination of appearance, affordability, and convenience to address a wide range of hearing losses.

One key element in addressing a hearing impairment includes complete hearing testing to determine the type and degree of your particular loss. This is the only way FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER can help you choose the most appropriate hearing instrument for your particular impairment. State-of-the-art products, sophisticated testing equipment, and compassionate, individualized attention await you at 534 Main Street (Rte. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth. PH: 781-337-1144. We offer FREE hearing evaluations and FREE repairs of any make of hearing aid.

P.S. ITE hearing instruments are available with programmable, digital, and conventional technology.

School Nutrition Advisory Committee to meet Jan. 20

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

While the topic may have been quiet for a while, the Board of Health is back on its quest to make sure the Cohasset public schools are teaching healthy eating habits to students by offering nutritionally sound choices on their cafeteria menus. Because childhood obesity has become such an epidemic, the board has begun trying to change school cafeteria menus, in an effort to help steer children toward making healthy food choices now, which will hopefully get them in the habit of making healthy choices for life.

To help carry out this effort, the board has begun organizing a Nutrition Advisory Committee which it hopes will be a positive influence for the schools in terms of guiding them to offer healthy food choices in their cafeterias.

"We haven't had a meeting of the Nutritional Advisory Committee yet," said Board of Health Chairman Steve Bobo, but added he is excited to get the committee underway. The committee's first meeting is scheduled for Tuesday, Jan. 20.

The board expressed its concern regarding obesity in young children at the beginning of the school year, and asked the School Committee to review the school lunch menus and provide a "junk" free day at least once a week. However, the School Committee said it wasn't going to rush into changing the menu at the schools when it had just taken over the food service in-house. The contract with Chartwells dining services, which had provided food for the schools for 15 years, was not renewed this year because it was found to be costing the schools more money than was being taken in. The School Committee thought the schools would fare better financially if they provided the services themselves. By taking away "junk" food, School Committee members said it could hurt the cafeteria budget,b ecause students would be more likely to bring food from home.

Health Board members said they would like to hold the first Nutrition Advisory Meeting in the middle-high school cafeteria, and plan on arriving at the school in time to observe the last scheduled lunch.

In addition to concerns about how a new menu would affect the cafeteria budget, the School Committee questioned whether the health board had the jurisdiction to request a change in the menu. While members said they weren't sure the menu was a topic under the board's purview, the board insists it can write regulations for almost anything provided it has an impact on public health, which provided some friction between the two boards.

While the issue of healthy eating concerns all three schools, the Board of Health's message is geared more toward the middle and high schools, where students have a wider variety of options to choose from. The cafeteria is set up to mimic a college dining hall, and is split into different areas including the deli, grill, salad bar, and entree sections. Board members said they would like to hold their first committee meeting in the middle-high school cafeteria, and plan on arriving at the school in time to observe the last scheduled lunch.

The issue of healthier cafeteria food has been a hot topic not only in Cohasset, but in schools nationwide. In fact, the issue between the Board of Health and School Committee was picked up by the Associated Press, and an article featuring Cohasset's menu in comparison to school menus in other states, was printed in papers coast to coast.

Although a "junk" free day devoid of burgers, fries, pizza, and pasta has not come to fruition as of yet, the board's requests that only snacks low in fat and carbohydrates be put in vending machines, that ice cream be replaced with Popscicles or other snacks which are low in fat and carbohydrates, and that only water and 100 percent juice drinks be in the vending machines and in the food lines, have been granted. The discussion between the various boards involved will be ongoing.

Charter school move to Norwell becomes official

By Seth Jacobson
SJACOBSO@CNC.COM

The South Shore Charter School is one step closer to relocating, as officials from the facility have announced the $5.5 million purchase of a building at 100 Longwater Drive in Norwell.

South Shore Charter School spokesperson Michael Munhall said he expects the school to be ready for students in September, 2004.

The school is currently located in Hull and is comprised of three separate buildings — an old aquarium, a former bank and a former restaurant. Munhall said students will be vacating the bank building because the lease is up and noted there will be some shuffling of students in Hull before they move to Norwell in the fall. He added once all the students move to Norwell, the Hull chapter of the school will be no more.

Munhall said he and other charter school officials think Norwell will be a key location for the school.

"We have 21 towns in our school's region," Munhall said. "Being located in Hull, we're isolated to most of those towns. Also, we wanted a building where the entire school could be together. The bottom line is that we needed a location that could serve the entire region better."

Munhall said the building at Longwater Drive was formerly Serono Pharmaceuticals and was owned by the iStar Corporation of Atlanta, Georgia. He added the building has been empty for about two years and said the charter school finally approached iStar about buying the building last winter. The building is 53,000 square-feet and sits on six acres of wooded landscape.

"We've really been looking for about nine years to find a permanent home for the school," Munhall said. He said lots of locations around the South Shore were looked at, including the former South Weymouth Naval Air Base.

"The Norwell facility's central location and modern resources makes us more attractive and will expand our recruitment possibilities," Munhall said of the Longwater Drive location. He explained the Hull school currently holds 360 students and noted in the new facility, 468 students will be the capacity.

Munhall said the South Shore Charter School caters to students in kindergarten through 12th grade and noted "there are a lot of possibilities for inter-age learning at the school." He explained classes are broken up into six levels at the school through which older and younger students work together. For instance, he said 3rd and 4th graders have many classes together, as do those students in the 5th and 6th grades, 7th and 8th grades and so on.

"It's a good situation where the older kids are helping the younger kids," Munhall said.

Munhall added "The whole momentum behind charter is to give an independent school education to everyone and to present a good college prep curriculum to youngsters of any economic bracket."

He said many of the charter school's classes involve "learning by doing," that is, hands-on experience. He said students often apply what they learn in their classes through projects outside of school. For instance, he said some students work with organizations like Habitat For Humanity.

Munhall said the new location for the charter school will provide a great atmosphere for the students.

"We'll have computer labs, art studios, music practice and performance rooms and other areas," he said. "Right now, the building has 99 10 x 10 offices and we'll consolidate those into classrooms."

Munhall said an open house will be held at the facility on Saturday, Jan. 10.

"This is the campus we dreamed of — spacious without sacrificing small class size, connected through technology, central to the South Shore and equipped to provide students with an outstanding education," Munhall said. "South Shore Charter School will grow here and develop a greater sense of place, identity and pride. We invite everyone to our new home."

Rec dept. issues safe ice advisory

With the winter season here, residents of all ages look for outdoor areas for ice skating. Elm's Meadow, located at Cushing Road and Spring Street has been prepared by the DPW for skating and lights, until 9:30 p.m. are also on for night skating. Elm's Meadow offers a regulated, shallow area for safe skating.

However, as with any outdoor skating area, the ice should be tested before venturing on it. There are specific. ways to test ice safety which do not include throwing debris such as rocks, sticks, etc. on the ice making it hazardous for everyone.

Rather, test the ice by the edge of a skating area by carefully stepping out 6 to 8 inches proceeding carefully to about 2 inches out from the edge only if the ice appears to be safe under your weight. Chip the ice with a tool or stick until you can ascertain a rough idea as to the thickness of the ice. You should always have another person with you when doing this.

Many outdoor skating areas do not have the same thickness of ice universally over the area. Always be on guard for soft spots or thin ice which manifest from underground springs, drain pipes, etc. This is especially true at Elm's Meadow by the Spring Street/Cushing Road corner of the area due to drains off the hillside.

General Safe Ice Standards

Ice Safe For:	0-30 Degrees	30-40 Degrees	40-50 Degrees
Single Skaters:	1-3/4 inches	2-3/4 inches	6 inches
Couples:	2-3/4 inches	3-3/4 inches	8 inches
Crowds:	3-3/4 inches	4-3/4 inches	12 inches

Stay off of salt water ice completely.

These figures are for clear, fresh water ice only; for snow ice, add 2 inches; for water logged ice, add 3 inches, if skates cut in - go home! Salt water in mild climates is always treacherous - keep away from it.

Newlyweds take the plunge with Humarock Hurricanes

Groom works for Cohasset company

By Matthew J. Gill
MGILL@CNC.COM

STAFF PHOTOS/ALAN CHAPMAN

Newlyweds Heather and Wayne Heuer along with members of their bridal party emerge from the frigid Atlantic following the Humarock Hurricane's 6th annual New Year's Day swim. The couple took the plunge just 16 hours after saying "I do."

A veteran of New Year's Day dips, Heather Heuer made it a condition of marriage that she and her new husband, Wayne take the plunge together the morning after their wedding.

If you showed up even five minutes late, you probably missed it.

At 12 p.m. sharp on New Year's Day, a more than 150 local residents, known in swimming circles as the Humarock Hurricanes, girded by New Year's Resolutions and a blast of fresh winter air, bounded into the waters off Humarock Beach and dunked themselves in the frigid Atlantic ocean.

"We begin exactly at noon," longtime Hurricane Chris Brown said. "There's no delay."

In order to hit the waters at just the right time, the Hurricanes' official clock is set to official US time and at ten seconds to noon, Steve Leaman of The Nautical Mile, led the countdown chorus over a megaphone, and at the very strike of noon everyone began a mad scramble to the water.

But as fast as you can say "Humarock Hurricanes," the swimmers have hit the water, and are running back to shore in search of a towel.

" People come at five minutes after noon and its over," Brown said. "They say 'what happened.'"

Even though the time it takes the Hurricanes to ramble to the water, take a quick dunk, and then speed out quicker than they came, is minute, it's certainly a sight to behold and the beach is annually crowded with hundreds of onlookers, who show up on New Year's just "to see all these crazy people jump in the water."

"It was the best moment of my life."
— Newlywed Heather Heuer

The New Year's Day dip wasn't new to newlywed Heather Heuer, who for 14 years has taken part in frigid frolics at both Humarock and Peggotty Beach, along with her sister, Caitlyn. But it was new to Heather's husband Wayne, who took the plunge in the ocean just 16 hours after taking the plunge at the altar.

"It was the best moment of my life," said Heather, a 1990 graduate of Scituate High School, who teaches Physical Education and coaches three sports at Hingham's Derby Academy.

Heather, clad in a wedding gown with Wayne in a tuxedo jacket —not the attire the couple wore the night before— took part in their first joint adventure New Year's Day.

With a refreshing, bracing start on their first morning of marriage, Heather predicted a rosy future.

"It's going to be a perfect life, that's all I can say," she said.

Before she agreed to marry Wayne, who works as a supervisor for Cohasset's Noranda Construction, Heather recalls informing her husband-to-be, "If we get married we have to go swimming the next day."

After the noontime dip, the bride, groom, and their entire wedding party — including the maid of honor Caitlyn McDonald, Heather's college roommate Karen Taylor, and bridesmaids and friends Kate Steinberg from Rhode Island, Hull's Cara Ferrera, and Jean Doherty from Scituate — returned to Heather's house for a relaxing brunch, followed by a New Year's dinner of Chinese food. The next morning the newlyweds embarked on their honeymoon to Norwich, Ct.

According to Heather, not all of those who promised to take part in the morning dunk during the wedding held at The Barker Tavern the night before, followed through.

Still, about 150 others did dive in for the sixth annual New Year's swim with another 500 onlookers taking in the scene and waiting with towels, clothing and hot coffee for their daring friends and family members, Brown said.

"It was one of the best turnouts we ever had," said Brown who owns Humming Rock Gifts.

Although the weather outside was just a little breezy, Brown said the swimming conditions "were perfect."

On previous New Year's, harsh winds drove the windchill temperatures below zero, and members of the Scituate Fire Department were stationed on hand, just in case.

Although she didn't join the swim this year, Brown is a veteran of New Year's dips and in years past often donned a wetsuit and waded out early in order to photograph the group of 'Hurricanes, storming off the beach.

Members of the annual swimming contingent "come from all over," Brown said, but hail mainly from Scituate and Marshfield.

All the swimmers, no matter where they're from, must follow one simple rule to earn the distinction of being a true Hurricane.

"It's total immersion," Brown said. "If you didn't totally immerse you didn't do it right.

In addition to a shockingly cool way to start off the new year, participants in the plunge also brought a host of canned goods and non-perishables an entry-fee, and by swim's end, two truckloads of food had been donated and were then carted off and presented to the Marshfield Food Pantry.

Scituate soldier helping Iraq's schools

By 1st Lt. James T. Ford
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

I grew up in Scituate and not so long ago, I used to wait for the school bus at the end of Sylvester Road, the street where my parents still live.

Today as a lieutenant in the U.S. Army, I am the platoon leader of troops responsible for an area called Ta'min in Iraq — a very long way from Massachusetts and my hometown.

When I deployed from Ft. Riley, Kansas where I was stationed, I never could have imagined that part of our mission here would be working with the local schools.

My platoon is currently working with 12 schools with a total attendance of about 5,000 children from six to 17 years old. Initially we visited the schools on a daily basis and met with their directors to get estimates on needed repairs and supplies. We had the information translated into English and turned the proposals for these projects into Civil Affairs for approval.

This city is very poor. The schools can't afford many of the supplies children need. A notebook and a pencil here are a very important tool for the future of this country and region. We want to show the people that they can accomplish more with their pen and paper than an AK-47. We need help getting the Iraqi people the resources they need to change their outlook.

My soldiers' families back at Ft. Riley are working to contact their local schools and businesses to help sponsor Iraqi schools. They have been very successful thus far and seem to understand the magnitude of our cause here by responding as Americans should with a generous and compassionate helping hand.

For every notebook, pen, pencil or book bag sent, another Iraqi child gets a little glimpse of hope for the future. Many colleagues I work with have families back home from other states that are conducting drives to gather school supplies.

The people here have been oppressed and given empty promises for a long time. We want to show them that we care about them and want them to succeed as a nation. If we win the hearts and minds of the children and set them up for success in life then they will have a strong foundation for the future.

We continue to visit with two to three schools a day to maintain the relationship we have with them and to keep the lines of communication open. The schools will remain open while they undergo repairs to structural damage. When we visit, we talk with the kids and play with them a little outside. It is always rewarding because you can see progress in the way they respond to us each time we see them.

Conditions here are getting better daily. When we arrived here we had nothing, except some old concrete buildings that had been bombed. We worked for many days cleaning out the debris so we could live in them. Now we have electricity, showers, laundry service and a limited internet service. We do get hot meals "chow" twice a day. We all miss home but mail call everyday helps to relieve the homesick blues.

The kids here are what gives my soldiers and me hope for this country. They are receptive to the concept of peace and community responsibility that we are trying to convey. They really want us here and need us to help provide them the freedom to get an education.

When we walk through the streets in the city the children form crowds around us and want to talk and play with us. They ask us for simple things like pens, pencils and notebooks. They go crazy when we give out soccer balls and candy. It is very rewarding to see a child that looks incapable of happiness start to smile because of a friendly gesture or a free gift like a pack of Charms.

Although we show up in the schools in body armor looking like giants, I think the faculty and students realize we are sensitive people underneath and here to help them by providing hope for a better future. I feel we have come a long way towards mission accomplishment already!

Broad Cove Chorale concert is rescheduled

Treat yourself to an hour of beautiful music now that the stress of preparing for the holidays is over!

The Broad Cove Chorale looks forward to singing Sunday, Jan. 11 at 4 p.m. at Cohasset's Second Congregational Church on Highland Ave. The concert, originally planned for Dec. 7, was postponed because of the big December snowstorm. Much of the music is not Christmas-oriented, especially a lush 19th century Mass setting with organ by Josef Rheinberger, and a double-chorus work entitled "Creation's Praise" with piano four-hands. But even the carols will be fun to listen to so early in the new year!

Subcribers may use their Dec. 7 tickets; more tickets will be available at the door for $10.

Garage dance

There will be a dance at the Garage on Friday, Jan. 9, from 7 until 10 p.m. Everyone in Grade 6 and up is welcome. There will be a door charge of $5 per person. Snacks and refreshments will be sold as well.

Convivium Musicum concert at St. Stephens

As part of its Sunday Concert Series, St. Stephen's Church, Cohasset, is the vocal ensemble Convivium Musicum under the direction of Scott Metcalfe in a concert on Sunday, Jan. 18, at 3 p.m. This ensemble was formed in 1987 and is noted for its lively performances and dancing rhythms. Specialties of the group include late 15 and early 16 century polyphony. Metcalfe also founded the Cambridge Bach Ensemble and is a well known Bostonian conductor. The program will contain compositions of Renaissance England and Spain.

The church is located at 16 Highland Ave., in Cohasset and is handicap accessible, and ample parking is available at the village car park. There is no charge for the concert, although donations will be accepted. For more information, call the church office at 781-383-1083.

CHS winter Cabaret

The 2004 edition of the CHS Music Department's evening showcasing its multi-faceted and multi-talented students will be held at Atlantica on Thursday, Jan. 15.

The evening will begin at 7 p.m. with a selection of snacks and sweets. From 7:30 to 9 p.m. emcee and Choral Director Bryan Marks and Band Director Stephanie Hoskin will present student singers, musicians and other performers in a variety of solo and ensemble performances.

Tickets are $12. Make checks payable to the Cohasset Arts Boosters and send c/o Debbie Trachtenberg, Treasurer, 324 South Main St., Cohasset, as soon as possible. David Roth at the Coffeehouse

The Coffeehouse off the Square in Hingham presents David Roth Saturday, Jan. 17, at 8 p.m.

Come hear Cape-based singer-songwriter Roth's gentle, pointed ballads. As author of many songs with messages, including lyrics in the "Chicken Soup for the Soul" books, he has much to say and says it beautifully. Although Roth plays guitar and piano, he says he always starts with the lyrics when writing a song.

Peter, Paul, and Mary performed one of Roth's songs, "Spacesuits," on their 1999-2000 reunion tour. They praise the Chicago-born singer as providing "certainty that the candle will remain lit, the hope reasserted, and the dream still sung." Come and share the dream.

The Coffeehouse is at the Old Ship Parish House at 107 Main St., Hingham Square, just up from the Loring Hall Theatre. An open microphone precedes the concert. A variety of coffees, teas, and desserts are available for 50 cents. Net proceeds go to the Unitarian-Universalist Service Committee.

For further information, call Jim Watson (781) 749-1767.

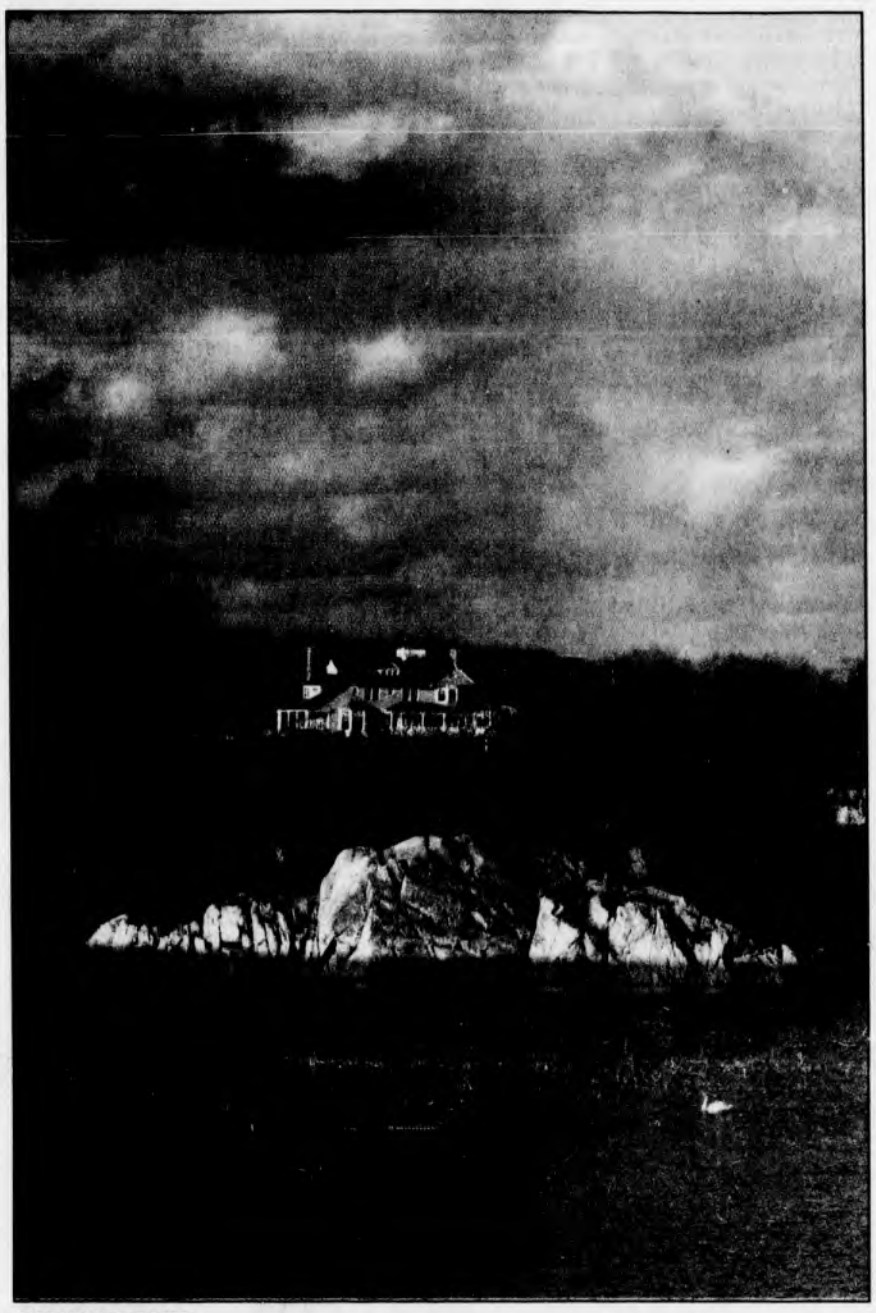
School budget talks heat up

Help is needed to cover utilities

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

It will be another two weeks before the school department can finalize its budget, and somehow the School Committee will need to find funds to provide a $531,124 increase for salary obligations and an additional $223,000 to cover the rise in utility costs.



At this point, with expenses high and funding low, the committee said it will look to the town to see if it can somehow foot the bill for utilities just for this year, and take some of the burden off the schools.

"I can probably speak for everyone up here when I say I think we'd all like to avoid another override if it's possible, without doing serious damage to our schools," said committee member Mark DeGiacomo.

When Town Manager Mark Haddad presented his budget to selectmen last week he said he does not want to ask the town for an override this year, because he doesn't think it's fair to have two override years back to back.

DeGiacomo said he thinks temporary solutions could be made this year which could help the school district get

Haddad to hold police hearings

Citizens petition seeks new inquiry

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Whoever said truth is stranger than fiction, could have been talking about the Cohasset police saga which has all the makings of a best selling novel, except the events are true.

The page-turner that holds the careers of two police officers, who face allegations of misconduct, in the balance — now includes a Citizens Petition asking for an investigation of the investigation.

Town Manager Mark Haddad read a brief statement to selectmen Tuesday, which was the first indication in months that the investigation of alleged misconduct by Sgt. William Quigley and Officer James McLean may have come to some resolution.

"As of this date, I've completed a portion of my investigation into the matters and based on the findings, I've scheduled hearings to review these matters."

Border St. seawall needs an overhaul

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset is in the preliminary stages of applying for funding for a full reconstruction of the existing granite block seawall and walkway located along Border Street in Cohasset's inner harbor.

The seawall, which runs from Atlantica to the Mill River Marina, is in disrepair, according to a study by Vine Associates Inc. of Hingham, the firm the town hired with a $15,000 Town Meeting appropriation.

Vine Associates said the best solution would be to reconstruct the existing block seawall and walkway to restore their structural integrity and improve public safety and access along the inner harbor, which is a very heavily traveled area.

"Does it have to be repaired tomorrow? No, but does it have to be repaired? Yes," said Town Manager Mark Haddad.

While Vine Associates was compiling information for its report, Haddad contacted state Environmental Secretary Ellen

Mike Westcott will seek seat on Planning Board

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Michael Westcott, 11River Road, isn't exactly a household name to everyone in town. But for those who were opposed to the AvalonBay project he was someone they could count on to keep up the fight.

Westcott, who headed Cohasset Action — an anti 40B group — and sits on the Growth and Development Committee, hopes to further his involvement in town. He has pulled papers for the open seat on the Planning Board. Incumbent Bill Good won't seek a fourth term.

"Cohasset is at a major crossroads," Westcott said. "In fact, with more than 500 possible units of new construction in various stages of applications and permitting, some might say we are in a crisis.

"Our new schools have not been built to support that kind of growth, our infrastructure cannot sustain that much expansion without major tax implications and driving more residents out of town."

AvalonBay is the 200-unit apartment complex planned off Route 3A. It obtained a comprehensive permit from the Zoning Board of Appeals last fall after a year-long, oft-contentious public hearing.

"I opposed AvalonBay and still do because it is simply too big. I believe it will result in an annual tax override just to cover added services and school costs," said Westcott, who is a design and marketing consultant.

"With more than 500 possible units of new construction in various stages of applications and permitting, some might say we are in a crisis."
— Michael Westcott, Planning Board candidate

With open seats on the Board of Selectmen, School Committee, Planning Board, Water Commission, Recreation Commission and Housing Authority, the Town Clerk's office is busier than usual. The last day to take out papers is Thursday, Feb. 12 for the April 3 Town Election.

Only one race has shaped up so far: a four-way race for two seats on the School Committee. Incumbent School Committee member Pat Martin of Linden Drive plans to seek a third term while Adrienne MacCarthy of Doane Street, Jamie Williams of Surry Drive and Scott O'Grady are hoping for their first. Incumbent Mark DeGiacomo is not seeking a third term.

Superintendent search
As Supt. Edward Malvey's term begins to wind down, applications have been coming in for those interested in filling his shoes. The application deadline is set for Jan. 23, and School Committee member Pat Martin, who has been working on the Superintendent Screening Committee, said they expect a flurry of applicants to come forward as the deadline approaches. The screening committee will begin identifying potential candidates for the position, and the interviewing process will hopefully begin the week of the 26th. If all goes as planned, a new superintendent will be chosen by April 1. For those interested in being a part of the screening committee, please contact one of the School Committee members or call the superintendent's office at (781) 383-6111.

Transportation survey to be sent home soon
School Committee member Pat Martin said a transportation survey, which will be used to help with the reorganization of the schools and the budget process, is currently in its draft form and will most likely be sent home with students Friday, Jan. 16. Kristina Patterson has been chosen to serve as the Cohasset-Greenbush ombudsman, and will be responsible for investigating and addressing impacts of the new Greenbush Commuter Rail project on the citizens, residents and businesses of the town. Once construction begins on the project, she will be available to answer questions and concerns during her office hours at Cohasset Town Hall on Tuesday mornings from 8:30-12:30 and Thursday afternoons from 1-5. In addition, letters can be sent to Patterson at Cohasset Town Hall - 2nd Floor, 41 Highland Avenue, Cohasset MA 02025. Patterson will be checking for correspondence regularly and will get back to residents as soon as possible.

School calendar change is noted
The professional day scheduled for Friday, March 26 on the school calendar, which would give Cohasset students a half day of school, has been changed to Friday, March 19. Supt. Edward Malvey said he had spoken with Town Manager Mark Haddad, who expressed concern that a half day on the 26th could affect Town Meeting attendance on Saturday the 27th, if families choose to turn the half day into a long weekend, so the professional day will be held one week in advance.

Break in at the RTF
Selectmen Merle Brown said there was a break-in at the Recycling Transfer Facility last Saturday night. Someone took $150 in cash, a tool box and tools, a neon Budweiser sign, and a box of blue pay as you throw bags which were worth $200. In total, Brown estimates roughly $500 worth of equipment was stolen from the RTF. Brown said he would like to see a fence put around the RTF, as many other communities have, and would like to see the lights which are not working there, fixed.

Lojacono shows interest in Rec. Commission seat
After the resignation of Rick Grassie from the Recreation Commission, a vacant seat was left open, which could be filled by Lisa Lojacono. Although Grassie's term does not expire until 2006, and the commission had asked Town Manager Mark Haddad whether Lojacono could be appointed to Grassie's seat prior to the general election, she will have to file papers to become a candidate.

Cook RPF review committee takes shape
Rob Hess, 11 Old Pasture Road, will be on the review committee for the Cook Request for Proposals. While nothing has been formally submitted in writing as of yet, Town Manager Mark Haddad said Chairman of the Board of Health Steve Bobo has expressed interest in being on the committee and will be included as well. Haddad said he will continue to compile interested candidates, and those interested in being on the committee can contact him at (781) 383-4105.

Snow and ice fund
As of Jan. 6, the town only had a balance of $7,317.47 remaining in its Snow and Ice Control account, and impending invoices are expected to be at least that much. Town Manager Mark Haddad said this is an area which is always hard to predict and "the nor'easter hit us hard," in early December.

Haddad responds to public records request
In a letter to Cedarmere attorney Walter L. Sullivan, Town Manager Mark Haddad said he had received the letters sent to himself, the Board of Sewer Commissioners, the Board of Selectmen, and Director of Finance Michael Buckley, which requested all and any information in any form pertaining to various matters dating from January 1, 1996 forward. Haddad informed the attorney that the law allows him to provide an estimate of how much it will cost to complete the request and require payment prior to its completion. Haddad said he estimated the cost at $3,438.11, based on 30 hours for the Selectmen's secretary at $18.88 an hour, 42 hours for the Board of Health/Sewer office manager at $25 an hour, one hour for the himself at $50.71 to review his files for information requested, 90 minute cassette tapes for $21, and 7,000 copies at 25 cents per copy. Haddad added any unused funds will be returned when the work is completed, or a bill will be sent for the additional amount, should it exceed his estimate.

Village streetscape plans go out to bid in March

Work to finish by June 2005

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Final plans for the Village streetscape are almost complete and could be put out to bid as early as March 1. Now that town meeting has decided to keep the wires above ground downtown and has chosen colored concrete as a paving option, there are relatively few decisions to be made before the final stages of the process can begin.

Craig Miller of the Waterfield Design Group came before Selectmen Tuesday to give an update on where the project is and where it is heading. Miller's company has been hired by the town to design the new streetscape as part of the $1.8 million Village Revitalization Project, which has been in the works for upwards of seven years and is being paid for through grants and private donations.

Miller first presented a tentative budget for the project, which shows total construction at a cost of $927,122. This figure includes colored concrete pavement, painted crosswalks, and the possibility of night construction. It does not include water and gas line replacement.

"Some contractors might want to do nighttime work," said Miller, adding because the Village is such a highly traveled area, it will be in the best interest of the town to get the project done as quickly as possible and night work might be a good option. However, selectmen pointed out there are apartments in the Village and night construction may not be feasible.

"I wouldn't recommend night work, but from the merchant's view, it would be great," said Town Manager Mark Haddad. Miller agreed that merchants wouldn't have to deal with the dust and machinery that would block their doors during the day if contractors worked at night, but he understands some construction can be noisy, which would disturb those who live in the Village, and he was not sure how long night work would continue.

Selectmen asked Miller to look into alternatives to working through the entire night and how much faster work could be completed if construction were allowed until possibly 9 p.m. or 11 p.m. From there, Haddad will be able to calculate how much it will cost the town in police details if they work solely at night, or night and day for a shorter length of time.

Because the town decided against burying the wires and chose colored concrete instead of brick, there is now money left over for additional design alternates. With a balance of $279,878, if all goes as planned, the town has compiled its list of extras.

The first item listed as an alternate is the extension of a new sidewalk and curb down to the post office, which will cost $20,000. The second alternate is the paving of Depot Court and its sidewalks, as well as drainage, at $52,000. The third alternate is the extension of sidewalk to the Paul Pratt Historical Building, the former library which now serves as the historical society headquarters, at $36,600, and the fourth is the extension of sidewalk to the new library at the top of Ripley Road for $99,500.

"Keep in mind, you have to take these in order," said Haddad of the alternates, adding the way these projects have been arranged makes the most sense.

Cobrahead light replacements, or the long arm lights which will be affixed to the utility poles downtown, were on the list of additional items to be addressed, but selectmen voted at the meeting to add that cost of $34,200 to the original project budget, and not include it as an alternate. A clock for the end of the James Brook Walkway, which would be a Victorian looking "lollypop" clock, has also been added to the project budget, and is expected to cost between $3,000 and $5,000.

Because the town now knows it will be keeping the timber utilities poles downtown, Haddad said he had spoken with MassElectric to see what kinds of cobrahead lights will be allowed for the project. While Miller provided drawing of two potential designs, selectmen said they would like to see photos and perhaps actual samples of what lights might look like in the downtown area. Selectman Chairman Ronnie McMorris also asked Miller if he could provide a list of other towns which have lights that either match or are similar to what the town is proposing, so they could possibly travel there and take a look.

New plans for Village

Currently, plans for the downtown area include one "bump-out" at the corner of South Main Street and Brook Street by Dependable Cleaners. This is the one area in the Village that needed to have the bump-out in order to accommodate for an accessibility ramp on the sidewalk, which is required by law and could not be accomplished any other way. Bump-outs are extended portions of sidewalk that would allow a pedestrian more visibility beyond parked cars while still standing on the sidewalk. Original plans had incorporated the bump-outs as a safety feature, however, selectmen took a cue from residents, and voted the bump-outs out of the plans last year.

Along with bump-outs, the proposed crosswalk which would extend from the area of the James Brook Walkway across to Tedeschi's has been eliminated from the plans. In addition, the curb around the town pump area has been scaled back from what had been previously suggested, but still allows for the standard four foot area necessary to accommodate the accessibility ramps. The sidewalk in front of the Lilac House Antique shop will be expanded to a size a little larger than the width of a regular sidewalk, but has been scaled back from it's bump-out state.

At the intersection of South Main Street and Depot Court, the issue whether to keep the island or not was addressed again. While some selectmen thought residents seemed to be adapting well to not having the island, Haddad was not comfortable with the possibility of its not coming back.

"I said on the floor of Town Meeting we were going to put it back," said Haddad. McMorris said she thought keeping the island was a good idea because there are many people who cross with their children there and the island offers protection. However, she said she wouldn't mind hearing feedback from both the nursery school and the Council on Elder Affairs, which are both located in the Community Center building, to see how they feel about the island, before making a decision on whether to bring it back or not.

Miller said he doesn't see that area of town as being so large that it requires an island for protection while crossing and said if something could be worked out with the Community Center, perhaps the memorial could be reconstructed on the land it owns on that corner, where it could be better appreciated.

"It really has the potential to be very nice," he said.

While plans have not been finalized, and Miller will come before selectmen again to address the questions brought up at the meeting, with the project slated to go out to bid the first week of March, construction could begin May 1. Miller said the first portion of the project will be the burying of the wires, and sidewalk improvements will begin after Labor Day.

"The good thing about the area we're working on is, it's very easy to detour," said Haddad. However, he had one last question to ask of Miller before the meeting adjourned.

"The big question is, will all this be done by June 30, 2005," he asked.

"Without question," said Miller.

New emergency plan commended by state

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"When the fire department arrived water had come down the front hallway and was running out the front door and down the driveway."
— Fire Capt. Robert Silvia

In Cohasset, being prepared for an emergency in a post-Sept. 11 world means it has been necessary to revise the town's former emergency management plans to include a wide scope of possible terrorist threats alongside the blizzard and hurricane emergency scenarios.

"We've got to be ready," said Glenn Pratt, who has spearheaded a new committee put in place to make sure new directives put forth by the Department of Public Health, and the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency, also known as MEMA, are carried forth.

For roughly four months, Pratt has been working with the committee to make sure the town meets all the requirements necessary. The town's emergency plans had not been updated since 1999, and the new plans were submitted to the state on Dec. 31.

"We had ours in on time," said Pratt, adding many other towns had not handed in their reports by the deadline, and the state had to extend the grace period for a short time. However, not only was Cohasset one of the first towns to hand in its report, it doubly excelled in its effort, as it has already been recognized as having an exceptional plan. Town Manager Mark Haddad said he was contacted by an official at MEMA who told him Cohasset's report was so impressive, the organization plans on using it as a model for other communities.

The committee was comprised of various town officials, as directed by the state. Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorriss, Fire Chief Roger Lincoln, Police Chief Robert Jackson, Public Health Nurse Judy Fitzsimmons, Board of Health Chairman Steve Bobo, Director of Finance Michael Buckley, Emergency Management Director Arthur Lehr, DPW Superintendent Carl Sestito, and Haddad all took part in the discussions.

Because the Water Treatment Plant on King Street serves as the backup emergency management control center, should anything happen to the police station which renders it inoperable, Water Superintendent Hugh Spurway was also included on the committee.

"It has a generator, lots of space, telecommunication capabilities, and staging for emergency vehicles, so naturally it seemed like a good backup," Pratt said of the plant.

In addition, School Superintendent Edward Malvey was included on the committee because having a plan for the schools is "a big portion of public safety," Pratt said.

During the planning stages, the town was assessed on many levels, including how much equipment it has available, which was scrutinized all the way down to the number of wheelbarrows utilized by the DPW. In light of the committee's findings, the town may receive funding to help cover needs for emergency planning. Pratt said the Board of Health has already received $5,000 to be put toward the cause.

Once the report was complete, Pratt said the next step was to decide what the town needs to do to provide its workers with the appropriate training. While it's one thing to have the equipment ready for an emergency, there's no point in having it without personnel trained to use it, Pratt said.

Pratt said some potential disasters are more easily predicted than others, and those are the major catastrophes the town plans for. History has seen hurricanes and blizzards hit the town, and experience has dictated what measures should be taken. Because Cohasset is right under a main approach for landings at Logan Airport, and an estimated 70,000 planes fly over the town every year, Pratt said it also makes sense to be ready in case of a plane crash.

"Those events are catastrophic for local emergency personnel," he said.

Pratt said he will be making a presentation at the Jan. 27 selectmen's meeting, where he will give an overview of the new emergency plan. Because of the sensitive nature of its content, the plan is not a public document. While the work of the committee is complete as far as a plan is concerned, Pratt said this is just the beginning in terms of implementing findings and making sure the community is safe.

"We're going to continue on as a committee and be proactive."

Burst pipe at CMHS provides 'snow' day

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Cohasset's roughly 1,400 students had their first "snow day" of 2004, but it wasn't due to Monday's dusting of snow or the sub-zero weather over the weekend.

A pipe burst in the sprinkler system in the corridor near the main office at the middle-high school in the wee hours of Sunday morning, spewing water down the corridor, nearby stairwell and into the new administration offices in the basement. Water that damaged carpet in several classrooms also seeped through the floor and down through the ceiling of the superintendent's office

Supt. Edward Malvey got the call at home at 4:15 a.m. and subsequently closed all the schools because the water had to be shut off. (Food service for the Deer Hill and Osgood schools is based at the middle-high school).

Malvey said the school department's and contractor's insurance companies have been contacted. He did not have an estimate on the cost of the damage.

He explained a joint in the sprinkler system burst and did not think it was due to the cold because the pipe is in a heated part of the building. Although the damage occurred in an old section of the building, the piping was new, Malvey said.

The fire department went to the high school at about 2 a.m. after the burst pipe set off an alarm at the station. "They came up and unearthed the leak," Malvey said.

Fire Capt. Robert Silvia said water flow from the sprinkler system activates the alarm and the fire department is notified.

"That happens when a sprinkler head opens, which is heat activated, or there is a problem with the system," Silvia said, noting the broken pipe fitting was sitting on the fire prevention officer's desk Monday morning.

"When the fire department arrived water had come down the front hallway and was running out the front door and down the driveway," he said. Silvia explained the system is fed by two mains, so the fire department had to shut off two different valves to turn the water off.

Simon Tempest, project manager for middle-high school renovation and expansion, said yesterday it is still unclear why the sprinkler pipe fitting broke.

"It may be a defective fitting; we're investigating that right now," he said. Although nothing is being ruled out, the building temperature was up and no ice in the pipes were found so the mishap was probably not caused by the sub-zero weather.

Tempest said it was not clear whether the contractor's or town's insurance company would ultimately be responsible. The town has taken ownership of the building but the work is still under warranty.

"Whichever way you look at it, we're covered," he said.

Service Master conducted the cleanup that involved clearing up the water, and drying out the carpet and ceiling tiles.

"We're back to normal as normal as we can be," Malvey said Tuesday.

"Our area and the high school office are still being dried out with fans," Malvey said, adding plans were for the administration offices to stay put during the cleanup. "We're working around them and they're working around us."

Malvey said there were some computers and printers damaged in the school business and technology offices that are part of the administration offices.

Tempest said repair work to the administration offices is ongoing and would likely be completely finished during February vacation.

Town Manager to conduct disciplinary hearings

the findings, I've scheduled hearings to review these matters," said Haddad, who provided no specifics about when the hearings would be conducted.

Haddad declined to comment on the charges or whether the investigation had been expanded to more than Quigley and McLean, who have been on paid administrative leave since Oct. 20. He also declined to say if any of the charges facing Quigley involve the arrest of Chief Robert Jackson's son, Keith Jackson, and two other men outside the American Legion Hall on Oct. 11. In the past he has categorically denied Keith Jackson's arrest had anything to do with Quigley's administrative leave.

"Due to the sensitive nature of the investigation and in order to protect employees' rights as has been my past practice, I plan on conducting these hearings in private," he said.

Haddad said Town Counsel would be present and the employee had the right to have the hearing be public. The selectmen are under no obligation to attend the hearings, which would be conducted according to Civil Service rules, Haddad explained..

Doug Louison, an attorney who is representing Quigley, McLean and now Officer John Small, said the three officers received letters Tuesday with "rather vague notice of contemplated disciplinary action."

"I've responded in kind by sending a letter requesting all related documents and materials that the town intends to rely on so we have some sense of what the charges are the town is actually asserting."

He said Quigley, McLean and Small all face allegations of drinking at the Rod and Gun Club; and Quigley and McLean are charged with inappropriate action in some arrests that took place some time ago.

"The officers are stunned," Louison said. "That the town would bring up old cases most of which have been previously adjudicated." He said the charges are very vague and contain no specifics.

Louison has asked for a public hearing and talked with Town Counsel about not going forward with the hearings on Jan. 20 as scheduled in the letters from Haddad. He noted the town is requesting a very short time frame "after months of dragging their feet."

He explained the hearings are somewhat like trials and include witness testimony. The rules of evidence are more relaxed than would be the case in a courtroom, Louison said.

In the meantime, a group of citizens has placed an article on the March 27 Town Meeting warrant asking for $10,000 to hire independent counsel to look into any allegations of misconduct, actions taken to remedy that conduct and to identify any abuse of power, fraud and deceit relative to the police matter.

Lou Harvey, 465 King St., was prepared to explain the article to selectmen Tuesday but was told they hadn't had a chance to read it yet and the matter would be placed on a future agenda when other interested parties would also have the opportunity to attend.

But Harvey was allowed to hand out a prepared statement explaining the intent of the article was to understand the accusations levied in public at members of the police department and the responses to those charges made publicly by Sgt. William Quigley. (Both selectmen and Quigley have penned written statements that were published in the Dec. 18 and Dec. 25 Cohasset Mariner, respectively.)

Last July, Quigley — who received two commendations in September and has never been subjected to any prior disciplinary action — was involved in seeking an arrest warrant for Keith Jackson for domestic violence. In a separate incident, he arrested Keith Jackson outside the Legion Hall on Oct. 11. About 10 days after the October arrest, Haddad placed Quigley and McLean on administrative leave.

On Sept. 2, 2003 McLean admonished then Officer Brian Curran, the chief's son in law, for not following proper procedures relative to an overtime grievance. About 18 hours later, he was called into the chief's office and fired from his job as fleet manager, a collateral duty. McLean contacted the national office of the International Brotherhood of Police Officers, which resulted in a meeting between IBPO lawyers, Haddad, and the chief over a possible suit involving unfair labor practices. Curran's resignation from the police dept was accepted by Jackson on Sept. 17.

There are also allegations swirling around town that several officers had a few beers at the Scituate Rod and Gun Club while on duty following weapons certification last spring. Quigley has categorically denied ever having a drink while on duty.

In a statement printed in the Dec. 25 Cohasset Mariner, Quigley said if the investigation resulted in charges against any officers, the town hire an independent mediator, with no ties to the Town, to hear and fairly judge the cases.

Haddad told selectmen Monday in the late summer of 2003 issues were brought to his attention concerning the conduct of members of the police department.

"Obviously as Town Manager it is my responsibility to investigate these matters when they are brought to my attention," he said.

Border St. seawall needs an overhaul

Roy Herzfelder's office, asking for assistance in obtaining funding for the project, which is estimated to cost roughly $550,000 for total design and construction.

However, that was last July and "we've never received any kind of response" from Roy Herzfelder's office, Haddad said.

So in early December, Haddad turned to the state Office of Waterways for funding opportunities after hearing of a Rivers and Harbors Grants Program through which the town has now been awarded a $25,000 grant — 50 percent of the total engineering and design costs for the project, Haddad said.

"Does it have to be repaired tomorrow? No, but does it have to be repaired? Yes."
— Town Manager Mark Haddad

Haddad said there will be an article at the annual Town Meeting, asking for $25,000, which is the town's share of engineering and design costs.

This preliminary phase will include updating field conditions, the implementation of a subsurface exploration program, preliminary and final designs, and the preparation of bid documents.

The project cannot go out to bid until the engineering and design phase is completed, he said. If all goes as planned, the engineering and design phase of the project will begin this winter and end next fall.

The construction portion of the project is expected to cost roughly $500,000.

By putting the first part of the project before the state in terms of funding, Haddad said it has put the project "in the pipeline" and should additional funding become available, the project could be considered by the state. If the town is awarded a grant, it would only cover 50 percent of the construction phase of the project, which will leave the town with a bill of $250,000. When added to the design fees, the total price tag for the town is $275,000 for the project. Haddad said federal funding options are also being looked into.

The construction phase of the project could begin in spring 2005, and end that summer. The project would need approval from the Cohasset Conservation Commission, the Department of Environmental Protection, and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Haddad said.

School Committee member Rick Shea, who was appointed to fill Jane Pescatore's seat in September, pulled papers Tuesday for the one-year remaining of Pescatore's unexpired term. Pescatore resigned from the School Committee to accept employment with the school department.

So far incumbent Selectman Merle Brown of Beechwood Street, who is seeking a fourth term, and Rob Spofford of Heather Drive are running for two seats on the Board of Selectmen. Incumbent Selectman Tom Callahan is not seeking reelection.

Nathaniel Palmer of Little Harbor Road plans to run for the seat being vacated by Rob Kasameyer on the Water Commission and Elsa Miller of Reservoir Road is seeking reelection to the Board of Assessors. Steve Bobo, chairman of the Board of Health, and Library Trustee Sarah Pease plan to seek reelection.

Town Clerk Marion Douglas said it was exciting to see so many citizens interested in seeking office. However, she hopes all the spots on the ballot will be filled including those for two-year, unexpired terms on the Cohasset Housing Authority and Recreation Commission.

Rick Grassie recently resigned from the Recreation Commission leaving a two-year unexpired term and Joanne Young moved away leaving a one-year unexpired term on the Cohasset Housing Authority.

Incumbents — Recreation Commissioner Anthony Carbone; Ann Barrett, Cohasset Housing Authority; Sewer Commissioner Sean Cunning and library trustees, Barbara Power and June Hubbard — had not pulled papers by press time.

AGING AND HAIR LOSS
Any understanding of age-related hearing loss (presbycusis) begins with a physical description of the cochlea, the snail-shaped part of the inner ear. Its fluid-filled interior is lined with microscopic hair cells. As incoming sound waves create pressure on the fluid and cause it to move, the hair cells wiggle. Their attachment to nerve cells allows them to translate their movements into nerve signals that the brain interprets into sound. Unfortunately, aging (and exposure to high levels of noise) can cause these delicate hair cells to deteriorate. The result is an irreparable form of hearing loss known as presbycusis. Fortunately, this type of hearing loss can usually be helped with the use of a hearing instrument.
If you have any questions about hearing deficits, hearing instruments, or evaluations, or if you just need to talk about your hearing loss, we want you to know you are always welcome here at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER. Perhaps you have a hearing aid that sits in the back of a drawer somewhere instead of in your ear because it did not live up to its reputation. If so, bring it to us at 534 Main Street (Rte. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth, and let us take a look. PH: 781-337-1144.
P.S. Presbycusis can adversely affect the intensity with which we perceive sound, as well as the clarity.

Positions could be cut to balance budget

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The school department may be forced to look at eliminating positions in order to balance the budget for the upcoming fiscal year.

Although discussions are very preliminary, a list of potential reductions was given to School Committee members at a recent meeting. Positions that would yield the highest amount of money for the schools, and were listed under the superintendent's suggested possible reductions, included:

- Eliminating Curriculum Coordinator Ruth Fennessey's position at $77,792
- Eliminating Business Manager Ivan Klimko's position at $85,356
- Reducing middle school athletics to the tune of $68,000.

While Supt. Edward Malvey said the items were only recommendations to be thought about at this stage, some suggested cuts could be the way the schools choose to balance their budget in the near future. All of the suggested items have come from Malvey, Cohasset Middle-High School Principal Michael Jones, Deer Hill Principal Keith Gauley, and Osgood Principal Janet Sheehan.

"Middle school sports is going to go. It's a memory — a good memory, but a memory," said School Committee member Mark DeGiacomo, adding middle school sports has been a topic of discussion for some time, and the schools can't keep it up any longer.

Officials said middle school students will have to participate in intramural sports, which will charge a fee and should be self-sufficient in terms of funding. Because most other middle schools in the area have intramural sports for their students, Cohasset students will have the same kind of program.

For the middle-high school, the most significant cut could be the director of physical education and health, at a salary of $85,322. However, Malvey said because that position cannot be completely eliminated, it would need to be supplemented in some fashion, perhaps by a part-time employee, resulting in net savings more in the $30,000 to $40,000 range. In addition, cutting a middle-school English teacher at $42,167 was listed as an option which may or may not move forward.

It has already been decided that varsity swimming will be eliminated next year, which will free up $4,000 in the budget. Jones said the program was almost eliminated this year due to a lack of interest and will definitely be cut next year.

The list of recommendations to be cut at Deer Hill was very short, as Gauley explained he doesn't know what else other than personnel cuts would yield the level of funding necessary to keep the school running at almost the same level it has been. Gauley said if teachers need to be cut, he would prefer seeing one fifth grade position and one fourth grade position go, rather than lose someone at the third grade level. Because the lower grades build an educational foundation for students, he said he would like to be able to keep those class sizes as low as possible, which means keeping more teachers at that level.

One recommended cut Gauley said he could support because of the low impact it would have on his school, is the reduction in MCAS salaries of $5,700, which pays for tutoring support for students after school. He said the majority of students are getting their help during the day so cutting the after-school program shouldn't have a tremendous impact.

The most significant cut to the Osgood School could be the elimination of a grade two position at $42,167. In addition, different reductions in terms of a physical education teacher have been discussed, which Sheehan said she worries could ultimately lead to students in kindergarten through second grade only having physical education class once a week. In addition, reducing the schedules of the music and art teachers has been floated, which could possibly lead to Osgood and Deer Hill doing more sharing of those teachers.

Reductions in custodial work, which is help in addition to what is given by employees of the cleaning company the schools have outsourced, have also been discussed. That could lead to Osgood and Deer Hill sharing one evening custodian. The potential savings if that plan moves forward could be $17,108.

If plans move forward to reduce custodial help, School Committee members suggested the elementary schools start an alternating schedule which would have only one elementary school open each night. Currently, schools are sometimes used for recreational activities like basketball leagues. By only having one of the schools open at night, and limiting use to the gymnasium areas only, "It will eliminate one area that needs to be cleaned," said Flynn.

The School Committee will take all the suggestions under advisement, and after speaking with the Town Manager and Board of Selectmen, it hopes to have a finalized version of its budget for its Jan. 22 meeting.

back on track with its budget. However, he said the plans will only work if the town can find a way to crunch its numbers again and cover the utilities in full. Without that burden, DeGiacomo thinks the schools will be able to cut costs enough to make it through the 2005 fiscal year.

"We can make no new additions — none," DeGiacomo said, adding the schools could make some money by charging activities fees as well as investigating advertising options. If the schools choose, they can charge money to groups who wish to have fliers distributed to students, and can also look into having advertisements placed on the sides of buses — as has been done in other towns such as Braintree — as a means of generating revenue.

"I don't think we're going to make a lot of money, and I find it a tad abhorrent to see ads on the sides of buses," DeGiacomo said, but added it might be necessary.

In addition to looking at funding options, DeGiacomo said it will be necessary to make budgetary cuts.

In terms of the low-cost items, such as office supplies, officials say there is only so much that can be cut before the schools aren't operational, and the only way to make up that kind of monetary difference is to cut personnel. However, taking into consideration that enrollment is going up every year at the schools, the committee said it can only cut so much before it will decide it doesn't feel comfortable reducing any further, and will turn to the town to make the decision whether it wants to see more cuts — such as teaching positions — or an override.

"You need support for the teachers who are left," said School Committee Vice Chairman Chartis Tebbetts, adding if supplies and support staff are cut, teachers won't be able to do their jobs properly.

Committee members point out with the increase in students from year to year, staffing cuts are even more painful because trying to catch up in subsequent years is almost impossible. There has been much concern expressed during this budget season regarding special education students because rising enrollment numbers mean the schools are finding they do not have the resources needed by special education students. If the schools do not add staff in-house to provide for the needs of its students, those students may be required to obtain services outside the district, and will cost more than it would to keep the program fully staffed in-house.

"We can't say that we can't have any new positions because it might be the more responsible way to go," said Tebbetts, adding the schools need to take the less expensive route in terms of what they are legally obligated to pay. "We are required to pay for those needs."

DeGiacomo said he believes selectmen have a good understanding of what the schools are up against and all anyone can do now is try to work together to come to a solution. He said he wondered if the $223,000 could come out of free cash, but that would be discussed at future meetings.

School Committee Chairman Rick Flynn said investigating changing the healthcare program could be another cost-saving option, which had been suggested by Haddad during his budget presentation.

"My company just hoisted a new one on me," Flynn said, and it wouldn't be out of the question to explore changing the plan to include a $15 co-pay, up from $5, which could become the source of extra funds. While Haddad had previously said the amount of money that could be made by changing the plans would be roughly $150,000, the early figures he was given were a bit high, and he was recently told the figure could be closer to $100,000. Haddad also said he was not sure how those potential funds would be divided should they become available.

Haddad, selectmen, and the School Committee will be meeting in the coming weeks to iron out the budget details. The School Committee hopes everything will be finalized for its Jan. 22 meeting.

"We have work to do," said Flynn.

Opening burning season to start

Cohasset residents may obtain permits on a daily basis from Jan. 15 -May 1 for open burning. Permits may be obtained by calling the Fire Department Dispatch Center at 781-383-6047 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Permits are valid for one day only.

Burning may be conducted during periods of good atmospheric ventilation and must not cause a nuisance. Adverse weather conditions (wind and drought) will impact permit issuance. Burning hours are from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on days permits are issued. Decisions to issue permits are made daily at 9 a.m. Persons calling for permits before that hour will be advised to call back.

Open burning permits are issued for the disposal of brush, cane, driftwood and forestry debris. Burning shall be conducted on land proximate to the place of generation. Burning shall be conducted at a distance greater than 75 feet from any dwelling. Select a safe area with no ground cover. While burning the fire must be attended until completely extinguished. Have a water hose, rake and shovel nearby for fire control.

Alternatives to open burning

Open burning releases large amounts of carbon dioxide, other gases, and solid substances directly into the air, which can contribute to respiratory problems. Disposal of natural materials is never as good for the environment as using them again in a different form. Tree limbs, brush and other forestry debris can be chipped or composted into landscaping material. Check with the public works or highway department; many have chippers at their municipal recycling center or transfer station, and will process debris from homeowners.

Open burning safety tips

Never use gasoline, kerosene or any other flammable liquid to start a fire because the risk of personal injury is high. Burn one small pile at a time and slowly add to it. This will help keep the fire from getting out of control. Select a location away from any utility lines.

• Fire Must Be Attended Until Extinguished

While the fire is burning, an adult must attend the fire until it is completely extinguished.

• Have Fire Control Tools On Hand

Have fire extinguishment materials on hand including a water supply, shovels and rakes.

The water supply could be a pressurized water fire extinguisher, a pump can or garden hose, and be sure to test it out before igniting the fire. You do not want to find out that the water is still shut-off at the house faucet or that the hose is cracked when you need it most.

• Watch the Wind: Be Prepared to Extinguish All Open Burning

Be prepared to extinguish your fire if the winds pick up or weather changes. Use common sense and don't wait for the fire department to contact you that it has become unsafe to burn. Sudden wind change is how most open burning gets out of control.

• Don't Delay a Call For Help

If for some reason, the fire should get out of control, call the fire department immediately.

Use the utmost caution to prevent injury to yourself or family members or any damage by fire to your home.

People conducting illegal burning, or who allow a fire to get out of control, may be held liable for costs of extinguishing the fire, fined and even imprisoned (MGL C48 S13).

• April is the Cruelest Month

April is usually the worst month for brush fires. When the snow pack recedes, before new growth emerges, last year's dead grass, leaves and wood are dangerous tinder. Winds also tend to be stronger and more unpredictable during April.

•Prevent wildfires by burning during wet snowy conditions

Prevent permit fires from becoming wildland fires by burning early in the season. Wet and snowy winter conditions, hinder the rapid spread of fire on or under the ground. Weather conditions and increased fire danger may lead to many days when burning cannot be allowed to take place.

Deer Hill teacher strives to make every year the best

By Samantha Brown

Jen Clark, a fourth-grade teacher at Deer Hill, says one of the main lessons she tries to impart on her students is having respect.

When Deer Hill teacher Jennifer Clark answered her door on Halloween night a few years ago, she was shocked not by a frightening costume, but by what a former student and trick-or-treater said he remembered of his time in her class. A tough, rugged sports player, while taking his candy, said he remembered a lesson she taught on diamante poetry, and Clark had to admit, she was pleasantly surprised.

"This was a kid you never would have thought would remember poetry," Clark said, adding of all her students, she never would have guessed he would not only have remembered, but liked the poetry she had taught him. "I tell that story every year," and it sums up the kind of teacher she is very well.

Although Clark has only been teaching for five years, of which three has been spent in the fourth grade at Deer Hill, she has recognized from the beginning that while all students might not remember every lesson she teaches, "They all remember something," and she has worked hard to make sure no matter what learning style a child has, she can offer something that will help the message stick.

"I was never a strong student," she said, adding because she was a "middle of the road" student, her teaching is mostly geared toward the same level. She said she uses lots of visuals in her classroom, as well as hands-on activities in addition to reading exercises.

"I catch all the learners that way," she said.

Because no class has a cookie-cutter set of kids she said she is constantly modifying and changing lessons to make sure every child has an understanding of the concept she is trying to get across. She said she is always telling her students that if she says something in class they don't understand, let her know and she'll find another way to say it.

One of the main lessons Clark said she tries to impart on her students is having respect.

"I'm big on respect, for themselves, for others, for me, and any other people that come into the room," she said.

Clark said she spends a great deal of time working with language that shows respect. She also works on greeting people and exchanging pleasantries, and the importance of looking someone in the eye when speaking to them. Next year, Clark said she will start a new program in her classroom which she learned during a class she took this year. She said while many teachers, including herself, teach children to respond to questions in full sentences when they write, responding the same way orally isn't as expected.

"I thought it was fantastic," she said of the idea, adding she hadn't realized the importance of taking the time to answer someone fully rather than just giving a "yes" or "no" response, and will implement it next year.

Because Clark takes so much time teaching her students about respect and conducting themselves appropriately, she had no qualms about inviting her class to her wedding, which was held last summer. Students were sent invitations to attend the ceremony in the church, and Clark and her husband Matt, also a teacher, posed with their students for an unorthodox class picture.

"They knew all about it," said Clark of her wedding plans, adding students and parents got together to throw her a bridal shower. They decorated the room and had cake and gifts, she said. "They were really into it."

"For your teacher to get married, that's a big thing," she said, especially for students who are at an age when they are just realizing their teacher has a life outside the classroom.

From the very beginning, Clark said she knew she wanted to teach upper elementary level children, because they are still so innocent and excited about learning, but have gained some experience so they can begin to take on projects themselves. While she has taught children in grades three through six, her favorite grade has been fourth.

"I like the independence in a fourth grader. You can give them something to do and they'll work on it. With the younger students, you really need to hold their hands," she said. She also said fourth graders really respect their teachers and want to impress them. Also, because they are still young, they really enjoy cute things, she said, which means her collection of all things Disney is not wasted.

For seven years, Clark worked at the Disney Store, and when the opportunity arose to spend a college semester working at Disney World, she couldn't pass up the opportunity.

"I loved it," she said of her time spent at the park, where she served as a park greeter and hostess at Disney-MGM studios.

Throughout her classroom, there are various Disney influences she has picked up along the way, which Clark said older students might think are too babyish. However, she said even when she's had older students, she has tried to keep as many cute activities in her plans as she can because, "You're only a kid for so long," she said.

There was always a something in Clark that told her she wanted to be a teacher. Her mother was a teacher, her mother had friends who were teachers, and her sister had plans to become a teacher, so it was a profession she was very familiar with.

"I think I probably always knew that was something I wanted to do," she said and after attending high school at Notre Dame Academy in Hingham, Clark attended Bridgewater State College and earned her teaching degree.

After graduation, she worked as a classroom aide in Abington for one year in a fifth grade class, and from there worked for two years in Brockton, one year as a sixth grade teacher, and one as a fifth grade teacher. From there, she moved on to Deer Hill and said she has been really happy with her experiences there.

Clark said she really enjoys being a teacher and serving as the person her students look to as the one who will educate them, guide and support them, and provide the help they need. She is currently pursuing her master's degree, and is not only able to empathize with her students, as she is a student herself, but will be able to serve her students even further through the knowledge she will gain.

"It's the greatest gift you can give them, and I know I'm a small part of their entire education, but they'll carry it with them throughout their entire life."

Cohasset couple shares their love of rare Piranesi prints

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

From across the room, the etchings might not look like the typical subjects of a Cohasset gallery show, where framed works of art often portray vivid colors and images typically seen in coastal towns. Instead, the color in the Dillon Gallery at the South Shore Art Center now comes from the newly painted walls, which have taken on the shade of "Williamsburg red" to enhance the latest featured exhibit.

Now through Feb. 22, the Art Center is hosting a rare collection of works from Giovanni Battista Piranesi — a Venetian-born etcher, archaeologist, designer and architect — as well some works done by his contemporaries.

The collection of 18th century master-prints have been the result of years of aggressive, yet focused, collecting by Cohasset residents Richard Wendorf and Elizabeth Morse. Morse has not only assisted her husband add to the collection he started roughly 20 years ago, but as a paper conservator, has helped in the restoration process of the prints as well.

"I make sure whatever we, or he, buys is going to last," Morse said, because with a collection such as theirs, it is pointless to make a purchase the two will not be able to showcase for years to come. While every purchase is scrutinized before it is made, to ensure the image itself is perfectly clear, Wendorf joked no matter what he buys, his wife's first response is, "That needs a lot of work," which she is happy to oblige.

Wendorf, who is the Stanford Calderwood director and librarian at the Boston Athenaeum, is an expert of 18th century British art, literature, and cultural history, and ironically has found himself fascinated with the Italian works of Piranesi throughout the years. While many prints have been made of Piranesi's works, Wendorf and Morse are very careful to purchase only those prints made during the time the artist was living. The value of a print is continually diminished after the death of the artist, Wendorf said, and after seeing the collection, it is evident the two have some very valuable pieces.

The couple owns two pieces titled "Tempio antico," or ancient temple. While one is a second state etching, and was printed at a later date, the other is a first state etching, which is an extremely rare find.

"There are only nine in the world," said Wendorf, adding there are still actual pin holes from where Piranesi himself tacked up the corners of the first state etching, and the imprint of those holes can be seen in the second state print.

Cohasset residents Richard Wendorf and Elizabeth Morse with their Piranesi exhibit.

What is most interesting about the works of Piranesi is the fact that he was trained as an architect, but nothing he designed was ever built, and he has been remembered as an artist. His etchings — all done in black and white and almost always feature ruins — were all published, bound as books, and show his love of architecture, but with an artistic interpretation. Many of the prints Wendorf and Morse own have folds down the middle, which to some might look like an imperfection but are recognizable as being all that remains from when the prints were bound together.

Morse said scholars who are interested can still go to some libraries which carry the bound books, such as the Houghton library at Harvard University, to "get the real story" on how the prints might have been arranged when bound. She added the material the book was bound with can help provide a history, and sometimes there will even be a price located on one of the back pages of the book.

While the couple is extremely knowledgeable about the art they own, finding others in the area to share that common thread has been difficult. "We don't know of anyone on the South Shore," who shares their very specialized interest, said Morse. "If they're here, we'd love to meet them."

Because their collecting is so specialized, and it takes much time to find each piece, Wendorf and Morse have branched out in their collecting interests to include marble eggs, fossils, and some 18th century furniture.

"We have a Roman marble dining room table. It's a knock-out," said Morse, adding it was so heavy, it took four men to move it into their home. The couple also has an extensive collection of books, and Wendorf estimates they have upwards of 3,000 in their home library.

"One of the first things we did was close off some doors to have more wall space," said Morse, remembering when they moved to Cohasset five years ago. Although their home was almost brand new when they moved in, they were eager to make changes, and Morse joked that fortunately, they were friends with the builder and he had no objections to their altering his work.

During the exhibit, Wendorf and Morse will not only have the opportunity to share their exquisite collection and the knowledge they have gained over the years, but with the prints out of the house, Morse said she'll be taking advantage of having everything off the walls to do a little redecorating. Because the prints aren't very colorful, she said it has opened the door to picking out rich, hearty colors to paint the walls of her home. She is currently thinking of changing one of the rooms in her home to a shammy yellow, which she describes as a historic color which is soft, but deep, and should compliment their collection well once it's back in their home.

Gallery hours for the South Shore Art Center are Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., and Sunday from 12 p.m. to 4 p.m. The "Piranesi and His Contemporaries" exhibit will be on display in the Dillon Gallery through Feb. 22. In addition to two dozen prints by Piranesi, the exhibition includes many plates from the publication of Sir William Hamilton's vase collection and an early 20th century architectural drawing inspired by Piranesi's work. The Center will also host a Gallery Talk: "Living with Piranesi," with Richard Wendorf, on Sunday, Jan. 25 at 4 p.m., which is free to the public.

Students hope to smoke out homes without detectors

High School seniors Meghan Marr and Christen Reardon are speaking out about the importance of smoke detectors.

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Through the efforts of Cohasset Middle-High School seniors Meghan Marr and Christen Reardon, Cohasset is now one step closer to having all its homes outfitted with smoke detectors which are in good working order and meet state requirements.

As part of a community service class at the high school, the girls have been volunteering their time working at the Fire Department, checking the files for every address in town, to see how many do not have a permit which says their smoke detectors have been inspected by a member of the department. While no permit in a file could mean a home has detectors which just haven't been inspected, it could also mean the homes do not have detectors at all, which the girls hope is not the case.

"We didn't realize how many houses in Cohasset might not have smoke detectors. It could help save a lot of lives," said Meghan of their project. Both girls said they have smoke detectors in their homes and had assumed everyone did, but came to find that might not be true, once they began to investigate. Although the final numbers haven't been tallied just yet, "We had a ton," of homes without permits in their files, said Christen.

In light of their findings, the girls said they are trying to get the word out that smoke detectors are one of the most important components in fire safety, and every home in town should be outfitted with the correct number of detectors, which should be inspected by a member of the fire department.

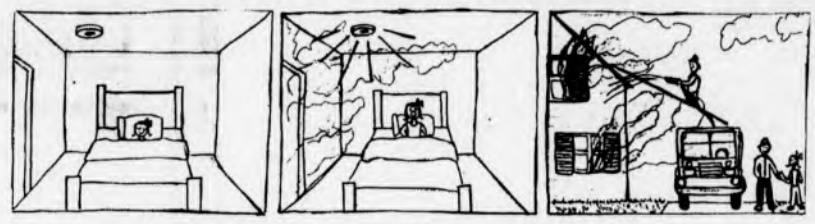
At the beginning of the semester when the girls were deciding on a project, Meghan had the idea to work at the station, in part because her father Matthew is a veteran firefighter who has been on the department for 27 years. Partner Christen thought it was a great idea and so did the members of the department.

"It was great, we were so happy to have the extra help," said Fire Chief Roger Lincoln of having the girls complete their community service at the station. The project was one he said he had been wanting to get done for quite some time, but "It's been impossible because of our manpower situation," in addition to other state mandated programs that needed attention first.

For two and a half months, the girls spent four days a week, for 90 minutes at a time, sorting through the file cabinets at the department, writing down the addresses of the homes which did not have permits in their files. The girls even made the transition with the department from its old home on Route 3A to it's newly renovated home on Elm Street. Their last day on the job will be Jan. 23, when the semester is over.

"They completed this project with a great deal of enthusiasm. They did a fabulous job," said Lincoln. He said hopefully through the efforts of the girls, the town will be able to pinpoint the homes which have not been inspected and work with residents to make sure their homes are compliant.

"They are required by law," Lincoln said of smoke detectors, adding when he first started out as a fire fighter in the 1970s, about 12,000 people a year were dying in house fires. Now, that number is down to roughly 1,000 each year, and while he said that is still 1,000 too many, he credits the reduction largely in part to homes having smoke detectors properly installed.



Lincoln said the process for having a home inspection is very easy. If a resident suspects their smoke detectors have not been properly inspected by a member of the department, a phone call is all it takes to set up an appointment. From 9:30 a.m. to noon every week day, a member of the department will be happy to come out to the home to make sure the correct number of smoke detectors are installed in the home, that they are installed in the proper location, are in good working order, and comply with state standards. In the case a home does not have smoke detectors, a member of the department will be happy to come to the home and let the owner know how many detectors are needed, and a second appointment can be set up to install them once they are purchased. Smoke detectors can be purchased at local hardware stores and various local convenience stores.

To set up an appointment with a member of the fire department for a smoke detector inspection, please call (781) 383-0616.

OPINION

No kangaroo court

While we understand Town Manager Mark Haddad is the hearing officer in matters relating to the police and other departments — in this case involving Sgt. William Quigley and Officer James McLean we think an independent person needs to be the "judge."

Mr. Haddad told selectmen Tuesday he has scheduled hearings for the police officers, who have been the subject of an ongoing investigation, that was triggered by information brought to his attention late last summer.

We think at this stage fairness is paramount and don't see how Mr. Haddad, who has conducted the investigation, can be impartial when the officers present their side of the story.

The officers, who are facing charges of misconduct that have not yet been made public, have the right for their hearings to be conducted in public.

We understand the constraints the town is under regarding "personnel issues" but that onus will be lifted when the hearings are conducted in public, as the officers' attorney has asked for them to be. There could be a lot of back and forth, with the town's side and the officers' side of the story fully aired.

In our experience hearings of this sort are like trials and include witness testimony from both sides. We covered a disciplinary hearing of a Hingham police officer two years ago that went on for weeks.

But Tuesday, the selectmen seemed rather non-committal whether they would attend the hearings at all. Apparently they are under no obligation to do so. But while it seems they may want to wash their hands of this entire affair, they should to be there as elected officials representing the citizenry to ensure the hearings are even handed.

The Town Manager has the power to hire and fire police officers, but selectmen should not so easily abdicate their position as elected officials serving the entire town.

Throughout the months-long investigation, Mr. Haddad has been resolute in his belief that protection of employees' privacy was paramount. Therefore, he has continued to decline to comment on the specifics of potential charges, alleged misconduct or the substance of the investigation. As frustrating as this has been for those of us in the information business, we respect his stance.

While we believe Mr. Haddad wants to be fair, no one should be judge, jury and executioner. Like it or not, there's at the very least the perception that nepotism in the police department and Sgt. Quigley's arrest of the chief's son were the real triggers behind the investigation. Therefore, this matter should be aired in an environment where the people in charge don't take personally the questions that have to be asked.

While Mr. Haddad may think his credibility is being challenged if asked to recuse himself from being the arbiter of the proceedings, the future careers of two officers are at stake. He has erred on the side of fairness in terms of keeping the allegations and investigation secret. We ask him to be objective in this case and realize the potential conflict for the sake of the officers, the police department and the town.

Judging from the citizens petition submitted to Town Hall this week that essentially seeks an investigation of the investigation of the police matter – going forward all issues surrounding the town's handling of the police matter should be above reproach.

Friendly reminder about rotary rules

TO THE EDITOR:

I am writing this letter as a friendly reminder to all about the "Rules of the Rotary." I have recently witnessed several near accidents while navigating the rotary near Hingham Harbor. About 99 percent of the time, these near accidents are the result of approaching traffic treating the rotary as a merge rather than yielding to rotary traffic.

The rules are really quite simple, yet the basic rules appear to confuse some folks: The car and driver in the rotary has the right of way. Any approaching traffic must yield to the car in the rotary.

Below is the text from the MA RMV: www.state.ma.us/rmv/dmanual/ :

"Because only a few states in America have traffic rotaries (traffic circles), many drivers are unfamiliar with rotaries' right-of-way rules. Be especially careful and generous when extending the right-of-way to other drivers in and near rotaries. When you approach a rotary, you must yield the right-of-way to any vehicles already in the rotary. If traffic in the rotary is heavy, stop at the edge of the rotary and wait until you can enter safely." (Emphasis added)

For those that are unfamiliar with what yield means, the following is again direct from the RMV:

"When you see a YIELD sign, slow down and be prepared to stop. Let traffic, pedestrians, or bicycles pass before you enter the intersection or join another roadway. You must come to a complete stop if traffic conditions require it."

My hope is that this reminder of the rules of the rotary helps to enforce a safe and civil navigation of the rotary at Hingham Harbor.

HEALTH NOTES

How to find answers about a host of communicable diseases

Leptospirosis, Mad Cow, AIDS, SARS, Where will it end? Frequently, at the Board of Health, we are asked to give advice on what we know about various diseases and what to do about them. Fortunately since our knowledge is limited, there's help. The Federal Government and most states have good information about dangerous diseases. For example, Washington State has a very comprehensive disease tracking system, as does Massachusetts. As a part of their response to Washington State's disease control efforts, Seattle has a web page listing the 60 communicable diseases which represent the greatest health threat to their citizens. The list is given in the table below.

The National Center for Disease Control (CDC) has a link on their web page which gives the name of almost every disease which humans are likely to contract. There are probably several thousand illnesses listed, until it becomes a matter of too much information rather than not enough. Fortunately, enough people have asked these organizations about the various diseases to the point that the same questions keep appearing. Accordingly, each organization has a listing of "Frequently asked questions" and responses to the same. The outfit which gets asked the most questions also, probably has had enough time to get the best answers. In my book, the clear leader with the best answers is the CDC. In general, people seem to want the same information which, where illnesses are concerned, are: the right name of the disease, a description, its severity, information about contagion, recommended safeguards, and symptoms. The CDC's list contains the answers to the following questions:

- What is (Name of the Disease)
- How do people get it?
- How long is it between the time of exposure and when people become sick?
- Where is it found?
- How is it treated?
- Can it be prevented? How?

Of course, there's more. The CDC tells you everything about the disease almost up to the name of the doctor you should call. The good thing about this information is that it represents a distillation of the experience of literally millions of facts about the illness, who it's affected and how it behaves. This is not something one can obtain from anecdotal information from unknown and unqualified sources in spite of what their proponents say.

For major outbreaks: those which find their way into the press, there's much more. Most of the material one reads in the papers comes from the CDC or the World Health Organization web site.

If you are interested in seeing what's on this web site, the address is: http://www.cdc.gov/az.do the /az.do gives you the link to the alphabetical listing of the illnesses. If you go to a doctor, or nurse practitioner, most likely, they'll give you the same information, but here. it's in writing and you don't have to remember all the particulars of what's been told to you.

A toast to the Boston Braves

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Max West died the other day.

If no one else takes notice I will because he was one of the heroes of my youth, a time when I collected baseball cards and looked forward to the days when my uncle Oscar and I used to sit in the left field pavilion and watch the Boston Braves.

The Braves are long gone from Boston now, in Atlanta by way of Milwaukee, and the young men who played for them while they were in Boston and the kids who remembered them are starting to drop off, too.

The Red Sox were also in Boston in those days but they were champagne at the country club after Tom Yawkey bought them and the Braves, well, they were a shot and a beer at the neighborhood pub.

What other team can boast of a catcher and a first baseman who fought each other in the ring at Boston Garden and drew a better crowd for the two of them than the whole team often drew at Braves Field?

That would be the catcher, Al Spohrer, and the first baseman, Art "The Great" Shires, then with the Chicago White Sox but later with the Braves, who fought before a house of 17,000 that paid $32,700 to watch them.

Shires won by a fourth round TKO.

What other team could boast an owner, Judge Emil Fuchs, who named himself manager and actually sat on the bench and directed his team in a business suit until he was called away in midseason to handle a legal case.

The story is probably apocryphal but I'll pass it on anyway. The bases were loaded and no one was out when the Judge turned to his team and asked:

"What shall we try now boys?"

"What about a squeeze play," came the response.

"No," said the Judge. "Let us score our runs in an honorable way."

What other team had a manager like Bill McKechnie, who was named manager of the year by The Sporting News "for his managerial skill . . . enabling him to pilot a mediocre team to a fifth place finish."

Bill's 1935 team finished eighth with a record of 38 wins, 115 losses, 61-1/2 games out of first place. Four years later his Cincinnati team won the pennant and five years late the World Series.

Then there was the time when another manager, Casey Stengel, whose teams never struggled out of second division, was hit by a taxi cab in Kenmore Square and broke his leg so badly he was in St. Elizabeth's Hospital for two months.

And Dave Egan, the acerbic columnist for the old Boston Record, named the cabbie as the man who had done the most for Boston baseball.

This was the team Max West played for and I rooted for, a team that included Vince DiMaggio, Joe's elder brother, who held the record for strikeouts with 134, and Rabbit Maranville, a second baseman at 41 who would probably still be playing if he hadn't broken his leg.

All the fun ended after the war when the contractors Lou Perini, Guido Russo and Joe Maney, dubbed "the Three Little Steamshovels," bought the club and moved it to Milwaukee where it became just another baseball team.

Ford pledges to grow GOP from unenrolled

Conley Ford, candidate for Republican State Committeeman in Sen. Bob Hedlund's district, pledges to recruit unenrolled and new voters to the Republican Party.

"Just imagine on Super Bowl Sunday – the majority of seats in Houston's Reliant Stadium filled with people that aren't rooting for either side," Ford says.

That's what's happening in Massachusetts which has 2 million unenrolled voters — more than half all registered voters. "We have to get the unenrolled enthused about government and registering Republican," Ford says. "We have to connect the disconnected – the future of the state depends on it."

"Today, Republicans aren't players. We're not even in the ball game," Ford says. "That has got to change. We need to be the party that runs with the ball."

"Without more Republicans, we have no defense against more unnecessary spending and higher taxes."

Pap bows out of GOP state committee race

After submitting the signatures needed to get on the ballot for Republican State Committee in the March 2 election, Victor Pap of Weymouth, local Republican activist has taken his name out of the running and has thrown his support behind John Cafferty of Hingham. As a native of the largest town in the district that also includes Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Duxbury, Marshfield, Scituate and Norwell Pap said he had the slight advantage, in the expected low-voter turnout race.

"Victor would've won hands down had he stayed in the race," says Republican state representative candidate Doug Veeder of Weymouth.

In budget disputes, Democrats are the ones in the driver's seat

STATEHOUSE ROUNDUP

CRAIG SANDLER

A recap and analysis of the week in state government.

House Speaker Thomas Finneran told his members the first step they should take to stimulate the economy in 2004 is to undo the work of Mitt Romney, and the response was thunderous applause.

It was the opening of a year-long argument. While the governor, back from his holiday vacation, expressed optimism that he and the Legislature can get a lot accomplished together, the focus this year is likely to be on what the two parties (in several senses of that word) accomplish separately.

The priorities themselves don't quite add up. Romney has promised to hold education and homelessness programs harmless in his budget, due out next week and always the main focus of contention as the Democrats and Republicans struggle for power.

At the same time Romney is promising to keep education at least level-funded, the Speaker is calling for a big new early childhood education initiative, but also warning darkly about difficult choices.

Finneran is no doubt waiting to see how Romney keeps all his spending pledges while also keeping the no-new-taxes one. And of course, there's the back-and-forth over the economic stimulus bill.

Both sides say job creation is goal number one this year, yet Romney axed half of the stimulus bill Democrats sent him in November, and the Democrats gave no indication that they seriously considered the merits of the governor's objections before announcing they plan to reverse his vetoes.

Overriding vetoes is pretty much the exact opposite of cooperation. In part this can be explained by a disagreement over the state's revenue performance. When Republicans are hoping to preserve programs without raising taxes, they tend to be become the fiscally — well, not exactly liberal — let's say the fiscally cheerful party. This has now occurred.

Generally speaking, it's the Democrats who are cautioning of a $2 billion spending gap ahead while the Republicans say it's closer to $1 billion. And indeed word came that revenues were up again, $60 million or 4.3 percent over last year, and now stand $356 million ahead of benchmarks. But in his address, Finneran warned of dark, difficult times ahead once the House begins amending Romney's budget line items.

In these disputes, for now, the Democrats are in complete control. As has been the case since 1992, the Republican governor can really only ask and posture, because in practice the numbers don't allow Republicans victory on any important item. To correct that situation, Romney has publicly promised to do all he can to elect more Republicans to the House and Senate, a process that by its nature involves making the incumbent look so bad that the votes turn out to remove him or her from office.

Safe to say: the incumbents (86 percent of them Democrats) are not thinking, "I'm so looking forward to working with the governor this year to help him achieve his political, professional and personal objectives!"

This is at least as important a consideration this year as any revenue number or policy proposal. So cooperation may be a bit much to expect. The Democrats have the votes to pass enough big items on their own to avoid any accusations of gridlock or do-nothingness, defusing the urgency behind appeals to throw the bums out.

Finneran did strike one note of willingness to cooperate with Romney, pledging to work with the Romney team and the Senate to pass a major revision of the state's rules on affordable housing creation, so more people can afford to live in more communities in Massachusetts.

But that's theoretical, and agreement on a housing plan has already long since been promised but not achieved. The reality is how the speaker chose to open his speech, and what the House really has decided to do.

That's to criticize the governor, then exercise its partisan power to defeat him.

• Finneran details objectives, but stays silent on marriage

In his speech, the speaker made four main points:

— The House will override at least some of Romney's vetoes in the economic stimulus package because overrides are necessary if the state is "serious" about job creation.

— The state should triple its investment in early childhood education, even if other programs have to be trimmed to do so. The federal government will help pay for the expansion, Finneran later said.

— He pledged to work cooperatively with the governor on reforming the housing laws.

— He called for creation of a trust "over the next few months" to pay for the development and maintenance of the Rose Kennedy Greenway, the 30-acre swatch of urban green due to emerge when the old Central Artery is demolished along Boston's waterfront.

The overriding theme was children: how the House can act this year to provide Massachusetts kids with a good education, a good job and the chance to buy a good home. But in laying out his thoughts about 2004, the speaker was silent on perhaps the highest-visibility issue of all this year: gay marriage.

• Weld, Harshbarger weigh in on marriage question— Former Gov. William F. Weld and some of the heaviest hitters in Massachusetts' jurisprudence issued a letter urging lawmakers to allow recognition of same-sex couples. Drafted by Laurence Tribe, a constitutional scholar at Harvard Law School, the letter was cosigned by Renee Landers, the president of the Boston Bar Association, and former Attorneys General James Shannon and Scott Harshbarger. Both Speaker Finneran and Senate President Robert Travaglini said the letter is likely to have some effect on lawmakers' thinking, but ultimately the question is one of individual conscience and will be decided that way.

• Reilly appeals auto insurance decision — Attorney General Thomas Reilly filed a suit asking the courts here to rescind the insurance commissioner's decree that auto insurance rates should rise 2.5 percent this year. Reilly said the commissioner used faulty methodology in setting the new rates, specifically: "the (Division of Insurance) did not have a reasonable basis to adopt a new underwriting profit model that leaves consumers paying about $80 million more than the method that had been in place for the previous 20 years."

• AG says he should get jurisdiction over securities cases — Secretary of State William Galvin has been getting a lot of favorable press lately for his efforts to fight abuses in the mutual fund industry — the latest being a wind-blown, Gary Cooper-esque photo shot in the Financial District and running in this month's Boston Magazine. But Attorney General Reilly suggested securities regulation actually ought to be shared by the attorney general's office. Cynics suggested that perhaps Reilly simply wanted a piece of the media action as he positions himself for 2006, but the AG said it's clumsy and costly for his office to have to work through the Secretary of State's office to prosecute evildoing financiers.

• Rallies keep gay marriage at top of agenda — Both rallying groups claimed to be supporting marriage, and each had a different message. Last week, a coalition assembled by the Massachusetts Family Institute argued allowing same-sex couples to wed would be one more step in the degradation of marriage as an institution.

The group called for a constitutional amendment specifically banning same-sex marriage. Last Thursday, about 1,000 supporters of same-sex marriage rallied against that amendment, and urged the Legislature to heed the Supreme Judicial Court decision that found, under the current Constitution, that same-sex couples must be legally recognized in order to remove "second-class citizen" status from gays and lesbians.

• SJC rules in favor of senate's election date — The justices of the Supreme Judicial Court decided there's nothing in the Constitution to prevent the Senate from setting an election date to fill a vacancy that hasn't occurred yet. When the Senate in November set March 2 as the date for a special election to choose the successor to former Sen. Cheryl Jacques, Republicans sued, claiming it's not allowed because the vacancy was not due to take effect until Jan. 4. Republicans were especially distraught that the election will be tilted in favor of the Democrats, because more Democrats than Republicans will be motivated to vote in Super Tuesday's high-visibility presidential primary. Chief Justice Margaret Marshall said during hearings on the matter that the scheduling may not be fair; the ruling showed the court does not equate unfair with unconstitutional.

Beacon Hill Roll Call

By Bob Katzen

January 9, 2004

QUESTIONS

BHRC is sponsored and underwritten by Fleet Bank as a public service for readers of the Mariner. It is written by Bob Katzen who has covered the legislature for more than 25 years and has been providing this feature to newspapers since 1975.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local representatives' votes on three roll calls from prior sessions. There were no roll calls in the House or Senate last week.

All three roll calls are on proposed amendments to legislation making changes in the state's unemployment insurance system. The bill increases the unemployment insurance tax paid by employers to fund the unemployment trust fund that provides benefits to laid-off workers. Estimates of the increase range from $450 million to $578 million. Other provisions include higher tax rates for employers who frequently lay off workers and lower rates for those that do not; a reduction from 30 to 26 in the number of weeks laid-off workers can collect benefits when the unemployment rate is below 5.1 percent; and stronger anti-fraud measures. Supporters argued that these reforms will combat fraud and said that the increased taxes are fair and necessary to prevent the insolvency of the fund. They noted that without legislative action, an automatic scheduled hike of $610 million would take effect on January 1 and would not include any reforms of the system. Opponents argued the bill would make Massachusetts' unemployment insurance costs the highest in the nation, encourage employers to move out of state and result in the loss of tens of thousands of jobs. They said that the bill puts the entire new burden on businesses and expressed support for Gov. Romney's plan that takes a balanced approach by sharing the burden between businesses and employees.

DETERMINING 5.1 PERCENT UNEMPLOYMENT RATE (S 2150)

House 40-119, rejected an amendment changing a section of the bill that triggers a reduction from 30 to 26 weeks in the length of time a laid off worker is eligible to collect benefits when the unemployment rate falls to 5.1 percent in each of the state's ten metropolitan statistical areas. The amendment would trigger the reduction to 26 weeks when the statewide unemployment rate dips to 5.1 percent. Amendment supporters said the unemployment rate has only dipped to 5.1 percent in each individual area once in the last ten years and argued that using the ten areas is a ploy to ensure that the benefit period is rarely, if ever, reduced to 26 weeks. They said it would be unfair for the benefit period to remain at 30 weeks while unemployment is low across the state but remains at 5.2 percent in one area. Amendment opponents said that using ten areas is a fairer system that protects workers. They argued that if a statewide basis is used, workers in an area with very high unemployment would see their benefit period reduced simply because the less relevant state average falls to 5.1 percent. (A "Yea" vote is for the amendment that uses a statewide average. A "Nay" vote is against the amendment and favors using the ten metropolitan statistical areas).

INCREASE NUMBER OF WEEKS FROM 15 TO 17 FOR ELIGIBILITY (S 2150)

House 36-122, rejected an amendment increasing from 15 to 17 weeks the minimum period of time an employee must work in order to be eligible to collect unemployment benefits. Amendment supporters said Massachusetts is one of only five states that require 15 weeks or less. They argued that the hike to 17 would save employers some $30 million and require workers to shoulder some of the burden in fixing the broken unemployment system. Amendment opponents said the increase is unfair and would hurt many seasonal employees. They argued it would also affect many women who exhaust their welfare benefits, find a short term job and are unable to collect either welfare or unemployment benefits when they are laid off. (A "Yea" vote is for the increase from 15 to 17 weeks. A "Nay" vote is against the increase).

REDUCE BENEFIT PERIOD IF TAXES ARE RAISED IN EMERGENCY (S 2150)

House 25-133, rejected an amendment to a provision in the bill that allows the director of the department of labor to raise the taxes paid by employers if the solvency of the unemployment fund and/or the continuation of payments to laid off workers is in jeopardy. The amendment would also automatically trigger a reduction from 30 to 26 in the number of weeks of benefits a laid off worker can collect. Amendment supporters said this would ensure that employees shoulder some of the burden if the fund is in jeopardy. Amendment opponents said the fund would likely be insolvent only during a high unemployment period and argued that such a period would not be a wise time to reduce unemployment benefits. (A "Yea" vote is for the amendment reducing the collection period from 30 to 26 weeks if the director raises taxes. A "Nay" vote is against the reduction from 30 to 26 weeks).

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

REPORT FIRES IN SCHOOLS (S 1372)- The House gave initial approval to a Senate-approved bill requiring all public and private school principals to immediately report to the local fire department any incident involving the unauthorized ignition of any fire in the school building. The report is required regardless of the size of the fire or whether there was a response by the fire department. Supporters cite the case of a student who set a small fire that was not reported to the fire department. They argued that the same student's setting of a second, larger fire could have been prevented if the first one was reported and the child received help through the cooperation of the fire department and school officials.

Lady hoopsters bounce back with win after tough Abington loss

CORRESPONDENT

After an attention-getting 4 and 0 start, the Cohasset girls varsity basketball team has skidded slightly into some tough January competition. Overall, the Lady Skippers remain at a respectable 5-2 record.

First place Abington added a digit to the Cohasset loss column on Jan. 9 when the Green Wave squad pummeled Cohasset. Despite a home court advantage, the Lady Skippers saw their game evaporate into a painful 59-33 outcome.

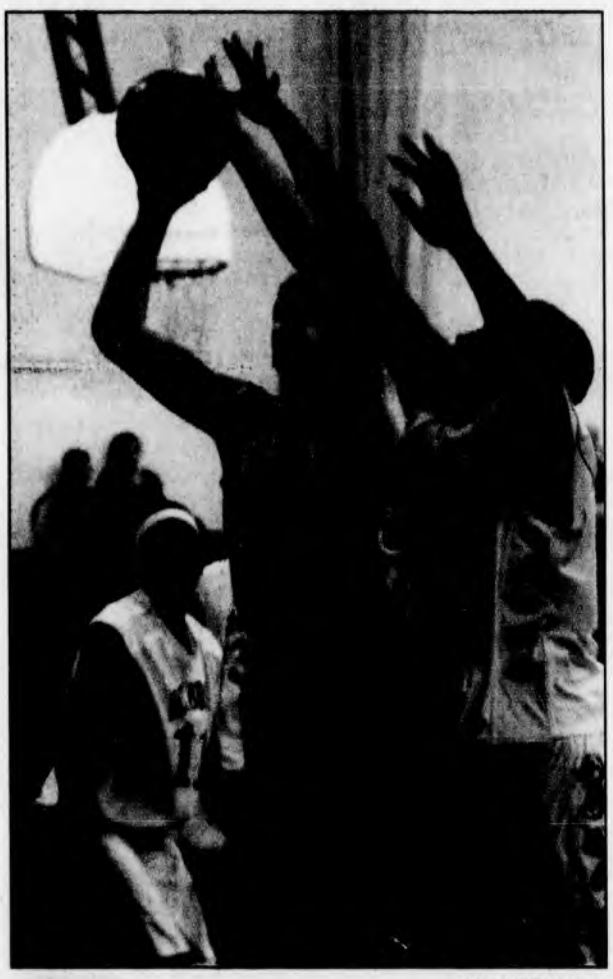
Cohasset head coach John Levangie made no excuses.

"Compared to Cohasset, Abington showed more experience on the court," he said. "We couldn't match them. We just didn't click, and wound up losing."

Two factors contributing significantly to the Cohasset difficulties were the absence of point guard Jen Buckley and Chelsea Grossman fouling out of the game.

"This was a tough game for me and the rest of the team," Nicole Whitney noted. "We did our very best to stick with it, but we just couldn't put the points on the board."

Other members of the team felt Whitney underestimated the value of her own contribution. Many of her teammates talked of Nicole's valiant effort to defend against Green Wave superstar Erin Curran.



The tables turned abruptly and

CHS grapplers disappointed over loss to Duxbury

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

One wouldn't think the flip of a coin would have much bearing on a wrestling meet, but it can and, in fact, it did in Duxbury's 40-27 win over Cohasset Saturday.

By winning the pre-match coin flip, Duxbury was able to set it's odd weight match-ups after Cohasset, and this allowed the Dragons coach to set a favorable lineup against what the Skippers were showing. Cohasset coach Torin Sweeney didn't want to use that as an excuse for the loss, but he did concede the Dragons were able to arrange three distinct advantages thanks to the way the coin landed.

"The way we were wrestling, it might not have made a difference in the end," said Sweeney. "I was hoping our guys would step it up against Duxbury, but we didn't have a great match."

Fortunately, the Skippers were able to salvage wins in the other two head-to-head meeting at Saturday's quad match at Holliston, topping Barnstable, 48-33, and the host Panthers, 51-18, to improve to 7-2 on the season.

The Skippers were paced on the day by three triple winners.

Junior Matt Baroudi, a New England finalist last year, had two pins at 215 pounds, but the win everyone was buzzing over was his come from behind third period victory over Holliston's Matt Culley. Culley was ranked ahead of Baroudi prior to the match, but the CHS standout has now been bumped ahead of him to number three in the state.

Junior Joe Kehoe (140) and senior captain Phil Strazzulla (145) had one pin each among their three wins.

There were also three double winners, with junior Kevin Dinsmore's story being the most noteworthy among this trio's.

Wrestling at 125, Dinsmore bested his Duxbury counterpart and then stunned Holliston's Jim Dickson, ranked 10th in the state, with a dominant 16-5 win. Dinsmore then "bumped up" to face top 130-pound standout Barnstable grappler Joe Sanz and had the lead on him until he was reversed with five seconds to go in the match.

"Kevin had a whale of a day," noted Sweeney. "I bumped him up because I wanted to see what he'd do against that kind of competition, and he did a great

Norwell-Cohasset squad improves to 4-0 with win over Carver

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

The Norwell-Cohasset gymnastics team improved to 4-0 with a 124.6-112.9 win over Carver on the road Monday.

Norwell junior Jenn Guiney won the all-around with a score of 31.0 to pace the victory, and senior captain Samantha Rosen, of Norwell, was second in the all-around, doing a solid job filling in for ailing standout Nancy Durkin, a Cohasset junior.

Guiney took third in the floor (8.7) and seconds on the uneven bars (8.1) and vault (7.8), while Rosen took a first on vault (8.1). The bars score was a personal best.

Durkin did return after missing last Thursday's meet with Duxbury to compete in three events. The CHS junior won both the floor exercise (8.7) and bars (8.6), setting a new personal best with the latter score.

Coach Kara Connerty expects to have Durkin back competing in the all-around competition when the Nor-Cohs face Hingham tonight at home (Mass. Gym in Hingham 7 p.m. start).

Norwell sophomore Erin Kelly won the beam with a 7.7, set a personal best in the bars (8.0) to take third and had a strong fourth place performance on floor (7.9).

Kiersten Shontz chipped in third place points for her 7.7 on vault.

"I'm happy with where we are right now at 4-0," said coach Connerty. ""Hingham should give us a good test. I'm looking forward to tat one. It'll be the mid-point of the season."

The Nor-Cohs will play the same five Pilgrim Conference rivals over the second half of the season, beginning with next Tuesday's hosting of Randolph.

Win over Hull lifts CHS hockey team to magic .500 mark

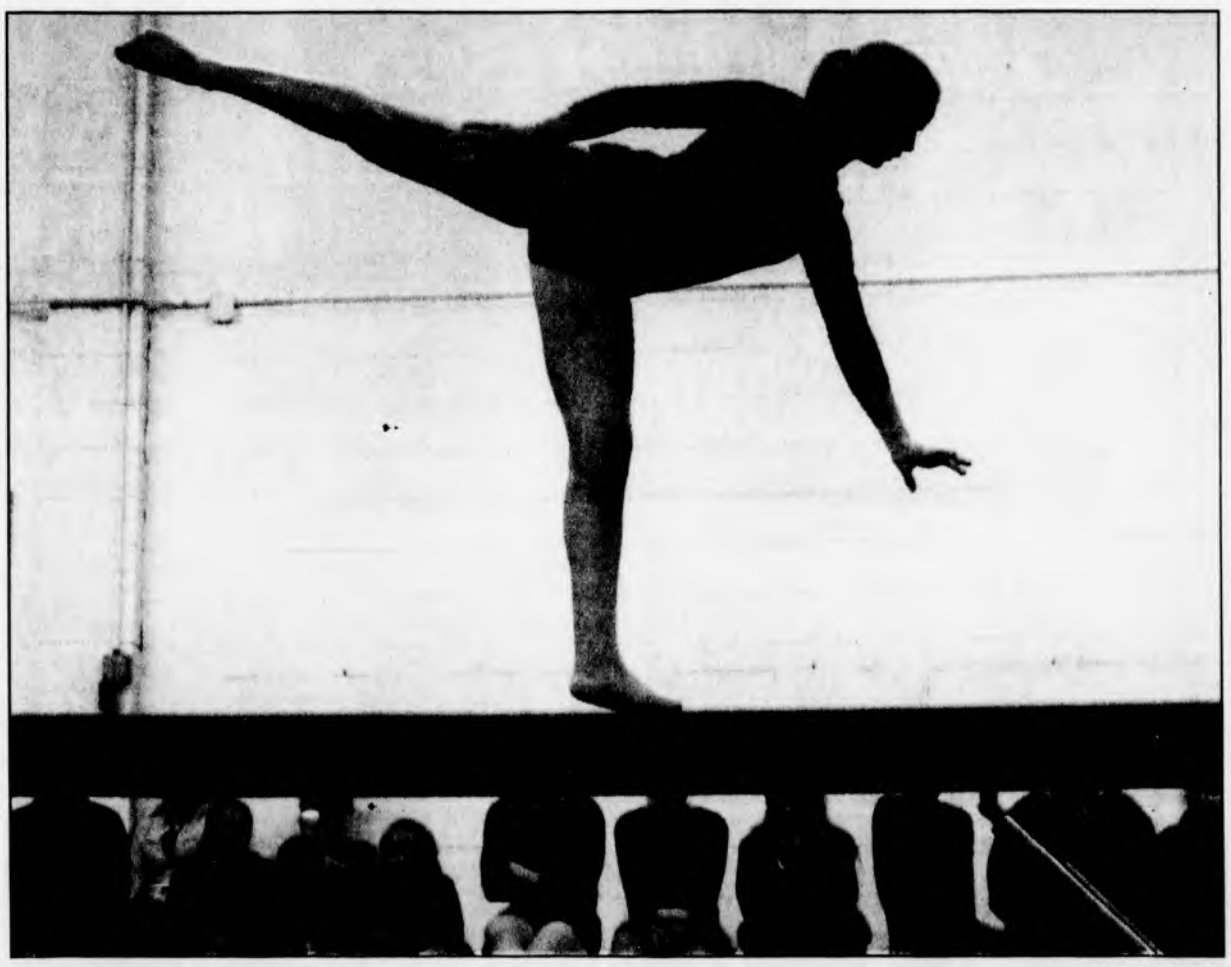
By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Even up. That's the only statline that matters at this time for the Cohasset High hockey team.

Six games into his tenure, Skippers head coach Ben Virga still does not now quite what to make of his team, which checks into this week with a record of 2-2-2, but he's certain he'll have a much better idea by this time a week from now, when his charges have completed their first run through the South Shore League.

"We've seen the so called better teams in the league in Abington and Norwell now, and even though we've lost to them, I feel like we can play with them next time if we play to our potential," said Virga, who served as an assistant hockey coach last winter at Milton High. "We've got games coming up with the three teams in our league we haven't seen yet. We'll see if we're also-rans or legitimate contenders for the league championship in those ones. If we can win those games, I think we've got a good shot at playing for a league championship."

The Skippers will host Mashpee tomorrow night at Hingham's Pilgrim Arena (6:50 p.m. start), travel to Harwich on Saturday night (8 p.m. start) and host Carver on Wednesday at Pilgrim (5:40 p.m. start) to finish up the first go-round through the South Shore League slate.



With a 7-0 win over South Shore League rival Hull on Saturday night at Pilgrim Arena, the Skippers pulled even to the magic .500 mark at 2-2-2. This was the CHS squad's first victory since its season opening 4-2 decision over Scituate on Dec. 13.

While Virga openly admits he is still "feeling out" his team to some extent, he is clearly a lot happier with what he's seen over the last few games.

"I think since the end of the Norwell game, we've been picking it up," asserted Virga, referring to the disheartening 5-0 loss to the Clippers on Jan. 3. "I thought we played very well in Abington, but just ran into some tough luck and a good goaltender, and then we did some good things against Hull."

The Skippers are a much younger team than their two pri-

Sophomore Dave McKenna had two pins at 135 and Matt Casey had a pin and a decision for his two wins at 160.

Freshman Adam Smith (130) won his first varsity match, and his fellow frosh Tim Toomey fought from his back to stay alive in the first period and an 8-0 deficit in the second to notch a pin.

Solo wins were also recorded by sophomore Jake Watts at 103 (by pin), Pat O'Brien at 171 and junior Colin Regan at 145.

There were also a handful of forfeits mixed in the Barnstable and Holliston matches, so several Cohasset wrestlers did not get the chance to wrestle more than once or twice.

The Skippers also notched an 18-0 win over an undermanned Hull squad last Friday.

The visiting Pirates had only four wrestlers available for the bout, and Cohasset grapplers won all four matches.

John Keniley had a pin at 152, as did Watts at 103. Pat O'Brien won at 171 and freshman Myles Collins-Wooley (140) won his first match first varsity by a score of 8-6.

The Skipper grapplers traveled to Norwell last night and will host their annual tournament this Saturday. The Cohasset Tourney, which will feature 12 teams (Brockton, Duxbury, Hingham, Hanover, Hull, Holbrook, Norwell, Marshfield, Scituate, Rockland, Lynnfield and host Cohasset), will start at 10 a.m. The finals in the 14 weight classes are tentatively slated to begin at 5 p.m..

mary rivals, Abington and Norwell. Virga uses only three seniors and four juniors in his top 19 rotation, and he is doing his best to keep that in mind at all times.

"Abington had 13 seniors on its roster and Norwell has mostly upperclassmen on the ice too," said Virga. "Our learning curve is a little greater; that's a fact of life."

Whichever way it goes, the coach insists he is extremely pleased with the work ethic and attitude of his charges, as well as the atmosphere fostered around the team.

"Honestly, I have never worked with a better group of kids," said Virga. "They're a hard working group who listen to me. The parents, the community and the school have been extremely supportive. I can't ask for anymore than this."

Abington 4, Skippers 2

The Skippers out-shot Abington 32-22 in last Wednesday's 4-2 loss on the road, including 12-6 in the third period. Senior Rob Carpenter scored both goals in that game for Cohasset.

Carpenter's first goal tied the game at 1-1 early in the second period, with sophomores Matt O'Connell and Mark Bouchard. Abington re-took the lead a few minutes later, but Carpenter answered that late in the middle frame on a nice solo effort.

"I think Robbie is playing as well as any forward in our league right now," said Virga of Carpenter. "He has the talent to dominate, and he's really picked it up the last few games."

Unfortunately, the host Green Wave would score the gamewinner midway through the third and add an empty -netter with 10 seconds to play.

Sophomore Mark Bouchard scored the only goal the Skippers would need a mere 97 seconds into these proceedings. Junior defenseman Tim Pilczak and senior captains Mike Devine and Mike Rasmussen would score before the end of the first period, which saw Cohasset out-shoot the Pirates by a staggering 21-2 margin.

Rasmussen and Carpenter scored unassisted goals in the second period, allowing Virga to use pretty much the entire third period as an extended audition for third and fourth liners and other reserves. Sophomore Brandon Smith, a semi-regular on the third line this season, netted his first goal of the campaign in the third to close out the scoring.

O'Connell finished with three assists and sophomore Stefan Parnell made six saves for his first shutout of the season.

Hoping to spark things offensively, Virga juggled his lines prior to the Hull game.

The most noteworthy element of the change was the move of returning league all-star defenseman Mike Devine to forward for the first time in his career.

For the time being, the slick -skating and offensively gifted Devine will skate on the right wing with Rasmussen as his center and O'Connell on the left.

"I felt we needed a little more size and speed up front, and Mike is an extremely talented offensive player," explained Virga. "I think his addition to the frontline gives us, potentially, two very good scoring lines."

The third line, for now, has sophomore Ben Libby centering junior Mark Davis and freshman Austen Lanzillotti.

The coach is quick to point out he never would have considered this move had it not been for the steadily improving play of junior defensemen Pilczak, Joe Durkin and Crandon Leahy. The former two were regulars in the blue line rotation last year and have developed as hoped, but Leahy has been the really pleasant surprise.

"I'm gaining more and more confidence in those three guys," said Virga. "Crandon started late because of football going long, but he's bene pickign things up unbelievably over the last few weeks. His progress has made it a lot easier to move (Devine) up front."

These three have been seeing the bulk of the action on defense, but juniors Mark Donovan and freshman Conor Holway have also seen an increase in their roles of late. And freshman Zack Murray is another candidate for minutes, according to Virga.

You missed lacrosse registration!

Late sign-ups available

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse is accepting late registrations in order to flesh out its rosters and to make more playing opportunities available for local athletes.

The lacrosse organization held its annual registration on January 10, reaching its optimum roster size for all but one age level, the seventh- and eighth grade girls.

But the group will start a waiting list for players who missed sign-up and the addition of enough names to that list would allow Cohasset Youth Lacrosse to create additional teams.

"We're at our ideal roster sizes, but if there are enough late registrants, we could expand the program and add an additional team or two," said CYL organizer Chuck Jaffe. "In the past, we have had to turn kids away. This year, we have enough coaches so that we could expand further if needed. We'd like to accommodate as many children as possible."

Jaffe noted that the program can only add teams until Feb. 1 in order to accommodate the Mass Bay Youth Lacrosse League's scheduling process. That being the case, late registrations will be taken through Feb. 1.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse serves boys and girls in grades 3 through 8. Girls in grades 3 and 4 play in a weekly clinic, while all other age groups play in the Mass Bay league.

Late registration for youth lacrosse costs $200, which includes the $65 late fee. The cost for the grade 3-4 girls clinic is $90.

For information or to register your child, contact Jaffe at 781-383-9858 or cajaffe@aol.com

Sci-Coh swimmers make big splash to open season

SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Scituate-Cohasset High swim team began its season with two meets last week versus Nauset and Nantucket High School.

The team of 22, with a majority of underclassmen, has been practicing hard for a month at the MDC pool in Weymouth. Led by fifth year coach Jami Kearney, the team is looking strong for a team of only two seniors and four juniors. This year's loss of 19 seniors has affected the team quite a bit. However, there are many promising freshmen and sophomores stepping up to support the team for several years to come.

The team competed in their first dual meet on Jan. 6 versus the Nauset Warriors. The Scituate-Cohasset Swim Team, also known as "the Sci-Cohs," had a 2 and 1/2 hour bus ride each way to Nauset's pool on the Cape. Despite their arduous trek, the swimmers did quite well. The Sci-Cohs finished with five first places, six second places, nine third places and seven fourth places, accumulating many points for the team. However, the Warriors outlasted them for the win.

At 7 a.m. on Saturday morning, 16 swimmers piled on a bus headed for Hyannis. From there, the team continued to take an hour-long ferry ride to Nantucket, where they would face the Nantucket Whalers. The Sci-Cohs had an amazing meet, breaking seven team records. Five of the seven were broken by the team's sophomores and freshmen.

Saturday's meet was the first of the season which included the diving competition. Nauset's pool didn't have a diving board. Nevertheless, diver Becky Keys placed first against eight other divers from Nantucket. Keys, a junior at SHS, and fellow diver Darin Webster travel to Sandwich High School twice a week to practice their dives.

The diving portion of the meet was assisted by former Sci-Coh team member Sara Duggan. Duggan, a graduate of the Scituate High School Class of 2001, attends the University of Vermont as a junior. She continues to dive competitively for UVM.

Although the Sci-Cohs made an incredible effort, they were defeated by the Whalers, making their season record 0-2. Their next meet was scheduled for yesterday at Barnstable High.

The complete results of last week's meets are listed below.

Green Wave washes over Skippers

Poor shooting does in boys hoop squad at Abington

By Mark Goodman
CORRESPONDENT

The Cohasset boys basketball team knew what was coming Friday night against Abington.

The scouting report on the Green Wave noted how they come fast and strong right out of the gate. Unfortunately for the Skippers, that is exactly what they did.

Abington started the game with a 17-6 run and never looked back, taking a 60-41 victory in the South Shore League contest.

Cohasset center Sean Connolly was the only offensive threat for Cohasset in the first half, as he scored eight of the team's 15 points in the frame, including their first six. The senior was able to put back offensive rebounds and made a couple nice post moves, as he shot 4-for-5 from the floor in the half.

Not much else went right, however, for the Skippers. The Abington players ran when they could, and had several solid half-court sets with excellent ball movement. The result was a lot of lay-ups and open shots, and the Green Wave made their share.

Senior Brian McSharry and junior Jon Conway led the way for the home team with 11 and 10 points, respectively, in the first half. McSharry, a 6-foot-2 forward, brought the relatively large crowd to their feet with a one-handed dunk off a fast break that gave Abington the lead for good just a few minutes into the game.

Conway led all scorers with 17 points for the night, while McSharry had 15.

Connolly led Cohasset with 14, while fellow senior Chris Bilodeau had 12. For head coach Ron Ford's team, however, it was not enough.

"We certainly didn't play well in those first eight minutes," Ford said. "That was the best game we've seen Abington play. They dominated the game."

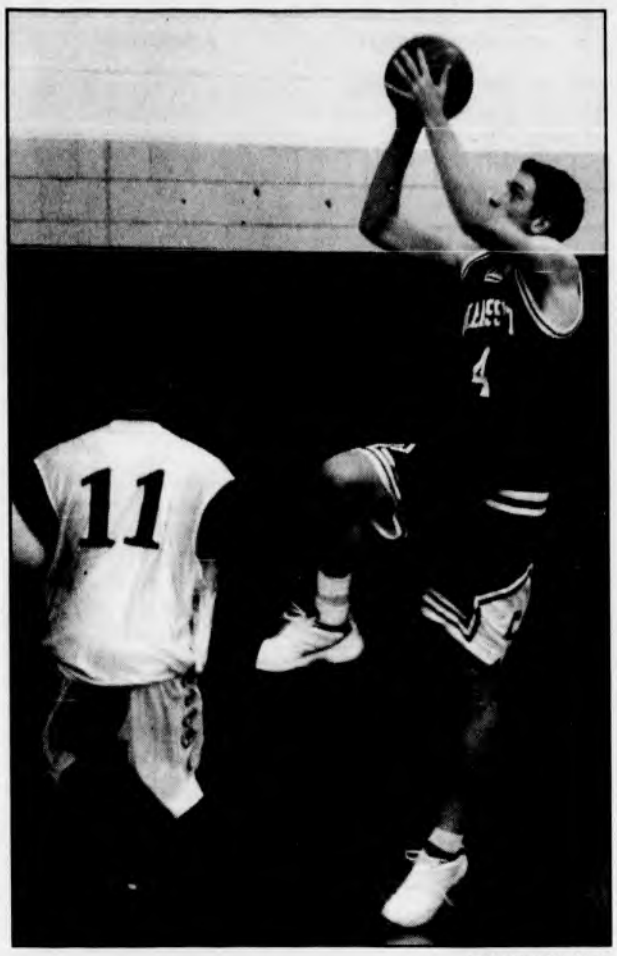
After falling behind early, the Skippers tried to get back in the game with the three-point shot, but they were not successful. Cohasset shot 1-for-12 from behind the arc in the first half, 3-for-21 for the game.

For the most part, the second half was similar to the first. The Green Wave came out strong once again, starting the half with a 10-2 run to give them the biggest lead of the game at 40-17.

At that point, Ford called a timeout, and for a couple minutes it seemed like whatever he said to the team in the huddle might just turn the game around. Cohasset came out with a 6-0 run of its own, sparked by a Trevor Brady three and a steal and a basket from point guard John Andrade.

The Skippers went into a press that worked very effectively, forcing Abington into 15 second-half turnovers.

Cohasset's problem was turning those turnovers into points. The shots simply were not falling for the Skippers on this night, and on a couple occasions they turned the ball right back over to Abington.



And, as Ford noted after the game, the Green Wave were able to make his team pay when the press did not work.

"They burned us when we didn't get the steal," he said.

Andrade played one of his best games of the young season, scoring seven points and playing solid defense. Abington's guards were not able to get much dribble penetration, forcing them to do a lot of passing around the perimeter.

Unfortunately for Cohasset, a lot of passes found open shooters on the wing or in the paint area, as Abington shot the ball well all night long. The Green Wave (6-2 overall, 3-1 league) came into the game as the second best team in the South Shore League, behind Norwell.

Cohasset, meanwhile, started the week 2-5, and 0-2 in the league. They have a couple chances to improve that mark this week, as they played Carver at home on Tuesday and will take on travel to Harwich Friday night. The Skippers will then spend the night on the Cape and play at Cape Cod Tech Saturday positively the very next day when the Skippers traveled to Nantucket through ocean swells to face the Whalers. In a 53-35 victory, Casey Anderson led the team with 24 points, closely followed by Ashley Faber with 13 and Danielle Pinkus with 8. Mia Lieb-Lappen and Danielle Pinkus took ownership of the defensive boards.

"This was the best game I've seen the girls play," exulted Coach Levangie. "Personally, I attribute this win to their intense focus and unmatched hustle. It was astounding to see what the girls could do."

Sophomore Chelsea Grossman agreed: "We played very well. We forced several turnovers, racked up the points, and boarded the home-bound ferry with a nice win under our belts."

This week the Lady Skippers face two difficult teams, Carver this past Tuesday and Harwich on Friday at home (6:30 p.m. start). Last week, Harwich snuck past Abington by a score of 57-53, so Cohasset has some work to do.

It is still too early to predict the chances for a Cohasset appearance in the SSL Tournament. As they enter the toughest stretch in their schedule, the Lady Skippers remain unified and optimistic.

CHS skiers start strong

SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

With two races under their belts, the Cohasset High Ski Team is off to a strong start. They are coached for the fourth year by Jack Dane. The league is divided into two divisions, the Large Schools (Brookline, Fontbonne, Newton North, Newton South, Waltham and Wellesley) and Small Schools (Cohasset, Dover/Sherborn, Milton, Oliver Ames and Weston). The racer who places #1 in the race gains 44 points, the #2 racer gains 43 points, and so on. The team's point total for the day is the sum of each individual racer's point totals. The teams and racers from each division will earn the chance to compete at the states. This year the racers will also have a chance to face their rivals from the Western Massachusetts prior to the state finals at Mount Wachusett in late February. Cohasset's goal is to send the whole team this year.

January 8th was the first race of the season. In addition to the subzero wind chill, the race was delayed and our hardy racers toughed out a long wait for their few seconds on the course. Skiing first for the boy's team was Senior Co-Captain Andrew Busk. Unfortunately, they failed to record his first time and he had to run the course again, finishing 16th out of a field of 84 racers, earning 29 points. Racing second for Cohasset was Sophomore Prescott Busk, earning 9 points. The great performance of Freshman Reed Dickerson added an additional point for Cohasset for a grand total of 39 points. Great runs were also had by Senior Ryan Oftshun , Sophomore Dan Sullivan and Senior Dan Roth. For the girls, Senior Co-captain Jessie Guild finished 29th out of a field of 79 racers, earning 16 points. Katherine Whorisky, one of the many strong Sophomore skiers earned 7 points. Other sophomores, Michelle Lamaire, Emille Shea and Marissa Evans skiied very well and should be earning team points in the next few races.

Monday , January 12th brought milder conditions to Blue Hills. Prescott Busk took the team by surprise, edging out his brother by a couple tenths of a second earning 9 points. Andrew Busk had a respectable run, garnering 6 points. The girls team brought its own surprise with Sophomore Katherine Whorisky beating Jessie Guild by a hundreth of a second. She earned two points to Jessie's one.

Next weeks race is a slalom format so there should be some more surprises in store for those results. Races are held on Monday nights at Blue Hills. Results can be found on line at http://www.zudnic.net/mbsle.

With these cold temperatures and the snow making at Blue Hill, this should be a great season for the team.

Girls youth basketball report

The Cohasset girls travel basketball teams for 5th, 6th, 7th, and 8th graders took on Norwell and Scituate in Old Colony League play this weekend.

The fifth grade team got off to a quick start in both games right from the opening tap with center Carly Haggerty controlling the tap to Lindsey Davis, who in turn passed to a streaking Emma Musto for a layup.

The Blue and White never looked back after that, quickly asserting control in both games. In the Norwell contest, Cohasset built a commanding lead in the first half chiefly behind a 10 point effort by Musto, her second straight double-figure scoring contest. Others who contributed to the Cohasset scoring column were Davis, Haggerty, Kate French, and Emma Quigley, with guard Rachel Fredey making a big contribution in the assist department.

The second half turned into a defensive struggle, with the Cohasset quintet of Carly Martin, Logan Pratt, Amy Costa, Jen Curley, and Olivia Murphy shutting down the opposition en route to the 20-10 final score.

In the Scituate game, the fifth graders bolted out quickly to a 6-0 lead and appeared to be primed for an easy triumph. However, the Scituate girls upped their defensive intensity to prevent a runaway. Although the shots were not falling for the Blue and White, their defense proved equally stingy, with front court players Haggerty, Musto, Davis, and Martin blocking many Scituate shots.

With the Cohasset offense ice-cold in the second half, Scituate battled back from an 8-3 halftime deficit to pull within 11-9 with 2:36 showing on the clock. However, the Cohasset girls refused to yield a good look at the basket to Scituate the rest of the way and held on for the win.

The seventh graders also ran their record to 3-0 on the season with a 28-16 triumph over Norwell and a 23-11 victory over Scituate. Tess Calorio with eight points and Gabriella Flibotte with six points led the way in the Norwell victory. In the win on Sunday over Scituate, Carly Salerno with eight points and Marissa Tangherlini with six points paced the Blue and White.

The eighth graders split their weekend contests. In an 18-9 win at Norwell, a balanced offensive attack paved the way to victory, with Sally Meehan, McKenna Teague, Meg Anderson, and Maura Barnes all scoring four points apiece. Sarah Brown turned in a strong rebounding effort. On Sunday the eighth graders suffered their first loss of the season by a close 19-16 margin to Scituate in a hard-fought contest.

Scores from the sixth grade team's games were not available at press time.

SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Scrum…hooker…loosehead prop…flyhalf – new terms from the latest Harry Potter novel? Hardly. In fact, this is centuries-old, common language among players of the venerable game of rugby. And some very eager Derby Academy students are learning its entire esoteric vocabulary.

Every Friday afternoon this fall, instead of going downtown to join their buddies for ice cream or pizza, 37 students hustled out onto Derby's Bleakie Field to block, kick and tackle. They sweated a lot and got pushed around by their classmates. Why did these students prefer this form of "recreation?" "Rugby is a one-of-a-kind sport," explained Abbot Cowen. "Plus you get beat up and that's fun." "I like it because you are part of a different team every week," said Alastair Butler. "Besides, it's the only full-contact sport offered in the fall."

Probably the most-cited reason that the students thronged to the rugby field, though, is the coach. Mr. Peter Condrick makes the sport just too exciting to miss out on. "Mr. Condrick is cool. He makes it lots of fun," James Llewellyn offered with a huge smile. A Derby alumnus and veteran rugby player, Mr. Condrick truly loves the game. As a matter of fact, he loves all things British, and rugby was created in England at a private school called the Rugby School. There, in 1823, a young man named William Webb Ellis developed the sport from "football", or soccer. Mr. Condrick became serious about rugby because in addition to the fun the game provides, rugby builds skills on the field that translate to the classroom and life itself.

"The value of teamwork, the ability to strategize, the need for self-discipline — all these qualities work together to build confidence and good judgment,' Mr. Condrick observes.

Because of rugby's reputation as a rough sport, some may be surprised to discover that seven of the Derby players are female …"the chick ruggers," as they call themselves. These young ladies are not intimidated at all by the aggressive aspects of the game. In fact, they love the challenges as much as the guys do. Mr. Condrick has established a very strict safety policy to minimize injuries. The fact that Derby plays exclusively intramural provides an added measure of control.

A common misconception exists that rugby is very similar to American football, but rugby and football players alike are insulted by the comparison. So, what are some of the differences? For one thing, rugby players do not wear hard padding or protective gear, except for a scum cap and mouth guard. Also, a player cannot pass the ball to a teammate between himself and the goal; in other words, it has to be passed to the side or behind. The rugby ball is larger than a football, a bit more rounded, and has no lacing. As Dan Teller observed, "It looks like a bloated football without the laces." We are in constant motion," say Mr. Condrick. "We're 15 vs. 15, with only subs if injury occurs. We don't politely give the ball back after 4 'downs'."

The Derby Blues Rugby Football Club, as the team is officially named, was recently admitted to the USA Rugby Association. The team is sponsored by Rugby Imports, and, of course, Derby Academy itself.

The glorious fall days that provided a wonderful backdrop to these Friday afternoon games are now at an end. The rugby season, regrettably, is over.

"It's sad," bemoans Rob West. "I wish we could play all year long." His teammates agree. Already they're looking forward to spring when the team will start up again.

Scituate fourth-grader's cancer is in remission

First child tested on PET-CAT Scan

By Matthew J. Gill
MGILL@CNC.COM

The good news arrived this week. As a fresh layer of snow covered the ground outside her Fairview Lane home Monday, Heather Ford, a fourth-grader at the Cushing Elementary School in Scituate, received word that the renal cell carcinoma she had been diagnosed with last spring, is in remission.

After being tested at The Dana Farber Cancer Institute last week, by a new machine called a PET-CAT Scan, the Ford family —9-year-old Heather, her parents Diane and Andy, younger brother A.J., and Andy's mother Susan — had been anxiously awaiting the test results, when a phone call from Dana Farber revealed Heather's test results had come back negative, bringing their collective anxieties to a joyous end.

After hearing the news, Heather and her brother enthusiastically ran around their house, taking time between sprints to discuss their favorite books, movies, and TV shows; happy kids who seemed just to be enjoying the evening but not necessarily aware of the magnitude of the news. But for their parents, the positive prognosis was starting to sink in.

Diane explained that a combination PET-CAT Scan helps doctors look for cancerous cells by employing radioactive sugar molecules, injected into a patient's bloodstream.

Based on the hypothesis that cancer cells consume sugar at a much faster rate than regular tissue, any cancerous cells would reveal themselves, and the test's outcome would determine if the cancerous cells which had previously shown up in Heather's last Cat Scan, had developed into a tumor.

Diane added that Heather was the first child to be tested in the expensive new machine, only the second of its kind in all of Boston.

Although Heather's trials are far from over, this week's news is a blessing for the family after an eight-month roller coaster ride began with Heather's diagnosis of the rare form of kidney cancer, which led to countless hospital trips to both Dana Farber and Boston Children's Hospital, two surgeries, a trip to Kansas City to try out an alternative medicine, and endless prayers and worry.

"When they first diagnosed her the oncologist cried," Diane said. "It's very rare, the doctor said, and hard to treat."

Leaving one particularly deflating meeting with Heather's oncology team in which their options for treatment looked grim, Diane and her husband clung to a glimmer of hope gleaned from the doctor's words which listed the possibility of "spontaneous regression of the disease."

"Nothing, and I mean nothing exists except right this minute. Yesterday is a memory and tomorrow has not happened yet," Diane recalls thinking with hope that day.

When Heather was first diagnosed, Diane was employed full time at Harvard Medical Associates, but stopped working there in order to spend more time at home with her daughter. Although she began to work at Scituate's Life Care Center on a per diem basis, and Andy is employed as an exercise physiologist, they are no longer covered under Harvard Medical, and their adopted COBRA insurance costs are "growing like mortgage payments."

Leaving no alternative unexplored, the Fords have tried out many different treatments including a faith healing in the home of a Hingham man who was "miraculously cured" of the same form of cancer after visiting Medjurgorje, Bosnia-Herzegovina, and in October the Fords headed out west.

After learning of a highly researched alternative medical therapy, the Fords traveled to Kansas last fall where Heather underwent a treatment which relies on a high dose of Vitamin C being injected intravenously.

"She reacted well to that," Diane said. " She tolerated the treatment well."

It is easier to face a troubling present and an uncertain future when you don't have to face it alone

This photograph of 4th-grader Heather Ford of Scituate was sent out as a thank you to all those who have contributed to the Hugs for Heather Fund.

The Fords, however, have not been fighting this alone.

After her first surgery last May, in which one of her kidneys which had grown cancerous was removed, Diane said members of the Cushing parent teacher organization immediately approached the family with an offer to conduct a fundraiser to benefit both Heather and her family.

"Accustomed to being on the other end of things," Diane says she initially balked at the offer, and declined. She and her husband didn't know what the road ahead would yield, as Heather's team of doctors told them chemotherapy and radiation treatments would not be effective in treating her rare form of cancer.

"At that time, we had no idea what we were in for," Diane recalls. "It [felt] weird because we're not paupers, but we don't live in a McMansion either."

But when Ellen McAllister, a neighbor and family friend advised The Fords to accept the generosity the community was offering, as an act of support for a neighbor in need, the Fords consented.

"This humbled us," said Diane, "and we remain humbled by a community whose heart shows no bounds."

Three neighbors and friends — Carolyn Malone Beatey, Elizabeth Bogusz, and McAllister — went to Scituate Federal Savings Bank and set up an account called Healing Hugs for Heather, into which community members could contribute financially to help defray some of the medical expenses the Fords would likely encounter.

To publicize the project, a trio wrote up a flyer which was sent home with students in November, and as of last week, donations had already brought in several thousand dollars.

"We're lucky," Diane added. "The people of this community in Scituate have been remarkably supportive."

To thank those who've contributed, during the holidays the Fords sent out a color photo of Heather to "everyone we could track down" who made a donation to the account, finding the return addresses from donated checks.

Below the photograph, which shows Heather in warm autumn reds, is a quote from Harold Kushna, the author of When Bad Things Happen to Good People.

The text has been a source of inspiration for the Ford family these last eight months, and reads: "It is easier to face a troubling present and an uncertain future when you don't have to face it alone."

For the Fords, Kushna's line has become a reality, as many have offered support for their family in a host of ways.

Everyone involved with the Cushing School has been "outstanding," said Diane who added that the school's principal Mary Ohrenberger "has gone all out" to help.

The Fords also expressed their gratitude to Richard Stower from the First Parish Universalist Unitarian Church, and members of Scituate Community Christmas, who arrived at the Ford's home in a fire truck loaded down with toys.

More toys came in courtesy of the First Trinitarian Congregational Church.

The Fords also expressed appreciation to all of Heather's physicians and care givers, and to the families of Charlotte Karol and Eric Donovan "who intentionally or unintentionally formed a circle of loving support, when we needed it most," and to their friends, neighbors, and the community of Scituate.

Already thinking of ways to give back, Diane says she would like to a host a Blood Donor Day this spring with the goal of raising awareness for the blood unit of Boston Children's Hospital.

According to Diane, the center, which provided Heather with a transfusion during her stay, depends on blood donors to come into the hospital's donor center to collect all blood donations, as the center itself lacks a mobile blood unit to conduct blood drives on location. According to Diane, the remainder of the center's blood stock is purchased from The American Red Cross at $100/pint.

"That's the one area of [Boston] Children's Hospital where they don't have enough money," said Diane, who originally planned to host the event last summer, but it was postponed when Heather underwent a second surgery.

Between the two surgeries, Heather has been healthy for the most part, and when she's not been testing or traveling, she's been attending school on a regular basis.

The piles of school books and paperwork on the family's kitchen table offer a hint at Heather's love for school and reading, and her ready smile and indomitable spirit, her love of life.

Barry has new plan for Abington transfer station

By Patrick J. Cronin
PCRONIN@CNC.COM

The battle over an 1,800 ton per-day transfer station on Route 18 in Abington may be over, but a new one over a 600 ton per-day site is just beginning.

Developer Paul Barry of Cohasset has filed a notice of change with the Massachusetts Environmental Policy Agency that would modify the site assignment to a 600 ton per-day transfer station for construction and demolition waste.

"I just filed with the state to start the process," said Barry. "The next step will to apply for a site assignment with the board of health. The main difference is that it's going to be less tonnage."

Barry is currently appealing a Superior Court's decision that upheld the Abington Board of the Health's decision to rescind a site assignment for an 1,800 ton per-day transfer station.

In 1999, the Abington board of health approved Barry's proposal for a 1,800 ton per-day transfer station for construction, demolition and municipal waste. After the decision to approve the transfer station was made, a group of citizens from Abington and Weymouth organized themselves to oppose the action. Calling itself REACT, the group pushed to recall all the members of the health board, alleging the members didn't keep the town properly informed about the proposal and site plan of the proposed transfer station.

Five Abington residents, with the backing of REACT, went against board of health members and were elected in the town's first-ever recall election.

The new board of health decided to reopen the transfer station hearings so the entire town could give its opinion on whether such a facility should be allowed to operate in Abington. The hearings began Aug. 23, 2000 and concluded April 15, 2001.

After 29 hearing sessions, 56 witnesses and 153 exhibits, the new board of health announced its decision to deny the proposal for the transfer station.

Barry appealed the decision because he believed his civil rights were violated by board of health members and noted at the time they didn't have sufficient evidence to revoke the permitting license for his proposed transfer station.

Last year, Suffolk Superior Court Judge Geraldine S. Hines dismissed Barry's claim the board of health violated his civil rights. Barry claimed those hearings were nothing more than a charade with a predetermined outcome.

After the dismissal of the civil rights claims, the case boiled down to whether the board of health had sufficient evidence to revoke the permit license for Barry's proposed transfer station.

A Superior Court judge ruled in July the health board did in fact have sufficient evidence to revoke the license of a proposed transfer station in Abington.

According to Justice of the Superior Court Janet L. Sanders' written decision, the board of health had every legal authority to rescind the site assignment and noted Barry received a fair hearing.

Barry's main argument was that the board of health had no legal authority to rescind the site assignment after it was already awarded and he stressed he received a unfair hearing because two members of the board of health were married to REACT members, a group comprised of citizens against the proposed transfer station.

Sanders also stated the board of health's decision was supported by substantial evidence.

Barry said his lawyer has already filed an appeal is awaiting the court's decision on the matter.

"We filed the appeal but the court system is brutal," said Barry.

Even though he has filed an appeal, Barry said he doesn't want to wait any longer and wants to get the project off the ground.

"I just want to get my site assignment," said Barry. "The court could take forever. If I'm fortunate for the court to rule in my favor and I was to win the case, I will have a 1,800 per-day transfer station instead of only a 600 per-day transfer station."

Barry said he probably won't get a fair hearing with the current board of health and expects to run into the same problems that caused the lawsuit.

"I anticipate problems," said Barry.

Abington board of health member William Creighton said the board received the notification from the state on Barry's intent at their Monday night meeting. Copies were also sent to the conservation commission, planning board and selectmen.

Barry is required by law to submit an application to the Massachusetts Environmental Policy Agency.

The Massachusetts Environmental Policy Act requires that state agencies study the environmental consequences of their actions, including permitting and financial assistance. It also requires them to take all feasible measures to avoid, minimize, and mitigate damages the environment.

MEPA requires public study, disclosure, and development of feasible mitigation for a proposed project. It does not pass judgement on whether a project is environmentally beneficial, or whether a project can or should receive a particular permit.

Creighton said anyone who wants to comment on the proposed transfer station in Abington can send a letter to the Massachusetts Environmental Policy Agency.

Barry's application is available to public review at the Abington Public Library, Town Hall and the Weymouth Public Library.

Four arrests last month

December was a quiet month for the Cohasset Police Department, besides the early winter storm in the beginning of the month. There were four arrests, two for assault and battery, one for operating under the influence, and one for protective custody, Police Chief Robert Jackson said.

During the month of December the police department investigated 11 motor vehicle accidents, two of which resulted in personal injury. There were 47 motor vehicle citations issued totaling $1,220. In fines. Additionally, there 30 parking tickets issued for $750. In fines, Jackson said.

Also in the month of December the Emergency Dispatch Center received a total of 973 calls for police services of the 153 were Emergency 9-1-1 calls. From Dec. 6-7, the Dispatch center received 81 calls for services due to the storm.

Also in the month of December there was one breaking & entering of a business. Additionally there was one Criminal Complaint issued for the month, Jackson said.

Lennon to attend FBI Academy

Chief Robert W. Jackson announced Detective Sergeant Gregory Lennon of the Cohasset Police Department has been accepted to attend the FBI National Academy at Quantico, Va. Lennon will be the first Cohasset police officer to attend this training.

National Academy classes are provided on a quarterly basis consisting of 11 weeks of training for upper- and mid-level law enforcement officers. The curriculum focuses on leadership and management training and consists of courses relating to leadership development, behavioral science, law, communication, forensic science and health/fitness.

Following graduation, each officer has the opportunity to join the FBI National Academy Associates, a dynamic organization of more than 15,000 law enforcement professionals who have played a significant role in developing a higher level of competency, cooperation, and integrity within the law enforcement community.

Det. Sgt. Lennon will be returning to the Cohasset Police Department following the training.

Chief Jackson said Lennon was one of seven selected out of 250 applicants.

'It's a great honor," Jackson said, adding apart from Lennon's salary, the cost to the town is minimal. The program provides lodging and meals.

"His training will certainly help the department," Jackson said. "In terms of networking, it is invaluable."

'Moonscape' transformed into luxury golf community

Black Rock is a Hingham first

By Jerry Elsden
CORRESPONDENT

When golf course developer George McGoldrick of Cohasset looked at the 380 acres off Ward Street five years ago it resembled a moonscape with wetlands. Rock and rubble covered the area, the remains of a 100-year-old quarry operation.

Today, Black Rock is Hingham's first golf and residential community, a multimillion dollar development with 138 proposed homes, a private 18-hole golf course, clubhouse and function facility, members' restaurant, recreation center, tennis courts, and outdoor Olympic-size pool.

McGoldrick envisioned an architectural style that would fit with the landscape and look timeless.

"I gave the architects (C.B.T of Boston) a photo of a private home in Weston that I admired and they designed the buildings from there," he explains.

The impressive 40,000 square foot clubhouse is designed in the Shingle style, recalling the period from 1890s through 1920s when private golf and yacht clubs were fashionable. Walls are clad in stained cedar shingles, windows, doors and columns are deep green, and native stone is used throughout as base pillars. An large glassed cupola tops the copper-edged roof.

The clubhouse is built in a grand style because "we wanted a simple big shape to give the quality of hovering and also give a sense of protection and shelter," says architect Richard Bertman of C.B.T. "The building is also a landmark that can be viewed from many areas of the course, so you know where you are."

The main function room seats 200 people, with room for 300 people standing. A 125-seat members' restaurant with full service bar and stone fireplace dominate the clubhouse's main area, and there are also rooms for small private functions, luncheons and meetings. Black Rock's administrative offices, spacious men's' and ladies' locker rooms, and the pro-shop are also located in the clubhouse.

The recreation center, designed by S.M.R.T of Portland, Maine, is built in the Shingle style, but its interior recalls an Adirondack theme. It houses a fitness center, a childcare center, and a porch overlooking the tennis courts. Outside is an Olympic swimming pool and snack bar, and a tented terrace overlooking the golf course.

A full golf membership at Black Rock costs an $25,000 initiation fee, with a $100,000 bond; a recreation membership with limited golf privileges costs $10,000 with a bond of $32,000 bond. The bonds are refundable.

Members are encouraged to sponsor their charity and business events in the clubhouse. Recently more than 300 people attended a South Shore Hospital breast cancer awareness center fund raiser, and a party for the late Boston Globe sports writer Will McDonough raised more than $300,000 for his favorite charities.

Land swap

Two years ago, McGoldrick and his partner, Jim Read, arranged a unique land swap agreement with the town. The swap, which received Town Meeting approval, involved exchanging 29 acres of inaccessible town-owned conservation land in the center of the proposed golf course for 26 acres along Main Street in South Hingham, formerly part of the old Pushcart Farm.

McGoldrick and Read negotiated with the Marchesiani family, the farm's owners, to purchase the parcel, which is contiguous with several hundred acres of conservation land and includes the McKenna Marsh and a section of Accord Brook. This land swap allowed McGoldrick to increase the number of homes from 118 to 138 and to relocate amenities closer to the clubhouse.

"The Main Street parcel is a very desirable piece of land" comments Kathy Reardon, who was Selectman during the land swap negotiations. "It's in the south end of town, connected to other open space, and it's visible from the road."

The residences cost between $750,000 and $1.5 million and depend on layout and location. Homes are selling at steady pace, and Phase I is sold out, according to McGoldrick.

"Half of the homes in Phase II are also sold, for a total of 33 homes sold," he says. The average sale price is just under $1 million. So far, 15 homes are occupied.

Buyers vary from empty nesters downsizing their homes, to single people, a few families, and seasonal "snowbirds." In a few instances, Black Rock members' parents are moving in to be closer to their children and grandchildren.

McGoldrick notes that many prospective buyers are from west and north of Boston because of Black Rock's proximity to Route 3 and Boston. In fact, the elegantly-decorated model home features a wall-sized map locating the golf community's distance to many points.

McGoldrick and the architects planned the four clusters of homes around the edges of the golf course and one in the center after The 18-hole links-type course was planned.

"Most golf communities are designed with the maximum amount of homes first, and the course second," he explains. "We gave the land to the golf course architect first and used the remaining land for the homes. In this way the homes do not dwarf the golf holes but blend nicely into the landscape."

Crushed rock

But before the course could be laid out four million tons of crushed rock were removed from the site. Read, a Hingham native and an inventor, created the Screen-All — a mammoth rock crushing and screening machine — which he successfully sold internationally for 20 years. When he sold his company, Read negotiated a favorable purchase agreement with the owners of the quarry that allowed him to clean up the site during the approval process. The crushed and screened rock was used to cover tunnel boxes in Boston's Big Dig.

Read's firm, JrRead Corporation, then managed the construction of the golf course. The golf course, with a slope rating of 138, includes many rock outcroppings, two large retention ponds, and stands of mature pine and oak trees. It was designed by Brian Silva of Cornish, Silva and Mungeam, of Uxbridge. Silva's other projects include Waverley Oaks in Plymouth, Cape Cod National and Shaker Hills, in Harvard. Ipswich County Club is the only other gated golf community in the greater Boston area. The Pinehills of Plymouth includes residences, but its course is public.

Like many golf courses, Black Rock draws water from four of its own non-potable wells to irrigate the greens and fairways. The two retention ponds help to recharge the wells because surface water drains in to them. In addition, the on-site waste water treatment plant, designed to handle 55,000 gallons per day at full build out, will also help replenish the wells. Water used for the clubhouse, recreation center and residences is supplied by Aquarian Water Company.

However, when McGoldrick was seeking to hook up Black Rock to Aquarian's system, the water company was under a consent order from the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) to locate and repair old leaky pipes that wasted large amounts of water. Under a water balance plan, developers are required to pay for engineering and repair costs that reclaim two gallons of water lost for every gallon needed in a project.

"He was among the very first developers to do this," says Aquarian Operations Manager Eileen Commane. "The leaks were located all over town."

McGoldrick is modestly proud of the awards Black Rock has won, including seven from The Builders Association's PRISM Awards for the Model Home, and the best logo award. He's also pleased with the caddy program and other jobs that bring in about 150 girls and boys from Hingham and surrounding towns during the summer. "It's good seasonal employment for them, they learn about the game, and they get to play golf, too," he adds.

Lately, Black Rock has been bustling with contractors, landscapers, golfers, residents, prospective residents, people attending functions, and employees. As McGoldrick surveys the busy scene, he notes that foundation plantings such as conifers and deciduous trees have softened the edges around the homes. McGoldrick chose Spillane Nursery, of Middleborough, to plant and maintain nursery stock for the entire project. Spillane confers with Black Rock golf course superintendent Chuck Welsh about trees and shrubs appropriate for the wide open windswept course. Plants were selected that deer don't consume. There's also a life-like coyote that stands guard on the course to keep away Canada geese. "They haven't been much of a problem, either," he says.

Where Black Rock got its name

Some of the rock extracted and crushed during Black Rock's construction was difficult to deal with and, in fact, helped with the naming of Black Rock.

Seams of Basalt rock ran throughout the granite. Basalt rock is heavier and denser than granite, but about 100 million years ago in the Triassic Period, probably during some volcanic activity, it "squirted up through the weaker layers of granite to the surface and froze," according to naturalist and former Hingham High School science teacher Phil Swanson.

The Basalt rock was hot and under pressure, because it was closer to the Earth's center, he explains.

In addition, Swanson was Chairman of the Conservation Commission in the 1960s when he looked at a large map indicating parcels of "owner-unknown" land, which included 29 land-locked acres off Old Ward Street.

"I thought that maybe someday that land may be of value," he explains. Swanson and fellow commissioner and attorney Stuart DeBard, who performed the legal work pro bono, arranged for the town to purchase the 29 acres for $1000. About 30 years later that land, in the center of the proposed Black Rock Golf Community, would be swapped for 25 acres of Main Street, South Hingham property, which in turn connects with hundreds of acres of conservation land.

Cuffs come off as police testimony starts

Officers' disciplinary hearings get underway

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

With Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris on the "witness stand" for nearly three hours yesterday morning — it became clear the disciplinary hearings for two Cohasset police officers could go on for weeks.

After more than 6-1/2 hours of testimony that included four witnesses, "Day One" of the prosecution's or town's case tried to explore whether proper police search procedures were employed during an arrest of three youths by accused officers Sgt. William Quigley and James McLean.

The hearing yesterday also began to tackle allegations of drinking on duty at the Scituate Rod & Gun Club following weapons training last May.

The disciplinary proceeding was scheduled to resume this morning (Thursday) at 9 a.m. in the Selectmen's Office.

The town has charged both Quigley and McLean with conduct unbecoming an officer for drinking on duty at the Rod & Gun Club. McLean also faces charges of inappropriate activity in one arrest and four arrests by Quigley are being questioned. The officers have been on paid administrative leave since Oct. 20 and did not learn what the charges were until two weeks ago.

Town Manager Mark Haddad, who is serving as the hearing officer and has the authority to hire and fire police officers, will make the final decision what punishment to mete out including possible ter-

A crowd of about 40 people, including reporters, concerned citizens, town officials and friends and family packed the Selectmen's office for Day One of the police hearings.

Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris, who testified for about three hours, adamantly defends the decision to hire a private investigator.

Poor drainage hounds field

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

If the age of Alumni Field at the middle-high school could be determined in "dog years" — it would be about 70 years of age.

But in actuality, the field is nearly 10 years old and is need of a major overhaul to the tune of nearly $100,000.

Town Manager Mark Haddad hopes the repairs can be paid for through the Community Preservation Fund and will make a presentation to the Community Preservation Committee Monday at Town Hall.

Haddad may also face some tough questions.

CPC member Margie Charles said she thinks someone should be held accountable for the field being in such terrible condition.

"I'm so upset about this having to be done," Charles said. "Has everything been pursued?"

Selectman Tom Callahan, who is the selectmen's liaison to the CPC, said there was little recourse because the repairs are being sought 10 years after the field was built.

That prompted Planning Board member Al Moore, who also sits on the CPC, to wonder

School board settles on final budget

Says override may be needed

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"People are very concerned we're cutting as much as we are. I think the override is without question where we need to go."
— Chartis Tebbetts, School Committee

Members of the School Committee will present a budget of $11,932,050 to the Advisory Committee and Board of Selectmen and hope it is a number the town will be able to work with.

School Committee Chairman Rick Flynn said the new budget figure represents an increase of roughly 6.4 percent, or $713,753. While that number is larger than the .68 percent the town or municipal side is raising its budget — it is a lower increase than has been approved in previous years for the schools. It is also the lowest figure the committee feels comfortable recommending without seriously damaging the educational program.

This year has been a tough one for the schools, as they are trying to make up $223,000 in utilities costs caused by a rise in the price of gas and oil. In addition, more utilities were used during the construction process than would be during a normal school year.

Couple that bill with the fact the schools are currently in the second year of a teachers' contract and the fiscal year 2005 budget reflects the third and final year of that agreement — there is nothing that can be done by way of salary negotiations to free up money in the budget, the School Committee said.

While the School Committee would like to avoid having to ask the town for a Prop. 2-1/2 override for the second year in a row, the committee hasn't ruled it out and said if it comes down to it, they will ask for $400,000. However, Town Manager Mark Haddad and members of the Board of Selectmen said they would only support a $223,000 override, which is just enough to cover the costs of utilities.

"People are very concerned we're cutting as much as we are. I think the override is without question where we need to go," said Vice Chairman Chartis Tebbetts. Current budget plans include cutting one teacher from Deer Hill and two from Osgood, which are all salaried at $42,167 a year.

However, the School Committee said because the schools are seeing a consistent increase in enrollment from year to year, cutting positions in the schools is going to keep deteriorating the education program Cohasset prides itself on.

"We're dismantling an excel-

High School students published in 'Teen Ink'

Cohasset High School English and Journalism teacher Christine Berman's students have once again been published in "Teen Ink," a print magazine written entirely by teens. Four students featured in the December issue of the magazine include Meghan Marr, Erik Belz, Shan Shan Nie, and Drew Musto.

Eastern Telephone gives schools check

It may be a small gain, but with the current fiscal situation the schools are in, every penny counts. In a letter from Eastern Telephone, Inc. to School Committee Chairman Rick Flynn, the company said it will be issuing $303.60 by March 1, 2004.

"Eastern Telephone provides a portion of every gross telephone bill...for every Cohasset customer signed up under our school program," the letter states. The company has determined that through Nov. 1, 2003, Cohasset residents have raised $2,128.60 since the initial rollout of the fundraising efforts. As of Dec. 22, 2003, Eastern Telephone had issued checks totaling $1,825 to the Cohasset School Committee.

METCO program rally

On Thursday, March 18 from 9 a.m.-4 p.m. at the Statehouse, there will be a rally in support of the Metropolitan Council for Educational Opportunity (METCO) program. School Committee Vice Chairman Chartis Tebbetts asks anyone who is concerned about the program's future, which is unknown due to budget cuts state-wide, to come show their support. In addition, Tebbetts asks that anyone who has been involved with the METCO program at any point in time please contact her, as she is trying to set up a database of those who have participated in the program over the years. The state does not have a database, and Tebbetts hopes to collect names back to the program's inception.

Superintendent screening committee is finalized

The search for a new superintendent to replace a retiring Edward Malvey at the end of this school year, is going according to schedule, and 13 members have been approved to take part in the screening committee.

School Committee representatives include Rick Shea and Pat Martin. Administrators include Middle-High School Principal Michael Jones, and Osgood Principal Janet Sheehan. Teacher representatives include Middle School Physical Education teacher Torin Sweeney, Deer Hill fifth grade teacher Kathy Jordan, and Osgood third grade teacher Beth Owens-Rigby. Parent representatives include Beth Gilman, Sarah Porter, and Lucia Flibotte. Wallace St. John will serve as the community representative. Christine Lovallo is the student representative and Adam Haracz will serve as her alternate.

School construction

Only punch-list items remain to be completed to call the construction phase at Deer Hill to a close, said Supt. Edward Malvey, and those items will be completed as soon as possible. At the Middle-High School, students began a new academic semester this week and part of that change included getting used to the newly completed classrooms. Now that furniture has been moved, from temporary quarters to a final destination, CMHS can operate as a true middle-high school, Malvey said.

Preserving historic records is vital

Town Clerk seeks $11K to save volumes

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Vital records stored at Town Hall dating back to the 1700s are in urgent need of restoration, according to Town Clerk Marion Douglas.

To that end, Douglas is asking the Community Preservation Committee for $11,000 to restore and preserve eight volumes of records that include births, deaths and marriages from 1732-1971 and three volumes that are indexes of these public records.

The Community Preservation Committee gave the proposal a warm reception Monday and voted unanimously to continue the approval process by hearing Douglas' presentation on the issue this coming Monday. The CPC meets at 7:30 p.m. at Town Hall.

"Some of the records are in pitiful shape."
— Town Clerk Marion Douglas

CPC Chairman Stuart Ivimey said he would ask Douglas to bring some of the records to the meeting.

"They are in some state of disrepair," he said. "And need some professional attention to preserve them."

Ivimey explained in Town Counsel's opinion, it is OK to spend CPC funds on this.

"The town of Nantucket did a similar thing," he said.

CPC member Debbie Cook gave the project high marks.

"What fits more in community preservation than the vital statistics of the town?" she asked.

Member Paula Morse, who is also co-president of the Cohasset Historical Society, noted that it is very difficult to get grants for this type of work.

In Douglas' application, she explained the first volume contains records copied from Hingham for the years 1731-1770, before Cohasset was incorporated.

"Because this volume is unreadable, we have to send customers to the Town of Hingham to access the statistics," she wrote. "The restoration and preservation of the documents includes the chemical treatment (deacidification) of the paper to neutralize destructive acids, repair tears and other damage to the paper and the protection of the text by rebinding."

The CPC makes recommendations to Town Meeting, where voters have the final say on whether to fund a particular project using money from the Community Preservation Fund.

In a telephone interview, Douglas said Vermont-based Brown's River Records Preservation, which provided the estimate, is positive that the books can be restored.

"It would really be nice if we could get it done," she said, about the restoration. "Some of the records are in pitiful shape." Douglas said the volumes are stored in a vault in her office.

Money from the Community Preservation Fund can be spent in three specific areas: open space, affordable housing, and historic preservation. Each year, the Community Preservation Committee must spend or bank 10 percent of its annual revenue on each of those areas. All CPF expenditures in Cohasset must be approved by a vote at Town Meeting.

Money for the fund comes from a 1.5 percent real estate tax surcharge and state matching funds. The town adopted the Community Preservation Act in 2001.

School board still only race

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The last day to take out papers is Thursday, Feb. 12 for the April 3 Town Election.

With open seats on the Board of Selectmen, School Committee, Planning Board, Water Commission, Recreation Commission and Housing Authority, the Town Election could have the makings of a real corker.

But despite all the open seats – meaning certain incumbents, who often have the advantage, aren't seeking reelection – the only race shaping up so far is for the School Committee.

However, it may still be early days. The last day to take out papers is Thursday, Feb. 12 for the April 3 Town Election.

So far there is the potential for a four-way race for two seats on the School Committee. Incumbent School Committee member Pat Martin of Linden Drive plans to seek a third term while Adrienne MacCarthy of Doane Street, Jamie Williams of Surry Drive and Scott O'Grady of Sohier Street are hoping for their first. Incumbent Mark DeGiacomo is not seeking a third term.

School Committee member Rick Shea Margin Street, who was appointed to fill Jane Pescatore's seat in September, pulled papers for the one-year remaining of Pescatore's unexpired term. Pescatore resigned from the School Committee to accept employment with the school department.

So far incumbent Selectman Merle Brown of Beechwood Street, who is seeking a fourth term, and Rob Spofford of Heather Drive are running for two seats on the Board of Selectmen. Incumbent Selectman Tom Callahan is not seeking reelection.

Nathaniel Palmer of Little Harbor Road plans to run for the seat being vacated by Rob Kasameyer on the Water Commission and Elsa Miller of Reservoir Road is seeking reelection to the Board of Assessors. Steve Bobo of Jerusalem Road, chairman of the Board of Health, has taken out papers for a third term.

There are three seats up for grabs on the Library Trustees and so far there are three candidates: incumbent Sarah Pease of Sankey Road and Stacey Weaver, 44 Nichols Road and incumbent Barbara Power. Trustee June Hubbard is not seeking reelection.

Rick Grassie recently resigned from the Recreation Commission leaving a two-year unexpired term and Joanne Young moved away leaving a one-year unexpired term on the Cohasset Housing Authority. Janice Rosano, 60 Elm St., took out papers this week for the housing authority seat.

Incumbents — Recreation Commissioner Anthony Carbone who took out papers Wednesday seeking reelection.; Ann Barrett, Cohasset Housing Authority; Sewer Commissioner Sean Cunning.

Poor drainage hounds Alumni Field, Haddad says

out loud if the field "suddenly became bad this year or has it been bad all along?"

According to Haddad's application to the CPC, the original field was constructed on clay and has poor drainage.

"Based on this, most of the field is washing away," he wrote. "Since the field is used for several sports, including field hockey, soccer and football, it is in need of major repair."

He said work would need to begin immediately so the field would be ready for the fall 2004 sports schedule.

According to Quincy-based Foy & Letendre Landscaping, Inc., which provided the estimate, the turf — about 56,000 square feet — would need to be stripped off the field. Slit trenches and related materials would have to be installed for drainage. Work would also include repairing the existing irrigation system.

At a special election in May 1994, voters approved a $750,000 debt exclusion to pay for designing and constructing the new field. The money also included repairs to the adjacent Milliken Field. Earlier that March, Town Meeting overwhelmingly voted (326-5) to go ahead with the project.

Part of the argument for the new field was Cohasset track teams could not host home meets because of the condition of the high school track that was built in 1938. Selectmen, the Advisory Committee and the School Committee wholeheartedly supported the project.

In a telephone interview, Haddad said due to the clay base, when it rains the water has no place to go and the field turns into mud. The situation was exacerbated by last year's wet spring and summer. He said the town is seeking all the money from the Community Preservation Fund.

"I hope the Community Preservation Committee will support this project," he said.

That could create a wrinkle for the CPC that likes to share in its participation, noted member Jeff Waal.

"Our principle is to partner in regards to funding this with whoever else is involved," he said.

Waal suggested seeking some of the money from the School Committee, an idea that was immediately shot down by Callahan, who noted the schools do not have any extra money.

"And don't look to the town government," Callahan said. "There's no money in town government for this."

Member Debbie Cook suggested the PSO might be able to pitch in. And Waal thought boosters clubs might get involved.

Haddad said the ideal solution for Alumni Field would be to install the state-of-the-art artificial surface that is being used in some professional football stadiums. But the $600,000 price tag is too much, he said.

The CPC voted to take the project to the next step which is to hear a full presentation from the proponents Monday at Town Hall. The CPC, which will make a recommendation to Town Meeting, did not vote on the merits of the project.

Under the Community Preservation Act, which the town adopted in 2001, 10 percent of the monies accumulated in a town's Community Preservation Fund must go toward preserving open space, another 10 percent toward historic preservation, and 10 percent toward community housing. The remaining 70 percent can be spent for any of the above and recreation. Any money in the fund that is not appropriated can be banked for future years. Borrowing is also allowed with payments for interest and principal coming out of the fund, as could be the case with Alumni Field.

School instructional aides are doing more and more

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

When positions are cut, someone else needs to pick up the slack, says Mary Staunton, an instructional aide at Deer Hill, and if the current budget picture remains bleak, upwards of three teaching positions could be cut next year.

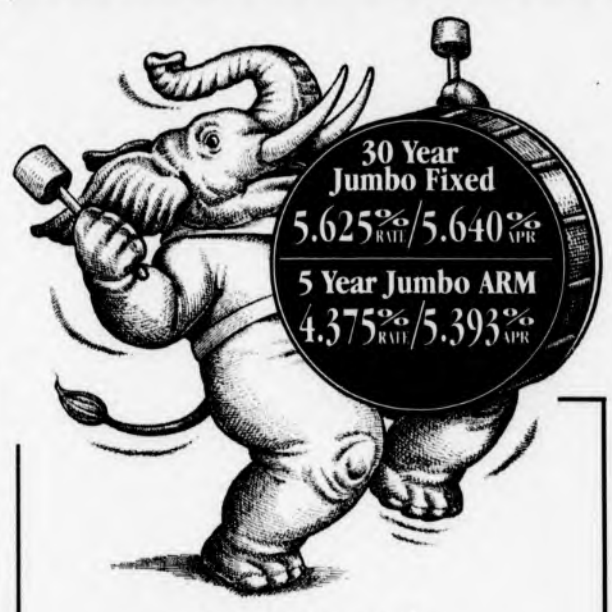
Reading a prepared statement, Staunton came before the School Committee asking for their consideration when making budget decisions. She and others in her position have been required to cover more than their share of duties in the schools, when other positions, namely activity aides, have been cut, she said.

Staunton said she has been a resident of the town for 37 years and as an instructional aide, has been a non-union employee of the schools for the last 19 years. Currently she is working at Deer Hill, but at one point was the only aide for grades seven through 12 at the middle-high school. However, even as the only aide, she said "There was great satisfaction in that I grew to know most of the students in the town, and assisted many of them toward academic success."

Staunton said her job has always been "a fluid position that required individual and small group teaching, curriculum support, remediation, and organizational assistance to students, as well as back-up help to teachers." However, since the elimination of the activity aides, she said her job description has drastically changed.

"Our responsibilities now have expanded to include the duties of the activity aides, which require before school supervision of students, lunchroom duty, and recess supervision. These additional duties detract from our time available to focus on the support services to the special needs students," she said. With the additional responsibilities, the day of all the instructional aides has been lengthened and there has been no additional compensation given.

"We are given the jobs that others refuse to do," she said.



Staunton added the current salary for instructional aides are below a living wage, and even at the highest step, she is making less than $18,000 a year.

"I wonder whether we couldn't find the money someplace," to hire some extra support staff, she said. While she acknowledges instructional aides do have a very fluid position, with seven activity aides gone, it is putting a real strain on all the instructional aides. "The educational structure is so interconnected that by eliminating one section of staff, the entire system is affected," she said.

Staunton asked School Committee members to carefully consider reinstating the activity aides, for the children's sake, and added she hadn't spoken with any of her colleagues before coming to the meeting.

Member Mark DeGiacomo said any issues with salaries cannot be addressed at a School Committee meeting, and will have to be taken up elsewhere. In terms of adding to the staff, that is a request that will most likely have to wait. School Committee Chairman Rick Flynn agreed and said "I don't think anyone anticipated we'd have two years like we've had." Flynn added while he hopes the schools will be in a position to add staff in the near future, at this point, the School Committee just wants to keep as many teachers employed as it can.

Article placement could be by lottery

Town meeting warrant includes 27 items

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The town is contemplating a lottery system for placing articles o n the Town Meeting warrant to address some concerns about making sure each item gets the attention it deserves.

The warrant for the Annual Town Meeting has been drafted and as of right now, there are a total of 27 articles to be taken up on March 27. However, being near the front of the warrant has become an issue of major importance in town, as some articles at the special Fall Town Meeting did not get the attention they deserve because of their placement.

That is what led selectmen this week to consider a possible lottery option for the future.

"The water commission is not happy with me right now," said Town Manager Mark Haddad, as it has been given the last six slots for its articles on the warrant.

But Selectman Merle Brown said someone always has to be last, and it seems fair to him to have a lottery so that decision is left up to luck. However, because some articles need to be grouped together, the specifics of how to proceed with a lottery would need to be defined. The Selectmen will continue to discuss the matter, and may decide to include it as another article on the Warrant.

In addition, Brown said he doesn't want to see any more revisions made to articles on the floor of town meeting. "Every board should know what's coming," he said, adding even the slightest changes of a word or two should be unnecessary by the time the article makes it to Town Meeting. He suggested having someone be in charge of looking over each and every word for every article, to make sure everything that needs to be included is, and nothing that needs to be cut is left in.

As the warrant currently stands, the first three articles deal with balancing the budget. Article four deals with projects brought before the Community Preservation Committee. Article five requests funds to pay unpaid bills from the previous year, and at this point, Haddad said there are none. Article six deals with additional departmental budget appropriations, for which Haddad said there will be four major expenses — fire department overtime; police department overtime; the legal budget; and the school budget.

"The water commission is not happy with me right now."
— Mark Haddad, Town Manager

Several citizen petitions are also included o n the warrant. One asks the town for $10,000 to hire an independent counsel for the purpose of investigating the alleged misconduct of members of the Police Department, the actions taken to remedy the misconduct, and identify any potential abuse of power, fraud, or deceit that may have taken place.

Another article asks the town to vote to amend the article regarding the purchase of the Cook Estate property, which was voted on at the special Fall Town Meeting last November. The amended article would allow the town to purchase the property and sell it for the purchase price plus other costs incurred, to the Cohasset Land Foundation, for the purpose of constructing 48-60 affordable senior housing units, while preserving the house and majority of land as open public space.

There are also a number of zoning articles on the warrant as well as an article dealing with political signs in town, and one relating to sewer issues. Selectman said it will be setting up appointments to have meet with the sponsors of the articles in the coming weeks, and will ask Town Counsel to sit in on the meetings.

A closer look at the articles

• Articles nine, 10, and 11 are all zoning articles sponsored by the Growth and Development Committee. Article nine deals with the large house site plan review, which had been slated to come before voters at the special Fall Town Meeting, but never made it to the floor because of the way it was written. While the article had been approved unanimously by the Planning Board and 6-1 by the Advisory Committee, the Board of Selectmen never voted on a recommendation.

During discussions, selectmen said they did not like the wording of the article, which made reference to a development rather than a home, for which the article was meant. The article did not seem to deal with the problems a home would have and needed more review. The article has therefore been re-written.

• Article 10 deals with earth removal, land clearing, and land alteration. It was written to give builders a set of rules to follow when developing, to ensure Cohasset's valuable natural resources are not damaged. It regulates clearing, grading, and earth removal to help prevent erosion, control stormwater runoff, and regulate the alteration of the natural topography.

• Article 11 deals with nonconforming buildings and their uses, and sets up guidelines to avoid future controversy over interpretations.

• Article 12 is sponsored by the Historical Commission and deals with the demolition of historically significant buildings. It would empower the commission to advise the building inspector, with respect to the issuance of permits for demolition.

• Article 13 deals with political signs, which almost made it to the special Fall Town Meeting. It would set up the rules and regulations for residents to follow when placing signs on their property.

• Article 14 asks for $25,000 to pay for the town's share in the engineering costs associated with the repairing and/or replacing the West Corner Culvert located at the Hingham, Cohasset, Hull town line. The expense will be shared equally with Hingham and Hull. It is anticipated the state will provide funding for the actual construction costs.

• Article 15 would authorize funding for improvements, including drainage, to the private way off Atlantic Avenue that services several homes commonly known as "Newtonville." Borrowing is to be repaid by betterments assessed upon the properties benefited.

• Article 16 would allow the Board of Selectmen to acquire an additional easement to James Lane, which would comprise roughly 1,310 square feet.

• Article 17 appropriates $25,000 for the town's 50 percent share of the cost for the engineering design and development of bid specifications for improvements to the sea wall between the Mill River Marina and Atlantica Restaurant on Border Street.

• Article 18 would allow the town to purchase parcels of land in order to protect the town's water supply and preserve open space. Because this is an issue addressed in the Water Department's articles later in the Warrant, it is not clear whether this article will remain.

• Article 19 would allow the Board of Assessors to increase the asset and income requirements for the Elderly Tax Exemption, thus allowing more residents over the age of 70, who are on fixed incomes, to qualify. It would increase the gross receipts limit to $18,000 for a single person and $23,000 for a married couple, and increase the whole estate limit to $33,000 for a single person and $35,000 for a married couple.

• Article 20 would give the Board of Selectmen the authority to petition the courts to enact a special act which would authorize the town to issue the bonds in the amount of $42,190,000, which were approved by voters to cover school construction costs.

• Article 21 would appropriate $100,000 to keep the Little Harbor sewer project moving forward. Various town boards have been working together for the past two years to continue the preliminary design of a sewer expansion effort for that area, and the funding would help continue that.

• Articles 22 through 27 are all water department articles. Article 22 would allocate $2.5 million to complete ongoing capital projects by the department, as well as current high priority projects. Article 23 would allocate funds for construction improvements to the water distribution system, wellfields, and to the Lily Pond Water Treatment Plant, as well as construction of stormwater best management practices in the watershed of the public drinking water supply.

• Article 24 would allow the town to acquire land in the watershed of Lily Pond and the Aaron River Reservoir, to help protect the town's drinking water supply.

• Article 25 would allow the town to accept a donation of four acres of land by the Dustin Wheelwright family, for the purpose of protecting the Lily Pond Watershed, for a parcel of land near the Aaron River.

• Article 26 would discontinue the public way known as "Old Road," in order to help prevent development in a large area of land in the Lily Pond watershed.

• Article 27 would authorize the water commission to contract for the sale of water for forty years, with the Linden Ponds development in Hingham.

CHS JAZZ ENSEMBLE

Hingham Symphony will host its annual Discovery Series Concert this weekend, and this year Cohasset High School's own jazz ensemble will be performing!

If you haven't had the pleasure of hearing the Symphony, this is a great way to begin and a terrific opportunity to introduce the kids to professional musicians. As well as hearing Cohasset's own, members of both the Hingham and Marshfield High Schools will also be playing alongside the Hingham Symphony. After the Concert, you can explore the instruments up close and meet the musicians. The Concert will be held Saturday, Jan. 31 at 3 p.m. at Weymouth High School, Commercial Street; and Sunday, Feb. 1 at 3 p.m. at the North River Community Church, Rte. 139 in Pembroke. Tickets are available at Buttonwood Books, the Hingham Public Library, Nobles in Hingham, or by calling 781-740-5694.

That is all for the week. Please let me have all of your news, event information and stories no later than Mondays at noon. If you have a photo that you would like to have appear with your information, please email the photo separately to Mary Ford at, mford@cnc.com or drop it off at Cohasset News on Brook Street in Cohasset Village.

PURE GOLD

On new Year's Day 2004, Sunrise Assisted Living was honored to celebrate the Jan. 2, 50th wedding anniversary of residents Mathew and Virginia Babij. Their family joined the Babijs for a special dinner prepared by Dining Service Manager Mike Anderson, which included shrimp cocktail and crab-stuffed scallops. A beautiful cake by Pastry Chef Ellen Anderson was decorated with purple roses. The Babijs recently moved from Warwick, R.I., to be nearer to family, Jerilyn and Lloyd Huskins and Mrs. Helen Huskins of Cohasset, and granddaughter Larissa Huskins of Brookline. Daughter, Sandy, and Steve Batchelor of Pembroke Pines, Fla. were also on hand for the happy occasion.

Deer Hill teacher spreads her love of literature to students

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

There is no shortage of reading material in Deer Hill fourth grade teacher Lauren Paquin's classroom and she wouldn't have it any other way. While she says she is not much of a "theme" teacher, it is clear to see from the multi-colored crates overflowing with books, that literary works are an important part of her everyday curriculum.

— TEACHERS WITH CLASS —

Paquin has a bachelor's degree in English from Hobart and William Smith Colleges in Geneva, N.Y., and has always had a fascination with the written word. In fact, she said in the second grade she wrote a book called "All About Me," in which she said she wanted to be a teacher. It's only fitting then, that she went on to receive her master's degree in education, and now combines the two passions on a daily basis.

"I like to read. I like to read a lot," she said, adding she tries to keep the students up to date on what she's reading at home. She said she usually has more than one book in progress at a time, and can be reading anything from a book on teaching to fiction, on any given night.

"I want to be an example to them as a reader," she said, and hopes to her influence will be one that extends far beyond the walls of the classroom, so when the day is done and the children go home, maybe they too will pick up a book just for fun.

Students in Paquin's class are almost always allowed to choose their own reading material, and she said there are certain books that become popular in class very quickly. Bruce Hale's "Chet Gecko, Private Eye" series is a big hit, and Paquin said the students love the "crazy similes he uses, like saying the students dripped into the classroom like a runny nose." Other classroom favorites include Andrew Clements' "Frindel," which she says her students can easily relate to because it is realistic fiction. "Poppy" by Avi, is a book which Paquin said she and her students enjoy discussing in class. It is a fantasy which provides the opportunity for a conversation because of the way the author develops his characters and his wonderful use of language, "to make us interested."

Teacher Lauren Paquin has plenty of books to offer her fourth-graders at Deer Hill.

"He's great with character development and his words create a picture in your mind," which she tells students is why it makes it such a good book to read. Paquin said at all levels you can talk about the same aspects of literature, and the conversation will become more in depth as a student progresses in his or her learning. Just because a student is in the fourth grade doesn't mean they can't learn the basics of studying literature, she said.

"I want to be an example to them as a reader."
— Lauren Paquin, fourth-grade teacher

While Paquin said she has usually read everything her students are reading, and enjoys sharing the stories with them, there is one series she is not extremely fond of which has become popular in class.

"It's called 'The Series of Unfortunate Events,' and I say it's an awful series because it never has a happy ending! I always ask them why they like it, but I couldn't tell you. It must be a kid thing," she said.

But in addition to the latest pieces of children's literature, Paquin also makes sure her students are familiar with the classics, like "Charlotte's Web." While some students have read the story before, Paquin tells them "E.B. White is always worth another read," because the language and images are so strong. Paquin said it's important for students to realize that books can be read more than once and can be equally enjoyable the second or third time around.

Books like "Charlotte's Web" could be what sparked Paquin's interest in reading in the first place. While she says she was a "pretty good student," growing up, and always wanted to do well, she was much more interested in reading than doing math or science.

"I learned to like math at Leslie [College]," she said, which is where she earned her master's degree. Because she was learning to teach math, she began looking at it more in terms of solving puzzles. "When I was in school I just found it daunting," she said.

But realizing that students are going to have different interests and strengths, just as she did, is something Paquin takes into account when planning her daily lessons. She said she tries to get to know each of her students well enough to know how best to meet their needs, and give challenges to kids who need to be challenged and support to those who need some extra help. "There are emotional and social considerations. You need to see the whole child and take it into consideration as best you can," she said.

Paquin said she tries to provide an environment that is conducive to learning by providing an underlying sense that everyone belongs, and while there may be ups and downs, they always know they are in a safe place to learn and be themselves.

"They have a lot of learning to do in the fourth grade and it's not all academic," she said.

Paquin is perhaps able to provide such a nurturing environment in the classroom, because she is a new mother. She and her husband, Dan have a 2-year-old daughter Aidan. "The kids were very excited," she said of the students she had in class during her pregnancy. Some even brought presents for the new baby, which not surprisingly included many books.

When Paquin isn't teaching or reading, she said she has started scrapbooking. Since Aidan was born, Paquin has been putting together pictures and memories for her to have when she's older. But just spending time with her family is what makes her happiest.

"I love to spend time with my family," she said, adding when she comes through the door at the end of the day, Dan and Aidan are there to greet her, and Aidan runs toward her yelling, "Mommy!"

"It's the best part of my day."

If you know a teacher that should be featured in Teachers with Class, please contact Samantha Brown at 781-741-2935 or sambrown@cnc.com.

Eight rules for Super Sunday

Super Bowl Sunday is a great day, regardless of which two teams are playing. It's like Christmas, except you can do all your shopping at any package store that has a deli.

When the Patriots are playing in the contest, it can be one of the most memorable days in a New England sports fan's life. I'm not saying it ranks next to your wedding day because I don't want to sleep in the garage. The day can be just as memorable as your bachelor party.

Nearly everybody watches the Super Bowl. People who don't know whether a football is stuffed or puffed tune in and the TV ratings for the game are huge. The game itself is no mere football contest. It's become a day-long, shameless, excessive, gaudy spectacle to which everyone's invited. Diehard fans and non-fans alike will be gathering at house parties all across America on Sunday to watch the game.

To maximize your enjoyment of the event, I offer these eight simple rules for enjoying the big game.

1) Have the right refreshments. Remember, Super Sunday is a holiday, which means you should feel free to overindulge. You'll need beer, but some soda is OK. The only food you should have are sandwiches, pizza, nachos, chili and wings of any animal prepared any style. And if I hear anyone mention "Atkins" or "low carb" in any context, I promise I'm going to go Howard Dean-on-Caucus-Night-Crazy. Americans tamed the wilderness, built a nation, defeated tyrants and went to the moon. Now we're terrified of bread? Not on this day, mister. Grab a roll and let's watch the game.

2) Be familiar with the TV announcers so you can mock them. Greg Gumbel and Phil Simms will be doing the play-by-play this year. They are probably the best team in the business, but I want you to notice something so I won't be the only one annoyed by this. Listen to how often Simms says the word "football" It's never the "ball," it's the "football." There are "football players" on both "football teams" playing "good football" out on the "football field." And of course, this is the "National Football League." Now you, like me, won't be able to stop thinking about this, like when you hear a song by "The Wiggles" and just can't get it out of your head.

3) Be ready for the onslaught of commercials: Believe it or not, the commercials are what most people will talk about after the game. Every year it's the same avalanche of ads: There will be beautiful women selling beer to doofuses, precocious kids selling colas, and dozens of ads for movies. Disney usually previews their new movies based on its theme park attractions. Last year it was "Country Bears", "Pirates of the Caribbean" and "Haunted Mansion." This year, look for "90 Minute Wait for Splash Mountain" and "$8 Chicken Sandwich." You'll see one beer ad featuring a rapper who screams "You gotta feel this", but trust me, you've gotta do no such thing. Also, there'll be a lot of ads for some "men's health" medicine that show a guy throwing a football through a tire swing, though I think that's just supposed to be symbolic.

4) Skip the pre-game show. Every year this show gets longer. Now, by the time kickoff rolls around they've interviewed everyone from the coaches to the guy who counts the cups at the concession booths. Less analysis went into he Allied invasion of Normandy.

5) Do watch the halftime show. The halftime show has grown from marching bands to hideous Vegas-style "extravaganzas" to actually a pretty entertaining event. I can't believe that the same NFL that gave us the band U2 in 2002 once featured Up With People and Michael Jackson singing with a chorus of children.

6) Go easy on the silly bets. An office pool is one thing. But the Vegas odds makers offer wagers on everything from who will win to who will score first to who will win the coin flip. Plenty of guys will place bets on this stuff so they have something to root for. Face facts: they didn't build the 10 biggest hotels on Earth by losing money to the likes of you.

7) Unplug the phone. As I said, almost everyone watches the game. The only people who don't watch are women who are related to me. Every year at least one of them who isn't watching will call my house to chat, usually during the best part of the game. That's one bet Vegas won't give me odds on.

8) Don't forget to enjoy all this. Remember that some teams never make it to the Super Bowl. Others win and never make it back. The Pats are two years removed from a championship and are back already. They've already won one and now are looking for more. In gambling, this is known as "playing with the house's money", a no-lose proposition. Enjoy this moment while it lasts, because this is a heck of a team. I mean, a heck of a football team. Have fun, be safe, and especially, Go Pats.

Tree pickup project volunteers thanked

TO THE EDITOR:

We would like to thank the 100-plus people in town who signed up to have their Christmas trees picked up by Project Safeguard volunteers the first two weekends in January. Proceeds from this fundraiser will go towards a new Parenting Education seminar for parents of teenagers; a theatre presentation on bullying for the sixth-grade class this spring; and speakers for the annual "Campus on the Common" program for seventh-graders and their parents to be held next fall.

This fundraiser would not have been possible without the following people, who hauled the trees and made countless trips to the dump in freezing cold weather: Bill Chisolm (thanks for answering our plea for help in the Mariner, Bill!); Jim and Andrew Graham; Fred, Tyler & Justin Wood; Stephen, John & Emerson Oronte; and David Game. Special thanks also to Dr. Mike Gill, Middle School administrator and health education coordinator of the Cohasset Public Schools, who spent his Sunday driving the school truck and hauling trees; to Karen Oronte for help with administration; to Sam Game for help with bookkeeping; and to Rev. Cliff Cutler for his continued support of this program.

Project SAFEGUARD is a community initiative to support youth and parents with child and adolescent health-related issues—including bullying, social & academic stress, body image & eating disorders, and substance abuse prevention. The consortium includes parents, clergy, and representatives from the PSO, Cohasset Public Schools, and the Social Service League. Your support is greatly appreciated.

Group's intervention on police matter criticized

TO THE EDITOR:

Not many years ago, Boston Magazine published a critical article about alleged (and perhaps overstated) deficiencies of the Cohasset police department, and featured a clown in police uniform on the cover. Since then, a fine institutional culture has developed, so that today our force is well trained and professional in its behavior. We can be thankful, and we should applaud action by the authorities to keep it that way, and to deal forcefully with any possibility that officers who aren't meeting today's standards.

Of course, police often are accused falsely of being too aggressive, or unfair; it's one of the disappointments of the job. But the public is ill served if accusations are not investigated carefully by the relevant authority. Investigation is not made easy by the tendency of accusers to clam up when facing an official instead of a neighbor or the guy on the next bar stool. But an accumulation of accusations, even if proof is not forthcoming, surely is reason for the relevant authority to serve the public interest by taking some action to ensure there are no true grounds for accusations in the future. The action may seem unfair to the officer, but his or her interest is subordinate to the public interest.

There is a well-defined appeals process available to an officer who has been disciplined, a process that strikes a balance between the rights of the officer and the rights of the public to be protected properly. Any relevant fact is sure to be brought to light by counsel for one side or the other.

Surely we don't need the intervention of a citizens' group who would have the taxpayers fund an independent investigation to examine the process and the behavior of the players. The court's disposition of the threatened lawsuit against the town isn't going to be influenced by the independent investigator's rehash. The threatened lawsuit by an officer may or may not have merit in law or in tactics, but a proposed citizen-funded investigation is as likely to encourage it, as to discourage it. The intervention is well-intentioned, but may be counter-productive by complicating the existing process with the dubious results of an "independent investigation" focused on the behavior of the judges rather than of the officers.

Holiday Food Drive help is appreciated

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the citizens of Norfolk County and the employees and users of the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds for their participation and generosity in our second annual Norfolk County Registry of Deeds Holiday Food Drive. Through the generous donation of nonperishable food items, we were able to distribute food to those individuals facing hardships around Norfolk County.

Unfortunately, the problems of hunger and families in crisis do not diminish after the holidays. Many families continue to be faced with choosing between mortgage and rent payments, heating costs, and food. With this in mind, I urge all citizens of Norfolk County to remember their less fortunate neighbors during the 2004 calendar year. Food pantries in our communities throughout Norfolk County are always in need of nonperishable food items.

Thanks again to all who participated in the Holiday Food Drive. I wish all the citizens of Norfolk County a safe and healthy 2004.

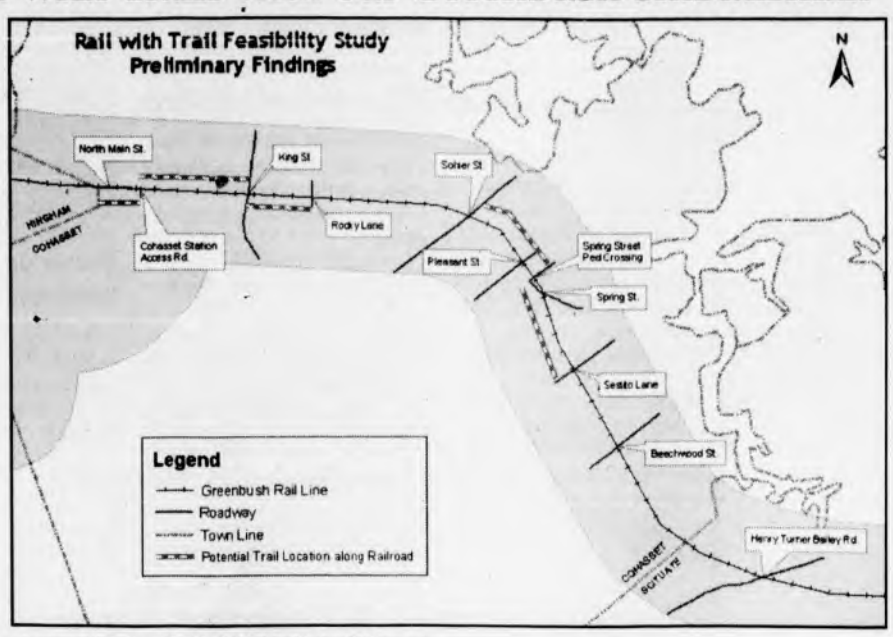
HEALTH NOTES

Share thoughts on Rails with Trails with our Greenbush ombudsman

In December, Lisa Bailey, Waterfield Design Group; Paul Smith, of Alta Planning, the contractor for the Board's Community Preservation funded Rail with Trail feasibility study; and I conducted a site walk of the potential corridor for pedestrian access to the MBTA right of way. The entire corridor is from North Main Street in Cohasset to Henry Turner Bailey Road in Scituate, a distance of 3.7 miles. There was limited snow cover but most corridor features were visible.

At this time, the MBTA is planning pedestrian and bicycle access from the Cohasset MBTA station to Hingham, but no pedestrian access to Cohasset.

Following the site walk Waterfield Design Group was requested to calculate potential wetland impacts based on trail development at specific locations. Based on potential wetland impacts, Paul Smith of Alta recommended elimination of three of 11 potential trail segments from consideration for trails.



This leaves two potential trails, each about one mile long:

- Segments 1 – 4 inclusive [5,090 feet] which provides access to Cohasset Station from Cohasset
- Segments 6 – 9 inclusive [5,000 feet] which provides access to the town center from the north (Sohier Street) and the south (Spring Street)

Waterfield Design Group will further be evaluating design issues for two areas:

- a short section of trail along Sanctuary Pond in Segment 4 and
- an area south of the town center with a steep slope on the east side of the railroad in Segment 7

Upon learning of the MBTA plans at a meeting in November, Joe Godzik and I questioned the wisdom of providing pedestrian access to Hingham, but not Cohasset. We indicated to MBTA officials that this decision was not consistent with our plans to make the town more pedestrian accessible. My impression at the meeting was that the MBTA might be responsive to any measures which could implement better pedestrian access providing that operational safety and liability regulations were obeyed. Accordingly, we at the Board of Health are requesting people in town to become involved in this issue.

Greebush advocate

Residents with complaints or questions about the Greenbush Commuter Rail project now have someone to turn to. Kristina Patterson has been named Cohasset-Greenbush ombudsman, responsible for investigating and addressing the impact of the commuter rail project on Cohasset residents and businesses. Patterson will hold office hours at Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave., on Tuesdays from 8:30 am. to 12:30 p.m. and Thursdays 1 to 5 p.m. She can be reached at 781-383-4129 or by e-mail at kpatterson@cohasset-greenbush.com.

Khristina is an intelligent, considerate and dedicated ombudsman provided to us as a part of the agreement between the town and the T. My request is that you make your thoughts on pedestrian access to the future T station in Cohasset to her.

Greenbush battles still loom

JOHN A. BEWICK & KATHY DONAHUE

At the beginning of 2004, Advocates for Transportation Alternatives (AfTA) and the Coastal Coalition joined forces to continue to press the public case against Greenbush, and to challenge any hastily-issued state or federal permits. The incomplete design/build Greenbush project is too expensive, it is too damaging to the five communities through which it will pass, it threatens safety at the 25 grade crossings, and it competes with all other modes of transit, particularly the commuter boat services and private bus services that are less expensive, less environmentally damaging and safer. We know this because it has all been outlined in the MBTA's own documents.

The half billion dollars in state funds is needed instead for urgent transportation upgrades and expansion in the urban center. The construction of Greenbush would exhaust $500 million in capital funds, which is 70 percent of the MBTA's entire Expansion Budget for the next five years, to divert 1,770 riders from automobiles during the peak commute period. Representative Gloria Fox stated at a recent MBTA hearing in Roxbury that her district needs the transit funds there that we don't want or need here. It takes her constituents longer to get to downtown Boston than it takes our ferry riders. Where's the justice of this investment?

The Romney decision to move forward on Greenbush has become a major transportation embarrassment. Have you seen it mentioned in any chronicle of 2003 achievements? Even the Boston Globe editorial of Jan. 13 overlooks the largest transit action of 2003 in its review of the Romney administration actions.

The construction of Greenbush has nothing to do with "smart growth," which was cited by the Romney administration as the reason to move forward with transit projects. On the contrary, in this old narrow, built up corridor, the train damages twenty-two historic districts by adding levels of noise, vibration, and diesel emissions that will make many homes along the tracks uninhabitable. No new major growth centers can be built here. Smart growth investment should be focused at: 1) the Hingham Shipyard with enhanced commuter boats rather than a boat alternative that the MBTA is diminishing by the largest fare increase for any transit service in the MBTA system, and 2) putting the 3 rush hour trains planned for Greenbush on the Plymouth line instead where they will serve both the 1300 housing units planned for the South Weymouth Naval Air Station, as well as the 22 percent population growth projected for the Plymouth area in the next twenty years that contrasts sharply with the projected 3.5 percent growth in the Greenbush corridor.

Greenbush meets none of the highly-touted "draft objective transportation criteria" now being circulated by the Romney administration. Romney in 2003 had announced that all transportation projects, including Greenbush, would be evaluated using these criteria. Instead, he decided to move forward on this incomplete Greenbush project, absent criteria, leaving no money for any other transportation project. Greenbush is by far the most environmentally invasive alternative for meeting transportation needs of the South Shore, the Army Corps found that the train per se would constitute a negative impact on the historic districts, impacting more historic districts than any other project in the nation.

During the past year, AfTA presented its case against Greenbush to Governor Romney, Transportation Secretary Grabauskas, House Speaker Finneran, and to staff of the Senate Ways and Means Chairman Murray, thanks to the work of Senator Robert Hedlund and Representative Garrett Bradley. AfTA was not allowed access to the Director of the Office of Commonwealth Development Doug Foy, who came to the Romney Administration with a built in bias for Greenbush.

Foy was a signatory of the 1990 Central Artery agreement, that mandated more than $2 billion in transit improvements as a condition of moving forward on the Artery. Even though the Greenbush corridor transit ridership exceeds the transit ridership share of most commuter rail towns, because of our rich combination of transit alternatives, the corridor got no credit for its use of boats, private buses, T buses, the Red Line, and the Plymouth Old Colony line. Ironically, there are Central Artery "substitute measures" in place for Greenbush, including a bus route on the North Shore, and the Hingham commuter boat. AfTA and the Coastal Coalition ask if the Hingham commuter boat is a subsitution, then why it could not be expanded, to provide the inexpensive alternative needed for a permanent less invasive, more cost-effective transit, rather than threatened by the fare increase and by Greenbush itself.

Why is Greenbush an embarrassment no-one wants to talk about? Now that the contractor has erected a construction zone in the ancient Hingham cemetery, has closed down roads in downtown Hingham and threatened the livelihood of 200 businesses, has cut down thousands of mature trees, and has narrowed regional transportation corridors, folks are now being able to see how much the communities will change. It has given cause for alarm, and new determination.

Where does the project stand? The Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection is about to issue a wetlands permit for the Hingham section of the project, with permits still pending for Cohasset and Scituate. Greenbush threatens to harm the sole drinking water supply of Scituate. In its current design Greenbush will cause harm to wetlands in the Home Meadows that is avoidable if four quadrant gates are used instead. The choice of quiet zones and use of such gates is about to become the prerogative of cities and towns under new Federal Railroad Administration regulations, not the MBTA. Permits have not been forthcoming from the Natural Heritage program, which protects the endangered species in the 38 vernal pools abutting the tracks. We will challenge the issuing of wetlands permits on the grounds that there are transit alternatives which are less damaging.

The likely decision by the Army Corps of Engineers to issue a "Finding of No Significant Impact", or FONSI, is an action that AfTA and the Coalition will strenuously oppose. Even the MBTA's own state environmental documents chronicles a preliminary roster of significant impacts to be caused by this project. Since the publication of that document, the project has changed; additional wetlands and natural resource and endangered species impacts have been identified. Preliminary construction impacts give further evidence of this. AfTA and the Coastal Coalition believe that Greenbush will not stand the scrutiny of a full federal environmental impact review, which the MBTA had been trying to avoid on this project. We stand firm in pressing for such scrutiny.

AfTA and the Coastal Coalition also intend to support town actions to insist on four-quadrant gates, now that it is clear that federal mandates give local communities the right to dictate design of rail crossings.

In short, we continue to believe that this transportation travesty called Greenbush must not be built. If you want to join with us for the long haul, and for the litigation we are preparing to file on the state and federal fronts, send your tax-deductible contributions to AfTA, 165 Beal Street, Hingham, MA 02043. Send your questions to aftagreenbush@comcast.net. Send your thoughts and concerns to Governor Romney. Call us for more information at 781-740-1613 or at 781-545-5020.

Blondes on the brink of extinction

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Was it Miss Clairol, the hair coloring people, who came up with the advertising slogan: "If I have but one life; let me live it as a blonde?"

Well, last week the blondes among us, the ones gentlemen prefer, weren't so sure after they got through reading and hearing about the results of the latest World Health Organization report.

It warned blondes everywhere, particularly in Scandinavia where they were invented, that due to a recessive gene they will be extinct within 200 years. In other words, they are an endangered subspecies.

I hope you realize the seriousness of such a situation.

It wasn't that long ago that a Masai chief in Kenya offered to buy Carroll Baker, the blonde who sucked her thumb in "Baby Doll," for 150 cows, 200 goats and $750 in cash. The going rate for brides in Kenya at the time was 12 cows and $200 in cash.

It was Carol Channing, the best known blonde of them all, who once said:

"When you're a blonde, people sort of lean forward when you ask them a question. They take your arm to keep you from falling into an open manhole. But when you're a brunette . . . you're just one of the bunch."

Even psychiatrists like Dr. John McGeorge, the Australian, took notice: "A woman has a much better chance than a man of being acquitted on a murder charge. If she happens to be a blonde, her chances rise about 45 per cent. Juries sometimes have to be restrained from handing them a medal for their crimes."

Word of the coming blonde extinction appeared first in English newspapers (where it was suggested that the last true blonde would be found in Finland) and even made it to CNN and the ABC news program "Good Morning America," before someone thought to call WHO.

"WHO has no knowledge of how these news reports originated," said the man from WHO, "and we would like to stress that we have no opinion of the future existence of blondes."

And that should snatch blondes back from the brink of extinction, right?

Not necessarily.

The next time you're nibbling brie and guzzling Chablis at Muffy's fundraiser for Mitt Romney in Duxbury, someone is bound to regale you with the information that the Eskimos have as many as 200 words for snow.

This bit of info got started in 1911 in a book called "Handbook of North American Indians" in which the author, Franz Boas, sought to compare the number of English words for water (liquid, lake, river, etc.) to the number of Eskimo words for snow (piqsirpoq for drifting snow, qimuqsaq for snow drift, etc.)

By 1958, it was noted as a fact in some scholarly language books and the number was set at 50 in a Broadway play, "The Fifth of July," 100 in a New York Times editorial, and 200 on a TV weather report in Cleveland.

The celebrated author, columnist and cynic H. L. Menken found that he had too much time on his hands one day in 1917 so he sat down and wrote a story entitled "A Neglected Anniversary," the 75th anniversary of the introduction of the bathtub into America.

In it, he mentioned in passing that President Millard Fillmore, who was not then or even now known for anything else, ordered the first bathtub for the White House.

By 1926, the story began to appear in reference books and quite possibly on the MCAS tests if they had them in those days. Menken was horrified and admitted the hoax for all the good it did.

Twenty-five years later, another president, Harry Truman, used to amuse visitors to the White House by recounting the story of Millard Fillmore's bathtub and as late as 1992, the Washington Times took note of it in a feature story.

So the next time the subject of blonde extinction comes up over a beer and pretzels at a fund raiser for Shannon O'Brien at the union hall, don't argue. It won't do any good.

CANDIDATES CORNER

Michael Westcott

Westcott is running for the Planning Board

Michael Westcott filed papers on Monday, Jan.19 and now announces his candidacy for the open position on the Cohasset Planning Board.

"I am running for the Planning Board because I feel strongly about preserving the character of Cohasset. It is the single most important issue raised in the town-wide survey conducted two years ago," he says.

As an active member of the Growth & Development Committee, Westcott helped draft the new Cohasset Master Plan and will bring this experience to the Planning Board just as it prepares to adopt and implement it. "This is a well established Planning Board that faces a number of challenges in the coming years and I believe this Master Plan now provides a good blueprint for addressing many of those challenges," Westcott says.

He has been an advocate for community preservation and affordable housing through his work with the Cohasset Action Group. "Cohasset is at a major crossroads. In fact, with over 500 possible units of new construction in various stages of applications and permitting, it is important that we proactively work to preserve our environment and our water supply and ensure that those who work here and grew up here can afford to stay here," Westcott says.

He cites best practices from other successful towns that can be helpful in maintaining Cohasset's character. "The town of Lincoln, for example, has some of the best open space, town services and vital cultural institutions in the state and has met its affordable housing obligations for 30 years through effective planning and creative development. It is important that we be proactive in managing growth to maintain the vitality and diversity that makes Cohasset special,"

For further information contact: Michael Westcott 781-383-2420 or by email:

mrwestcott@erathlink.net

Westcott's background includes study in architecture and planning and a degree in industrial design. For more than 20 years he has served as a design and marketing consultant to a wide range of companies and academic institutions, helping them improve and manage change.

Conley Ford talks about the numbers

"It's not about good candidates," says Conley Ford, who is running for Republican State Committeeman. "Republicans have no problem finding good candidates."

"However, without the votes, all but a few will lose — it's like leading lambs to slaughter," Ford says.

Here's the score:

- US senators: Democrats 2; Republicans: 0.
- US Congressmen: Democrats 10; Republicans 0.
- State senators: Democrats 34; Republicans 6.
- State representatives: Democrats 137, Republicans 23.

"As Republicans we are not relevant in the state of Massachusetts. Our Democrat-dominated Legislature has turned us into 'Taxachusetts,'" Ford says. "That has got to change."

"I want to lead a Republican revolution by recruiting new Republicans from the 2 million unenrolled voters in our state," Ford says. "We need to bring the balance back to ensure that Massachusetts is an attractive place to live and work. The future depends on it."

To help call Ford 781-545-0054 or email, cfordcon@comcast.net.

District-wide receptions, volunteers back Logan

Home receptions and volunteer support to re-elect Paula A. "Polly" Logan, Vice Chair of the Massachusetts Republican State Committee continues to demonstrate overwhelming allegiance to Logan's years of accomplishments.

Upcoming receptions include Jan. 28 at Fred and Barbara Clifford's, Duxbury; Feb. 4 at Peter and Beth Cook's, Marshfield; Feb. 6 at Eleanor Bleakie's, Scituate; and Feb. 16, Wig and Molly Pierson's, Cohasset. The Feb. 11 fundraiser at Black Rock Golf Club, Hingham will feature top GOP leadership.

Already more than 150 volunteers in eight towns have contributed significantly on behalf of Logan. Kathy Stacey of Marshfield, long-time worker for State Sen. Bob Hedlund as are most of Logan's supporters, stated "Most of us have been brought into politics by Polly and appreciate her relentless and full-time service on our behalf. She's never had a thought about personal gain — just helping Republicans."

Palmer turns in his nomination papers

Nathaniel Palmer has delivered to the Cohasset Town Clerk 160 signatures, the maximum allowable amount, making official his candidacy for Water Commissioner.

"Despite subzero temperatures, we had no trouble collecting the maximum number of signatures," says Palmer. "The response we received was 100 percent positive, and quite frankly a bit humbling with such a strong showing of support."

If elected, Palmer will be working with Glenn Pratt and John McNabb. "I look forward to working with Glenn and John come April," stated Nathaniel. "And I hope to continue the great quality service that Rob Kasameyer has provided our town for the last decade."

For information on the campaign contact Nathaniel Palmer directly at 781-383-3339 or nathaniel-palmer@msn.com

Palmer, who is a graduate of Bentley College with a degree in Computer Information Systems, has completed post-graduate study at Babson College's Olin School of Management, and is a principal and Vice President of Delphi Group, a management consulting firm.

Cohasset Mariner Town Election Policy

Although the last day for taking out nomination papers isn't until Feb. 12, a great deal of interest is already being generated in this year's annual Town Election.

Therefore the Mariner wants to clearly state its election policy so there is no confusion.

As in keeping with our tradition, we will pose a Question of the Week to local candidates for the School Committee and Selectman and certain other races but not until after papers close in February.

All candidates opposed or unopposed, who have not already done so, are invited to submit photographs and formal statements announcing their candidacies. These will be run as space permits on a first-come, first-serve basis. There is no word limit, but candidates are advised to be as concise as possible.

Between now and the election, we will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (no more than 150 words per week), from any candidate — opposed or unopposed — who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers or brief position statements. Candidates must observe the word limits; submissions that exceed the word limit will be cut from the bottom.

Candidates may send by e-mail at mford@cnc.com; by fax at 781-741-2931, or by dropping off their responses at the Cohasset Mariner office in the Hingham Journal Building, 73 South St., Hingham Square. However they choose to deliver their answers, candidates should adhere to the noon, Tuesday deadline.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

If you have questions, or would like to suggest a Question of the Week, call Mary Ford at 781-741-2933 or contact her by e-mail at mford@cnc.com.

Editors' note: Candidates for Republican State Committee, which is also generating interest, will not have a Question of the Week. They are invited to submit formal announcements, if they have not already done so, and may submit weekly candidates corner items of no more than 150 words. That race will be decided March 2 during the Presidential Primary.

QUESTIONS

BHRC is sponsored and underwritten by Fleet Bank as a public service for readers of the Mariner. It is written by Bob Katzen who has covered the legislature for more than 25 years and has been providing this feature to newspapers since 1975.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local representatives' votes on three roll calls and local senators' votes on two roll calls from the week of January 19-23.

$6.8 MILLION FOR LEGISLATURE'S COMPUTER SYSTEM (H 4330)

House 130-22, Senate 38-0, overrode Gov. Romney's $6.8 million veto reduction (from $8.6 million to $1.8 million) in funding for the joint operation of the Legislature in order to upgrade the legislative computer system. Override supporters said a non-partisan commission has recommended the full $8.6 million in order to avoid the crashing of this inadequate, aging computer system and to upgrade the Legislature's website. They argued that upgrading the site's technological capacity is essential to give citizens access to information and ensure an open, accessible and accountable government. Override opponents said the $8.6 million expense is excessive during this troubled economic period and noted that the spending of $4 million of these funds can easily be postponed until the next fiscal year. They argued that it is unfair to spend this kind of money on a computer system when cities and towns and important human service programs are suffering from recent budget cuts. (A "Yea" vote is for the $6.8 million additional funding. A "Nay" vote is against the $6.8 million).

$4.5 MILLION FOR WORKFORCE TRAINING FUND GRANTS (H 4328)

House 154-0, Senate 37-1, overrode Gov. Romney's $4.5 million veto reduction (from $6 million to $1.5 million) in funding for workforce training fund grants. The governor also vetoed some of the earmarking of the funds. Override supporters said the full $6 million is necessary to fund these grants that provide resources to Massachusetts businesses to train employees and improve their skills. The noted that some grants are targeted to ensure training of direct care human service providers, health care workers, dislocated workers and older adults. Override opponents said the earmarking of the funds is unfair because it favors employers in specific areas across the state. They argued that none of the funds should be earmarked but should instead be available equally for all employers across the state. (A "Yea" vote is for the additional $4.5 million. A "Nay" vote is against the additional $4.5 million).

$5 MILLION FOR TECHNOLOGY DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION (H 4328)

House 132-22, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of $5 million for the Massachusetts Technology Development Corporation (MTDC). The Senate has not yet considered this override. Override supporters said that the $5 million is critical for this state-owned venture capital firm that invests in Massachusetts-based technology companies by providing grants to address the funding gap for their start-up and expansion. They argued that these companies help the state's economic growth by creating jobs and generating tax revenue and noted that the state often receives a substantial return on its investment and uses that revenue to invest in additional companies. Override opponents said the MTDC already has sufficient funding and argued that the state should not be spending money to supplement dozens of programs when it faces a potential $2 billion deficit in the fiscal 2005 budget. In his veto message, the governor said that he vetoed the funding because the MTDC would compete with the state's existing private venture capital industry. (A "Yea" vote is for the $5 million. A "Nay" vote is against the $5 million).

SNOWSTORM AID FOR NON-PROFITS- The Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency (MEMA) announced that cities and towns and thousands of qualified non-profit organizations in twelve counties are eligible for federal reimbursement of snow removal costs from the December 6-7 snowstorm. Acting MEMA Director Cristine McCombs said that non-profit organizations rarely take advantage of this opportunity and urged them to apply for the aid. MEMA has scheduled a series of workshops across the state to brief communities and non-profits on the application procedure. For more information, go to www.mass.gov/mema

MOTORCYCLE HELMETS (H 206)- The Senate gave near final approval to a House-approved bill allowing motorcyclists over 18 year of age to ride their motorcycles without helmets in parades. Current law requires all motorcyclists to wear helmets. Only final House and Senate approval are needed in order for the measure to go to the governor.

PSYCHOTROPIC DRUGS (S 674)- The Senate postponed further action for one week on a measure requiring doctors to provide parents with extensive information on any psychotropic drugs prior prescribing the drug. The parents must sign a written form that they have obtained the information. Psychotropic drugs are ones that affect the mind through action on the central nervous system and include such well-known drugs as Prozac, Ritalin and Adderall. There was no debate in the Senate when it gave initial approval to the proposal in October.

SALE AND STORAGE OF FIREWORKS (S 1364)- The Senate postponed until its next session consideration of a bill increasing from $1000 to $2000 the maximum fine for the illegal sale of fireworks in Massachusetts. The bill does not change the current law that also allows imposition of up to a one-year prison sentence on offenders. Senate Minority Leader Brian Lees (R-East Longmeadow) moved for postponement and urged the Senate to look at the whole issue and consider legalizing the sale of fireworks in the state.

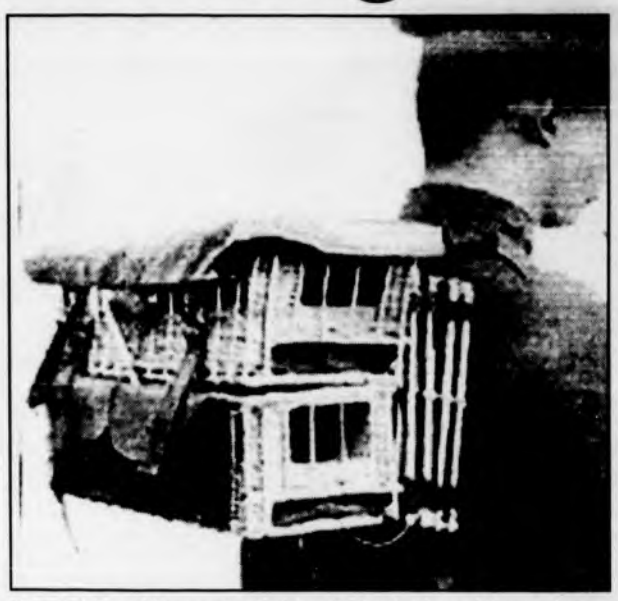
These birds of a feather really do flock together



COMMON GROUND

AMY WHORF MCGUIGGAN

Rock Dove (Pigeon) Columba livia

Carried by soldiers on both sides during both world wars, homing pigeons saved many lives as well as many vital military operations. Many of the military messengers earned medals and honors.

Used by both civilians and the military through the ages, homing or carrier pigeons delivered messages in canisters that were clipped to the legs or attached to the chest.

Put yourself in a pigeon's feathers and you can see how they might think that Boston's Big Dig is nothing more than a vast right and left wing conspiracy to rid the city of their kind. For half a century, the elevated Central Artery has been one of the city's premier pigeon roosts, its sheltered ledges, recesses, rafters and overhangs reminiscent of the ancient Old World caves and high cliff ledges that were home to the modern-day pigeon's wild ancestors. But, now, with the last stretch of tunnel open for business, the el that sliced the City of Boston in two is being dismantled. A flock of pigeons is without a home.

The response to that dire (at least from the birds' point of view) bit of news has been just what you'd expect. So what. Who cares. Good riddance to them! Pigeons, like sparrows, starlings, squirrels, mice, dandelions and a host of other plants and animals seem to evoke only disdain from people. Perhaps the pigeon, which is often referred to as a flying rat, is simply too common a bird to be appreciated. Those of us fortunate enough to have pretty songbirds visiting our feeders just cant see the intrinsic beauty in so seemingly ordinary a creature as the pigeon.

The pigeon, whose name that derives from the French, pijon, is a member of the family Columbidae (from the Latin for pigeon or dove), a family that numbers some 300 species worldwide, 11 of which breed in North America. A native of Europe, North Africa and Asia, the pigeon was domesticated — with some specially bred — several thousand years ago for racing and acrobatics, homing and carrying, showing and food. All modern-day pigeons are thought to descend from a single wild species, Columba livia, the Rock dove, the name now commonly used for the pigeon. Introduced to the New World during the 17th century by European settlers, Rock doves escaped captivity, took to a life of freedom and quickly established themselves as the common feral (populations established by domestic escapees) bird of urban areas.

Having been domesticated, it seems only natural that pigeons would be comfortable in cities, among people and their carelessly disposed food leftovers (think of what the streets might look like without the flying street cleaners), and man-made structures that mimic ancestral nesting sites. Non-migratory, when pigeons find a place to their liking they amass in large flocks and maintain a home range of less than one square mile. With few natural enemies (though as peregrine falcons make a modest comeback, pigeons will have to watch their backs), once a flock is established, it's virtually impossible to disband the gathering.

And it may be that those large gatherings, rather than the bird itself, are what irk people about pigeons. Concentrated populations of pigeons, indeed of any animal (think Canada geese on suburban golf courses and beaches), naturally bring their "messes" and possibly disease, but for urban dwellers the pigeon may be one of the few wild creatures to share their lives. Any such wild creature, it could be argued, helps to soften the edges of a harsh, concrete urban environment.

Affectionate and loyal, pigeons are monogamous and mate for life, though if a mate dies, pigeons may choose another partner. Both parents assist with nest construction — usually a loose, well-hidden, platform of small twigs and grasses — and lovingly tend their young, called squabs, which are born after a 20-day incubation. Breeding takes place most of the year, though spring and fall are peak reproduction seasons, and clutch size is usually one to two white eggs. For the first week of life, hatchlings are fed "pigeon milk," a special cottage cheesy-like food made by both parents in their crops. By the second week, regurgitated seeds are mixed with the milk. Eventually, the squabs make the transition to the typical adult diet of seeds and grains (as well as human handouts) and after four to six weeks leave the nest.

One of the most familiar of birds, pigeons are known for their sad-voiced cooing, minced step, bobbing heads (they walk or run rather than hop like most birds), green, bronze and purple iridescent necks, and diversity of plumage coloration. Cornell University's Project Pigeon Watch notes that while there may be as many as 28 plumage color types, most pigeons fall into seven major color types called morphs. Blue-bar pigeons, with their black tail and wing bands, carry the color and pattern of their wild ancestors. Red-bars are similar but the black bands have been replaced by rusty-red. A checkered wing pattern characterizes the Checkers, and a body and wings that are largely rusty-red, the Reds. Pigeons that are uniformly black or dark gray are known as Spreads, and pigeons with white patches on their heads or wings, Pieds. Whites, pigeons lacking feather pigmentation, are the doves that have become emblems of peace and love. So why do we adore doves and dislike pigeons?

Lost in the pigeon's "commonness" are several unusual, indeed unique, traits. Unlike most birds that drink water by taking it into the beak and tipping back the head to let the water trickle down the throat, a pigeon uses its beak like a straw, sipping water in a continuous stream.

Excellent fliers, and among the strongest and swiftest of birds, pigeons typically fly at speeds exceeding 40 miles per hour, though trained pigeons have reached speeds approaching 100 miles per hour. Stamina, another of the pigeon's attributes, enables trained pigeons to fly more than 500 miles in a single day. Speed and stamina, coupled with an instinctive ability to find their way back to their home loft, have made "homing" pigeons invaluable through the ages as civilian and military messengers. Though not fully understood, scientists believe that pigeons find their way home by sensing the Earth's magnetic field with tiny magnetic tissues in their heads. There is also evidence that pigeons use the sun to point them in the right direction, behavior all the more mysterious because the pigeon is a non-migratory bird.

The Ancient Greeks employed pigeons to announce the winners of the Olympic Games; news of the rise and fall of kings was delivered by pigeons. Napoleon's defeat at Waterloo was heralded by pigeons. Their shining moments, however, came during wartime, particularly during the two world wars, when messenger pigeons, with small containers clipped to their legs and chests, were released during sieges when bombing, gunfire and gas attacks crippled telephone and signal systems and cut troops off from one another. Carried with troops on aircraft, tanks, submarines and patrol boats, pigeons saved many lives and many vital operations — on both sides of the conflicts. The gallantry of these flying heroes — including two of the most famous, Cher Ami during World War I, and G.I. Joe during World War II — was recognized with medals, war memorials and burial honors.

Sadly, not all members of the Columbidae family have fared as well as the Rock dove. The wild Passenger pigeon's story was as tragic as the Rock dove's has been illustrious. At one time the most plentiful bird on Earth, numbering in the billions when the first colonists arrived, the beautiful Passenger pigeon, whose closest relative is the familiar backyard mourning dove, was hunted to extinction. In 1914, the last of the species died in captivity in Cincinnati.

More about the glorious life and tragic end of the Passenger pigeon next month.

SHS lady hoopsters now just a win shy of first playoff berth in several years

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

After a few tough games the Cohasset Girls Varsity Basketball team has reversed direction with four consecutive wins. Slightly past the season half-way mark they boast an envious 9-4 winning record. They need only one more win in the remaining seven games to secure a berth in the Div. 4 South Sectional State Tournament.

During the past week, the Lady Skippers added a "W" to their wins column with a 38-27 victory over the talented Norwell Clippers on Friday. The Lady Skippers entered the Norwell gymnasium as underdogs. Norwell came into the game flying high from having knocked off Harwich, the defending champs who, by the way, blew past Cohasset exactly one week earlier.

The Skippers brought on their A-game which melted away the Clippers' play intensity and confidence. When the final buzzer sounded, Norwell could boast no more than 27 points. Shutting down Clipper stars Katelyn Stravinsky and Holly Guistalli proved crucial to the Skippers' victory.

Head Coach John Levangie shared his ideas about this game.

"The Cohasset defense, already league-renowned, completely dominated the Clippers unforgiving offense," said Levangie. "They impressed me with their play."

Although she got into foul trouble late in the game, senior captain Danielle Pinkus led the defensive charge.

"I did not play to my personal potential," saif Pinkus. "As a team, however, we came out strong and won."

To no one's surprise, Casey Anderson led the team in scoring with 16 points, followed by Jen Buckley with eight, and Ashley Faber and Mia Lieb-Lappen with six apiece.

The Skippers' confidence clearly carried over to the next day in Cohasset when the Skippers overpowered Cape Cod Academy by a score of 44-23. According to Coach Levangie, this win was a "complete team effort. The phenome-

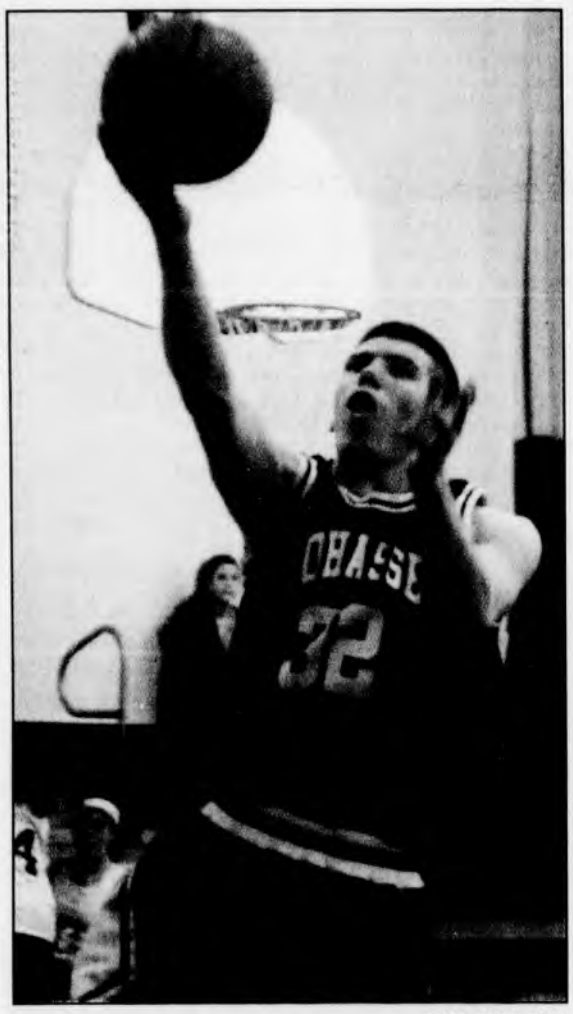
Last second Walcott goal lifts Rockland icemen over Cohasset

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM



This was one the Rockland High hockey team really, REALLY needed.

And, with four seconds to play in Saturday's showdown at Rockland Ice Arena with Cohasset, junior Shea Walcott delivered it when he poked home the rebound of a Steve O'Brien shot, giving the Bulldogs a 4-3 win to keep alive a glimmer of playoff hope.

With Rockland up a skater after a Cohasset player took a retaliation penalty with 52 seconds to play, the gamewinning sequence began when senior defenseman Steve Dionne blocked a Cohasset clear attempt at the right point and quickly fired back toward the crowd in front of Cohasset netminder Stefan Parnell. The puck squirted through to O'Brien by the right post and he chopped it into the midsection of the lunging Parnell, the carom going directly to Walcott by the left post, who calmly slipped it into the open half of the net by the downed Parnell.

"We have no one to blame but ourselves," charged clearly incensed Cohasset coach Ben Virga following the game.

Gymnasts vault ahead

Nor-Coh squad dominates Hanover to remain perfect

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

The Norwell-Cohasset gymnastics team took a huge step toward its second South Shore League title in three years with a 130.9-111 win on Thursday over Hanover, the team regarded as the chief competition in this chase.

Cohasset junior Nancy Durkin paced the way to the team's season best score with an all-time high of 34.0 in the all-around competition, and took at least a share of first place in all four events. Norwell junior Jen Guiney was second in the all-around with a 32.7.

"I was real happy with the performance," said Nor-Coh head coach Kara Connerty. "Several girls are picking it up lately, which is what you're looking for down the stretch."

With Hanover star Molly Fanning being lost to a sprained ankle early in this meet, the Nor-Coh girls were able to sweep three of four events, with Fanning's third place showing of 8.1 on the uneven bars the only blemish on the leaderboard.

Durkin won outright for her performances on beam and uneven bars, scoring an 8.5 in both events, and tied for first with teammate Samantha Rosen, a Norwell High junior, on floor (8.7) and vault (8.3).

The Nor-Coh girls were particularly dominant in the floor exercise, as Guiney and Cohasset's Lisa Spirito tied for second with 8.6 scores. This was an all-time high for Spirito. Norwell sophomore Erin Kelly was not far off that pace with an 8.2.

Kelly also finished second on beam to Durkin with an 8.1 score and Cohasset sophomore Kate Carpenter was third with an 8.0.

Guiney was third on vault behind Durkin and Rosen and took second on bars (8.3) between Durkin and Fanning.

The Nor-Cohs followed this up with a lopsided win over Duxbury on Tuesday, 128.4-108.3, to improve to 8-0 on the season with two league meets remaining. The girls will host Carver tonight at the Massachusetts Gymnastics Center in Hingham (7 p.m. start) and then hit the road on Monday to take on the Hingham-Scituate team at Head Over Heels in Norwell.

The Nor-Cohs had little difficulty with those two teams the first time around, but coach Connerty is taking nothing for granted.

"You never know what's going to happen," said the veteran coach. "We need to take things one meet at a time."

The South Shore League meet will be held next Saturday at Carver High, and will be the Carver win lifts CHS grapplers to third straight league title, Sweeney to #200

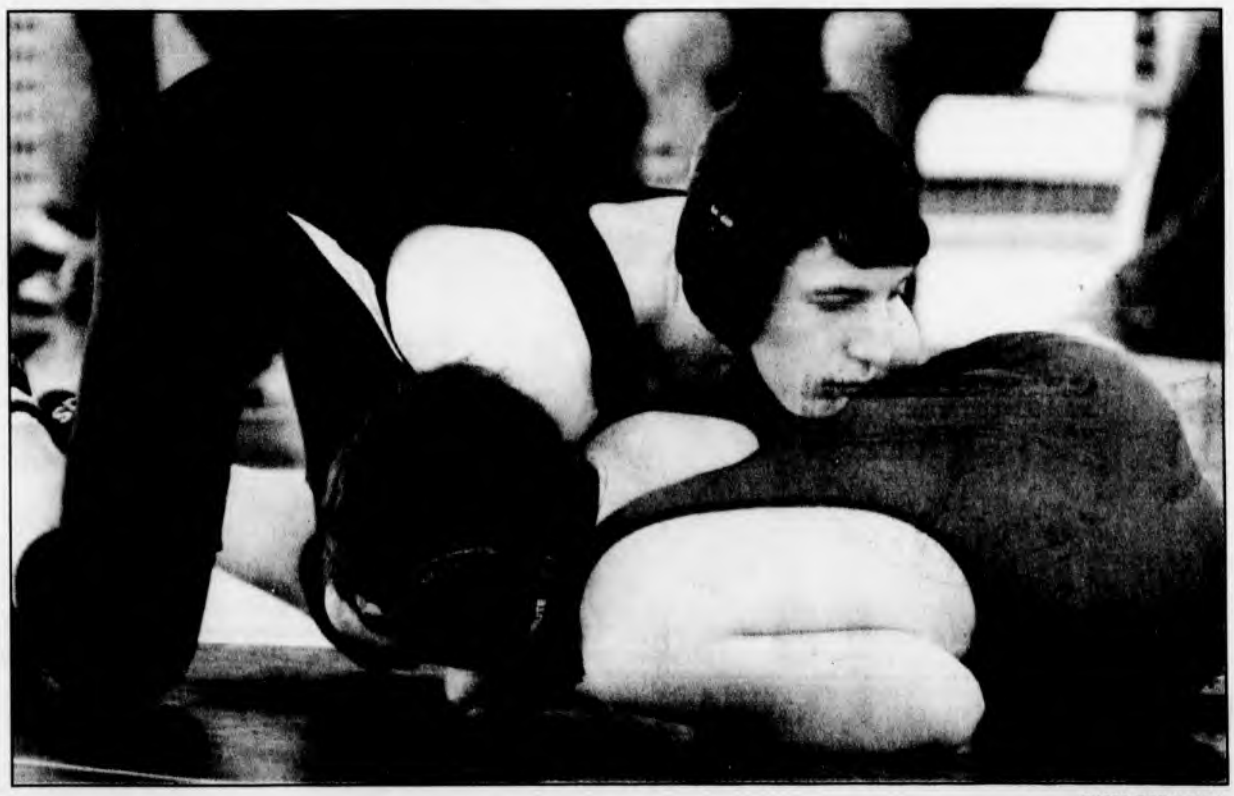
By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

The clincher for a third straight league championship and career win number 200 to boot.

Yeah, Wednesday was a pretty good day for Cohasset High wrestling coach Torin Sweeney.

"We picked a good day to wrestle this well," said Sweeney, following the 41-22 win over Carver on Wednesday that clinched the South Shore League title for the Skippers. "This was the best we've wrestled all year. This was a total team effort with a lots of gut check wins."

Things started right for the host Skippers (4-0 in league, 10-4 overall), as they won the coin flip, which allowed Sweeney to keep stars Phil Strazzulla and Matt Casey matched up against top Carver wrestlers.



Strazzulla, a senior captain, improved his record to 22-1 by winning his match at 145 by major decision. Casey was bumped from 160 to 171, and his pin clinched the win for the Skippers with three bouts still to be wrestled.

Sweeney trotted out two freshmen and a sophomore to start the match and was quite pleased to come out of that facing only a one point deficit at 7-6.

Freshman Ryan McLellan battled out of a couple of jams in a seesaw battle and then pinned his counterpart at 103 to give the Skippers a quick 6-0 edge.

"For a freshman to come out in the big match, with all the pressure to start things out, and respond like that was just incredible," effused Sweeney,

Coastal Stars Youth Hockey

Mite C1

The Stars Mite C1's defeated Hanover 5-4 this week in a fast paced, action packed game. Both teams came out strong and both goalies saw a lot of action. The Stars first line off the bench, Pat Shea, Tucker Ambrose and Brodie Jackisch on offense, and Tommy Prendergast and Derek Benson on defense, got to work quickly and were rewarded with a nice goal by Tucker Ambrose. Hanover responded with several good shots and borrowed player Joey Redfern in the Stars goal was put to the test but Hanover was denied. In spite of both teams getting shots off, the score stayed 1-0 until late in the first when second line defenseman Charlie Blackington was able to steal the puck at the blue line and take it in for the goal. The second line offense of Adam Benson, Justin Fein and Jake Burchill had several impressive, close shots to start the second period, and in spite of great defensive plays by Blackington and Colby Comeau, it was Hanover who scored early in the second to make it 2-1. The pressure on both goalies continued to mount throughout the second period and the work of the defensemen intensified. The Stars third line off the bench, with Brian Palmieri, Colin MacDonald and Charley Michalowski on offense and Kevin Meehan and Cameron Lamoureux on defense, were outstanding, holding off Hanover and working the puck for several good shots, but it was Hanover who scored to end the second with a 2-2 tie. The third period saw the shots on goal increase for both teams and of course, the pressure on the defense. Justin Fein, Colin MacDonald, Charley Michalowski, Brian Palmieri and Kevin Meehan all had outstanding shots on goal only to be shut out. Pat Shea and Adam Benson were able to get past Hanover to give the Stars their third and fourth goals and a 4-2 lead. Hanover came right back with their third goal and Benson responded with his second goal, making it 5-3. The lead did not last long as Hanover scored their fourth. Hanover pulled their goalie but came up short thanks to tough defense and continued sharp efforts from goalie Joey Redfern. It was an exciting, well earned 5-4 win for the Stars and great entertainment for all the fans.

Mites C3

The Coastal Stars Mites C-3 team skated to their 15th victory of the season with a commanding win over the Brewins 1 Mites team. The Stars exhibited their largest offensive output of the season with all three lines contributing to the goal scoring. Strong positional play, team defense and a great job in net by goaltender Max Hemingway provided the team with another shut out., Two Stars players, James Daley and Mark McGoldrick recorded "Hat Tricks" in the game while Jeffery Powers and Sam Topham scored two goals apiece. Other Stars goal scorers included forwards Ryan Davis, Curtis Golden, Sam Rice and defensemen Jake Denton and Bryan Bowman. Coastal Stars defensemen Garrett Leahy, Declan Leahy, Ryan Melia, Bryan Bowman, Jake Denton, and Sam Topham all hustled, consistently breaking up Brewins offensive rushes while standing tall at the blueline and keeping the puck in the offensive zone. Stars wingers Hugh Healey, Jeff Nagle and Mike Barry played outstanding "two way" hockey with each player contributing assists to the team scoring effort. Stars net minder Max Hemingway stood tall in net turning away the Brewins offensive opportunities, especially making a flurry of saves in the third period.

Mite C4

The Stars Mite C4's played perhaps their best game of the season in posting a 6-0 win over the Eagles at Wompatuck Arena. Team defense and superb passing were the order of the day as the Stars put together a total team effort. The line of Teddy Craven, Robert Bothwell, Seamus Feeney and Joe Deyeso got the Stars off on the right foot with a powerful first shift. This line would be a standout for the balance of the game, despite the absence of Colin Bell who has been a key contributor all season. Craven and Bothwell swarmed the Eagles net on numerous occasions, each picking up an assist in the game, while Deyeso and Feeney jumped up smartly into the offensive play on a regular basis. The line of Sam Rice, Tommy O'Brien and Michael Lund provided terrific offensive punch, keeping the Eagles hemmed in in their own zone. Held scoreless for the first period, this line finally got on the board in the second with goals from Rice and O'Brien, each player bulging the twine after tremendous hustle to crash the net. Both goals were the result of super work by Michael Lund taking the puck strongly to the goal, and Liam McHugh and Mats Nelson making spectacular plays at the point to keep the puck in. McHugh and Nelson had an outstanding game on defense, playing disciplined positional hockey and thwarting every rush the Eagles would attempt to make. Nelson would even light the lamp late in the game, scoring in a furious goal-mouth skirmish. The second period ended with the Stars up 3-0, as the "Tic-Tac-Toe" line of Mickey Barry, Zack Coggins and Ryan McGovern would also get on the board. In the 3rd, both Barry and Coggins had beautiful goals after McGovern made brilliant pass plays to set up each, earning assists on the tallies. Christopher Lund and Eric Weinstein provided shut-down defense, stifling the Eagles attack and giving them little room to maneuver. Crisp breakouts up the boards by Lund and Weinstein were the highlight of the Stars transition game and created numerous fast-break rushes up the ice. Jeff Nagle posted the shutout, making several sparkling glove saves throughout the tilt. The victory was truly the strongest team effort of the season.

Squirt C3

The Squirt C3's turned in a Super bowl effort with an impressive 6-1 victory over Cape Cod Canal at the extremely popular 5:50am hour in Bridgewater last Saturday. Refusal to yield the blue line by the Defense and aggressive forechecking by the forwards helped to create many scoring opportunities for the Stars. Mike Masciulli scored the first goal of the game with a lunch pail effort, taking the puck off an opponents stick and slamming it in from close range. Moments later, Willy Brown cleaned up on a Sam Labo shot and punched it home from the top of the crease. With just over a minute in the period, Johnny "Hustle" Sinkins threw the puck up the boards to Labo, who shoveled it over to a streaking Ally Ryan. Ryan deked the goalie and slid the puck inside the right post. In the second period, Cape Cod tightened up their defense and managed to close the score to 3-1. The rest of the period was all Stars as Mike Masciulli added two more goals for the hat trick and a 5-1 lead. Both goals were made possible by the aggressive play of Ryan Foohey and Mike Foley, who threw a brick wall up at the blue line. Both defensemen received assists on the scores. In the third period, Nick Craig tested his mettle at defense and came up big, thwarting a number of rushes in the neutral zone. Justin Henriksen and Mike Timcoe, playing forward, made a number of uncontested rushes up ice, showing off their skating and stick handling ability. Centerman Vinny Calorio did his part by winning the majority of the draw's, allowing the Stars to control the play. Ally Ryan closed out the scoring with her second goal off a feed from Sinkins. Once again Goalie Alec Hurd stood tall between the pipes, turning away some humdingers and allowing his teammates to play an aggressive offensive game. Go Stars and Go Pats!

PeeWee C1

The Coastal Stars Pee-Wee C1 team played a solid game on Sunday against Milton and skated away with a well-earned 4-0 victory. Substitute goalie, Kevin O'Connell, suited up in net for the Stars for the first time this season and turned back every shot that made its way to the crease. Meanwhile, the Stars' regular goalie, John Carrigg, took full advantage of the opportunity to play offense. Early in the first period, Carrigg capitalized on a great feed pass from defensemen Geoff Evans and scored his first goal of the season with a nice wrist shot that sailed past the Milton goalie. Justin Yeager scored the Stars' second goal early in the second period. Yeager finished a terrific unassisted rush with a nice side-to-side move in front of the goaltender that enabled him to slide the puck under the Milton goalie. Mike Caira scored the Stars' third goal later in the second period. Caira fired a hard shot past the Milton goalkeeper. Gordy Smith earned an assist on that goal. Andrew Bell scored the Stars' final goal mid-way through the third period on a hard shot from the circle. Chris Fazzina earned an assist of the fourth goal. Also contributing to the Stars' strong offensive play throughout the game were Joe Fitzsimmons and Phil Murphy. The Stars defense also put on an outstanding performance. Making big plays in the defensive end through all three periods were Brian Meehan, Geoff Evans, Connor Ofsthun and Mike O'Halloran.

nal bench scoring led Cohasset to another victory.

Sophomore Joanna Hamilton agreed: "Though we didn't play to our full potential in the first half, our team effort carried us through and got us a win."

The girls then moved to within a win of their first postseason berth in recent memory with a 58-24 win over SSL rival Mashpee at home on Tuesday. Anderson led the way with a game high 23 points, and Katey James and Courtney Caron each chipped in with eight. Nicole Whitney had an excellent game defensively, according to coach Levenagie.

Looking forward, Levangie knows exactly where he wants to boost team performance.

"We need to work on the inconsistent offensive rebounding, foul shots and outside shooting," offered the head coach. "Our defense presents a totally different story. The other league teams recognize the power of our defensive rebounding and 1-2-2 zone."

The Skippers shift their focus to close out the week with a home non-league meeting with Fenway High School, of Boston. To compete against the top notch teams in the back half of the season, the Skippers know they must maintain their aggressiveness and intensity.

who is in his 21st year of coaching the Skippers.

Sophomore Rick Grassie, at 112, and freshman Tim Toomey, at 119, were then pitted against veteran Carver grapplers. Grassie lost by three-point decision to 2003 sectional standout Nick Banks and Toomey staved off several near pins before falling by major decision to surrender four points.

"Both Rick and Tim did their jobs," said Sweeney. "They avoided pins against a couple of very good wrestlers. Pins would've given Carver five more points at that point, which could have been huge."

Perhaps the biggest swing point in the match came next, at 125 pounds. After controlling much of the match, Cohasset junior Kevin Dinsmore got caught in a five point takedown combination with under two minutes left to tie things up at 11-11. Dinsmore then fought off his back for close to a minute and finally managed to escape at the buzzer to earn the tiebreaking point for the 12-11 win.

A forfeit at 130 increased the Skippers lead to 15-7, but three of those points came back to Carver when junior Dan Littauer, just a few weeks back from injury, lost a 5-2 decision to 130 pound Carver standout John Foley.

The bout at 140 was featured a showdown between state qualifiers Jay Barker and Cohasset's Joe Kehoe. Kehoe fought a very intelligent match to earn a 4-0 win and push the Skippers lead to 18-10.

The Skippers then earned 20 points over the next four matches to sew up the win. Strazzulla won by major decision at 145, as did junior Colin Regan at 152. Nick Cambi won by forfeit at 160 for six points and Casey got the match clinching pin.

Junior Matt Baroudi closed out the scoring for Cohasset by taking a 4-1 decision at 215.

Half of Sweeney's 100 career wins have come over the last seven years, as he's built this program into one of the most respected in Eastern Massachusetts in recent times. The Skippers have finished with a sub-500 record only twice over the last 12 seasons and won four league titles in the last six years, including three in a row.

"I guess what I'm proudest of with these 200 wins is the fact that we've always wrestled anyone," said Sweeney, whose career record improved to 200-165 with the win. "We wrestled much bigger schools and strong programs. Since I've been here, we've always looked for the best competition around."

The Skippers dropped two of three decisions in a quad meet at Durfee on Saturday to fall to 10-4 on the season overall. Without a couple of key wrestlers out, the Skippers dominated Whitman-Hanson, 50-12, but were clipped by perennial powerhouse Wayland, 43-25, and host Durfee, 40-33.

The Skippers did have triple winners in five of the 14 weight divisions, however. Dinsmore won all three of his matches at 125 by pin, and sophomore Dave McKenna (135), Kehoe (140), Strazzulla (145) and Baroudi (215) also swept.

McLellan and Littauer won two matches apiece, while solo win were turned in by Toomey, who bumped from 112 to 119, John Keniley, Casey and Pat O'Brien.

Looking ahead

The Skippers have nine matches left, so tying last year's program best 18 win total is still a possibility. The Skippers travel to Hopkinoton this afternoon (4:30 p.m. start) and then host a five team meet on Saturday (10 a.m. start), with Rockland, Middleboro, North Quincy and New Mission coming in. The Skippers will be at Scituate next Wednesday, Feb. 4, and then wrap up the regular season with a quad at New Bedford next Saturday. Marshfield and Norwood are the other two teams on the docket there.

The Div. 3 South Sectionals are scheduled for Feb 13 and 14 at Foxboro High.

Cohasset High will host the state divisional championships the following weekend, Feb. 20 and 21, something their brand new wrestling facilities have made possible. There are 57 Div. 3 teams in the state and there will be 240 wrestlers eligible to wrestle at CHS on the 20th.

"We're still working out the logistics and making deals with hotels," reported Sweeney. "It's a lot of work, but it should be a great time."

If any alumni are interested in volunteering their time to help out at the Divisional championships, they should call coach Sweeney at Cohasset High (781-383-6103).

Boys unable to dig out

Slow start costs hoopsters in showdown with SSL rival Hull

By Mark Goodman
CORRESPONDENT

High school basketball is a 32-minute game.

Last Tuesday, Cohasset played 24 good minutes of basketball. Unfortunately, it came after they had already dug themselves a 15-point hole, and the Skippers took a tough 63-58 loss.

Losing close games has been a regrettable them for Cohasset all season long. Going back to an overtime loss to Canton in December, the team has lost four games decided by five points or less.

After a rough start against Hull, it appeared as though the Skippers would be able to reverse the trend. Senior Chris Bilodeau led the way with 31 points, including the first 13 Skipper points of the second half.

An 18-footer by Bilodeau pulled Cohasset within one point, 57-56, with 3:19 to play. That is as close as the visitors got, however, as Hull sealed the win down the stretch with free throws and great defense.

Head coach Ron Ford said a 20-5 first half deficit was simply too much to overcome.

"We played just well enough to lose the game," he said. "We didn't finish early on in the game. We can't play less than 32 minutes, and that's what we did."

The coach also pointed to free throw shooting as a key factor in the loss. Cohasset did a good job of getting to the line, attempting 23 free throws. They made only 11, however, and shot just 4-for-10 from the line in the second half.

Add that to a lack of scoring balance, and the Skippers were done in. After Bilodeau's 31, no one had as many as six points. Senior center Sean Connolly did chip in with 14 rebounds.

The name of the game is scoring, however, and the Skippers did not get enough of it beyond their leading scorer.

"Bilodeau was absolutely awesome tonight," Ford said after the game. "On a night where we were struggling early and needed guys to step up, nobody else could do that."

Cohasset played some pretty good defense, forcing the Pirates into a lot of tough shots. The home team was able to make a good number of those shots, however, and also made the most of their opportunities at the line. Hull shot 9-for-12 from the charity stripe.

The game tested the stamina of both team's players, as much of it was played at a frantic, up-tempo pace. Cohasset began to get back into it in the first half with some quick thinking and reactions on defense that forced Hull into turnovers.

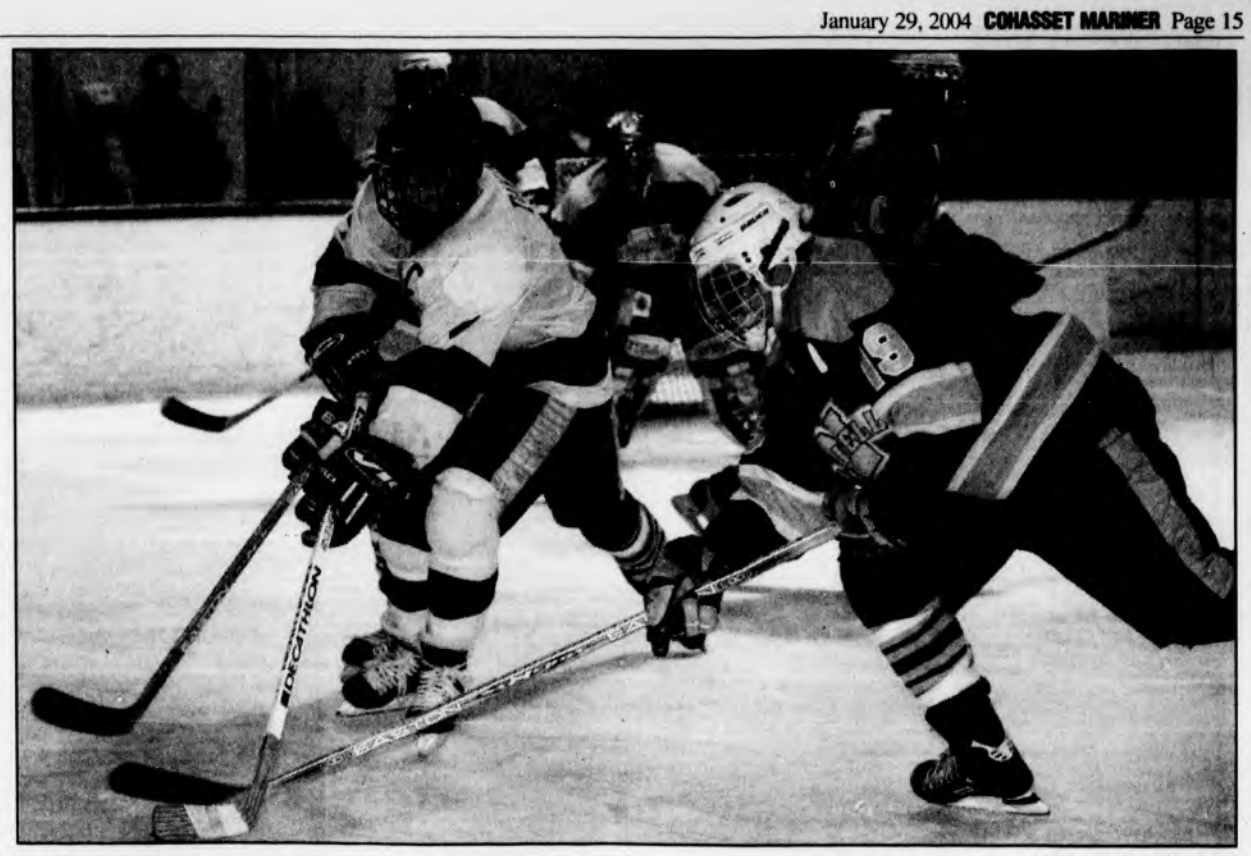
Again, however, it was not enough to overcome a slow start.

"If we hit even one-third of the lay-ups that we missed at the beginning of the game, we probably would have won," Ford said.

The Skippers followed the Hull defeat with a 58-40 loss to unbeaten Norwell (11-0) last Friday, but then reeld of two straight wins to get back to 6-8 on the season. They thrashed Cape Cod Academy on Saturday, 61-28, and then handled Mashpee with almost as much ease Tuesday, 76-43, behind 19 points and 18 assists fro mBilodeau. Junior DJ Silvia added a season best 17 points.

Although it will be quite a challenge, the Cohasset boys still have a chance to qualify for the Div. 4 state tournament. They need to win five of their remaining seven games to make that happen. Starting with tomorrow night's contest against Nantucket, five of the Skippers' remaining last seven games will be at home. The road games come next weekend against Carver and Archbishop Williams on Feb. 6 and Feb. 7, respectively.

Cohasset has beaten Carver and lost to Archies already this season, both in close games. The Skippers will probably have to at least split those games to keep alive their postseason chances.



After that, the boys close out the season with three home games in four days against Harwich, Hull, and Mashpee. If the Skippers can figure out how to play a full 32 minutes for the remainder of their games, they should be able to make things interesting down the stretch.

Boys basketball spirit Night Friday

Please join us in cheering on the girls and boys varsity basketball teams at our "Spirit Night" this Friday, January 30th. Both teams are hoping to qualify for playoff games, so come and show your enthusiasm for their exciting season.

Sixth grade recreation boys and girls basketball players are invited to come and play five minute games during half times. All recreation basketball players are invited to attend free with a paying adult. We'll have hot dogs and pizza for supper so you can stay for both games.

Cohasset goalie Stephan Parnell looks back to make sure Bulldog Evan Harrison's (#3) second period goal did indeed find twine.

Bulldogs bite Skippers

"Instead of playing good, smart hockey, we have to play macho games and take a dumb retaliation penalty. It's not just this case. We've done that before this season. That's stupid, selfish hockey."

The Skippers out-shot the Bulldogs 40-18 for the game, but also committed five more penalties (9-5), continuing a troublesome season long bent toward chippiness.

"Rockland played disciplined hockey and we didn't; it's that simple," continued Virga, whose team fell back to the magic .500 mark (3-3-3) with the loss. "We just gave away points because of that, and we can't afford to give anything away at this point. We've got 11 games left and we need 11 points to make the playoffs."

The host Bulldogs gametying tally came in remarkably similar fashion 2:52 before the gamewinner when defenseman Tim Dunn kept the puck in at the right point and fed across to O'Brien on the edge of the left circle for a quick one-timer that beat Parnell high on the short side.

"This win not only helps our playoff hopes, but it should be a big confidence booster," noted Rockland coach Jim Cassagrande, whose team now stands at 5-6-1 with the win. "We were missing a couple of key players, but we had some guys step up big to help us get this win to help into key positions."

O'Brien, who netted the two goals and set up the gamewinner, was just one of those guys. The senior was just recently moved up from defense to forward by Cassagrande in the hopes of giving the offense a bit more bite.

How's that working out for you, coach?

"Pretty good," replied Cassagrande with a big smile. "And the other half of that move is that we've been able to move (junior) Brian Stewart into the defensive rotation, and he played real well today too."

Rockland's real hero of the game, though, might have been goaltender Chris Garofalo. The senior captain turned back 37 shots in all. He was particularly immense in the third period, when he turned back all 12 Skippers shots, including a couple of true testers.

"We hung Chris out to dry a couple of times, but he kept us in it," said Cassagrande, who is in his third year as the Bulldogs head bench-walker. " He's had a couple of real big efforts lately to keep us in this playoff hunt, including a 50 save effort last week against Latin Academy."

Though most of the early action was in Cohasset's offensive end, Rockland was able to get on the board first with 1:41 to go in the opening frame when O'Brien managed to poke a puck away 30 feet from the Rockland goal and quickly split the two Cohasset pointmen to walk in on Parnell and roof it over his stick-side shoulder.

However, Cohasset would bounce right back with two goals 20 seconds apart before the first period horn would sound.

Returning South Shore League all-star Mike Devine tied the game with 1:04 showing on the clock when he took a clearing pass from sophomore defenseman Brandon Smith just over his blue line and flew into Rockland's end to beat Garofalo with a well placed wrister from the right dot into the top far corner.

20 seconds later, the Skippers had their first lead of the game, as senior Rob Carpenter broke over Rockland's blue line and feathered a soft pass to sophomore linemate Mark Bouchard, who did a great job of turning on the jets and stretching full out with one hand to tip it from six feet out just over the shoulder of the sliding Garofalo.

Rockland would answer back with 3:48 to play in the second when Dionne stripped a Cohasset defenseman at the Rockland blue line and fed ahead to sophomore Evan Harrison, who then walked in on Parnell and flipped the puck over his glove hand.

However, yet another late goal would put Cohasset back on top to close out the second. Just after hopping out of the penalty box, Devine jumped into a Cohasset rush and threw a big check behind the Rockland net to steal the puck and center to Ted Straughn for the quick stuff through Garofalo's pads, making it a 3-2 game with 29 seconds to go in the second.

Garofalo would shut the door from there, though, and several other of the players Cassagrande looks to for big things would step up to deliver the much needed win.

Hockey Notes

The Skippers had topped the all-important .500 mark for the first time since winning the season opener, on Wednesday in Bridgewater, with a dramatic 5-4 win over SSL rival Carver.

Junior captain Ted Straughn broke a 4-4 tie with three minutes remaining, but the visiting Skippers were forced to kill a 5-on-3 power play for 55 seconds inside the final two minutes that became a 6-on-3 when the hosts puled their goalie.

Sophomore Mark Bouchard netted his first career hat trick in a game that saw the Skippers outshoot Carver 35-11.

Bouchard opened the scoring, with assists going to linemates Rob Carpenter and Straughn. Carver scored the next two, but senior captain Mike Rasmussen finished on an end-to-end rush, with assists going to linemates Mike Devine and Matt O'Connell, to make it a 2-2 at the first break.

Bouchard completed the hat trick in the second period sandwiched around a Carver tally to make it a 4-3 game after two.

Crusaders star Chris Spicer finished off his fourth hat trick of the year early in the final frame to tie the game back up at 4-4, setting the stage for Straughn's second huge late game tally in as many games. A week ago this past Saturday, the hard-working junior captain forced a 5-5 tie with Harwich when he punched home a shorthanded goal with 55 seconds to play.

Next up

The Skippers will get a chance at revenge against the Bulldogs tomorrow night on their home Pilgrim Arena ice (6:50 p.m. start). The locals were also looking for a pound of flesh last night when they hosted Norwell, who bested them 5-0 the first time around. South Shore League leading Abington/East Bridgewater (8-2-2) is on the slate for Saturday afternoon (1:50 p.m. at Pilgrim) with Hull to follow Wednesday night at Pilgrim (5:40 p.m. puck drop).

SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Scituate-Cohasset Swim Team enjoyed its best meet of the year to date versus Sharon High School last Friday, breaking 11 team records.

It was clear to Coach Jami Kearney that the team was well-prepared and fired up for a great meet last week.

"Each day following practice, I have had to create more difficult and challenging practices than I ever have in my experience with this team," said Leary. "The kids are really surmounting my expectations, and it's such a great feeling knowing that they've improved."

Assistant Coach Terry Duggan strongly agreed with Kearney, and she laughed: "I know that it has been a good practice or meet when I see the swimmers getting out of the pool red-faced and tired, but are still laughing with each other on the bus ride home."

The swimmer who improved her times by the most on Friday was Scituate High School sophomore, Maura Whalen. Whalen, a new student at SHS, has been having an outstanding season. Not only did she improve both of her individual events, the 200 yard Freestyle and the 500 yard Freestyle, but qualified for the postseason League Sectionals Meet in each. Whalen, having never previously swam the 200 this year, was quite impressive, beating the team's record by 15 seconds. In her favorite event, the 500, she improved her own time by a miraculous 13 seconds, earning herself a spot to compete against the best 500ers on the South Shore.

Another swimmer who has a great chance to qualify for the Sectionals meet is SHS sophomore James Smith. Smith has been swimming competitively for several years, and has been an important asset to the Sci-Cohs both this year and last. Undefeated in his 100-yard Breaststroke and with a 3-1 record in his 100-yard Backstroke, James has sparked the team's enthusiasm with his exciting races.

This week will be a challenging and exhausting one for the Scituate swimmers. They will be taking their midterm exams at school. However, the Cohasset swimmers will certainly be ready to psyche them up on Friday for their meet versus Coyle Cassidy High School.

final tune-up for the South Sectional championships, which will be held on Feb. 16 at Foxborough High.

Eight teams qualify for sectionals, including all league champions, so, assuming the Nor-Cohs hang on, they're in. The top two placers advance from sectionals to the state championships, to be held at Shrewsbury High on Feb. 21. There will also be two wild card teams chosen, based on score, from the three Eastern Mass. Sectional meets (South, North and East/Central).

Girls travel basketball report

Despite the frigid temperatures outdoors, the four Cohasset girls travel basketball teams for Grades 5-8 in the Old Colony League were on fire inside the cozy confines of the Cohasset High gym Sunday, as all four squads defeated their visitors from Whitman.

The fifth grade team bounced back from their first loss of the season last week at Hull (when they were playing with a depleted squad) with a 22-16 victory over Whitman. For the third time in five games, the Fledgling Fifthers worked their opening tap play to perfection -- Carly Haggerty to Lindsey Davis to Emma Musto -- to get on the board quickly and never looked back. Thanks to the combination of some fine outside shooting by Kate French (six points on the game) and inside work by Haggerty and Musto (who finished with eight points apiece), the Blue and White grabbed a 16-8 lead at the half which they extended to 20-8 early on in the second half.

Although the Cohasset offense went cold for the remainder of the game, their defense proved more than enough to withstand a late Whitman rally. Haggerty, Davis, Musto, and Carly Martin rejected numerous Whitman shots, while forwards French, Jen Curley, Colby Smalzel, and Logan Pratt each contributed strong rebounding. The backcourt tandems of Rachel Fredey, Emma Quigley, Olivia Murphy, and Amy Costa also did their share in the victory, turning in their collectively best game of the season in terms of assists and reduced turnovers as the Blue and White raised their record to 4-1.

The 6th grade girls kept their undefeated record (5-0) intact with a 25-16 triumph over their Whitman counterparts in a hard-fought and physical game. Erin Fontaine (eight points) started things off for Cohasset by draining several outside shots. Strong efforts under the boards by Meredith Kelly (six points) and Lindsay Allard (seven points) limited Whitman from getting second chance opportunities. Still, capitalizing on a series of strong defensive plays late in the half, Whitman managed to take a 13-12 lead at the intermission.

Cohasset came out strong in the second half behind steals by Mimi Mahoney (four points) and defensive rebounding by Isabelle Franklin. Playing aggressive defense, Olivia Sullivan tied up the ball and turned possessions over to Cohasset. Megan Leong and Lucy O'Keefe kept pressure on the Whitman offense, while good inside passes sparked scoring by Kelly and Allard. While putting 13-second half points on the board, Cohasset was able to hold Whitman to just three points for the 25-16 finale.

Last week, the Super Sixers defeated previously unbeaten Hull in a competitive 27-12 contest. Cohasset got on the board quickly with Tori Lehr hitting a jumper off a lead pass from Isabelle Franklin. Playing a tight zone, the Hull squad kept Cohasset's inside game to a minimum, but the shooting of Samantha Crough (seven points, including a three pointer) and Tori Lehr (five points) kept Cohasset on top throughout the first half.

With guards Mimi Mahoney, Erin Fontaine and Lucy O'Keefe setting up the offense, many players contributed to Cohasset's high scoring second half against Hull, including Allard (seven points) and Lucy Noble, Chelsea Silvia, Franklin, and Erin Fontaine, each of whom had two points. Amy Meikleham, Olivia Sullivan, and Taryn Donohue adjusted quickly to the pace and contributed to the team's success.

The seventh graders also remained undefeated (5-0) with a 24-16 triumph over previously undefeated Whitman in a very physical contest. Carly Salerno and Gabriela Flibotte paced the Scintillating Sevens with 12 and 10 points respectively. The week before, the seventh graders topped Hull, 40-34, in a shootout. Salerno and Flibotte each scored 17 points, while Natalie Beukers turned in a stellar effort coming off the bench.

The eight grade squad saved the most exciting game of the day for last, as they rallied to overtake Whitman in the final three minutes for a 24-18 victory. The triumph marked a return to the winning track for Coach Chris Haggerty's squad, which had dropped its first game of the season to Hull last week by a slim 21-20 margin.

All four of the girls teams will draw center court attention at the CHS gym this Sunday when they entertain Hingham. Tap-off for the fifth graders starts at 1 p.m., followed by the other three teams at 2, 3, and 4. Come on up to CHS and root on the local girls – the game are fast- paced and a lot of fun to watch!

SKI TEAM REPORT

The Cohasset High School Ski Team is in third place for the boys and fourth place for the girls in the small school division. With one race left it remains to be seen if they can overtake such powerhouses as Westwood and Dover Sherborn. Results have varied as the Slalom course on January 20th brought some challenging conditions. Many of the top skiers from all the schools failed to finish the course. Andrew Busk earned 22 points in that race and for the girls, Jessie Guild and Kathryn Whorisky came up with a total of 32 points.

The team did better as a whole on Monday, January 26th at Blue Hills with a GS course more familiar to most of the racers. Jessie Guild and Kathryn Whorisky finished 27th and 29th and earned 34 points. Andrew and Prescott Busk finished 21st and 25th with a total of 44 points. In the small school individual standings, Andrew Busk ranks 3rd, Prescott Busk 7th and Reed Dickerson, 15th. For the girls, Jessie Guild is ranked 8th and Katherine Whorisky 10th. Notable performances for Sophomores Marissa Evans, Michelle Lemaire and Emille Shea and Dan Sullivan bode well for the team's future.

In this time of budget cuts it is worthy of mention that the Ski Team is funded privately and receives no funding from the school.

School Committee finds revenue options limited

Hike in athletic fees is on the table

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset Public Schools are in dire need of money, the School Committee says. So much so that the School Committee is looking at advertising on school buses and charging activities' fees – which could provide some revenue, but not enough.

Supt. Edward Malvey said Braintree has its fleet of buses showcasing ads for Bertucci's. Malvey said that school system generates roughly $30,000 a year by having 25 buses with advertisements on their sides. However, Cohasset is only running five buses, one special education van, and a minibus.

"The revenue is driven by the number of buses," said Committee member Mark DeGiacomo, meaning while $30,000 divided by 25 buses would seemingly point to $1,200 generated by each bus, there would not be the same effect in Cohasset.

Malvey said when Bertucci's heard the Braintree schools were thinking of advertising on their buses the company approached them with the idea. However, School Committee Chairman Rick Flynn said he didn't think the idea would translate as well in a small town like Cohasset, which has such a small fleet which doesn't cover as much area. DeGiacomo agreed and said the possibility of generating revenue through advertising on school buses isn't going to be the answer to the budget crisis.

"It doesn't sound like we should plug these numbers into the budget," said DeGiacomo.

Other considerations the schools have begun to take a look at are whether fees should be increased for those who play sports, and whether those who participate in non-athletic activities should be charged as well.

Athletic Director Ronald Ford prepared a user's fee report, which was broken down into middle school and high school athletics. Ford said the schools currently charge $75 per sport for the first and second sport each student plays in a school year, and $50 if a student plays a third sport in the spring. There are roughly 20 students participating in a third sport, which reduces the fees collected in the spring by roughly $500.

Ford estimated that by raising user fees from $75 to $100 per student, the net increased income would be $10,500, which could be added to the budget. School Committee members thought that figure was the only option to really consider, as raising fees any higher could limit the participants.

"You're going to have teams with only the kids whose parents can afford it," said DeGiacomo. Member Pat Martin added some parents have more children playing sports than others, and the increase will affect them even more.

As far as middle school athletics is concerned, the School Committee has decided to end the program as it currently stands, and offer intramural sports instead. Currently, many public schools on the South Shore do not offer interscholastic sports for middle school students. Hull is the closest town Cohasset is able to play against, but Cohasset has also been playing against Carver, Wareham, and other schools on Cape Cod – which requires travel. Private schools Catholic Memorial, Thayer Academy and Derby Academy have interscholastic programs as well, and Cohasset plays all three.

However, by offering intramural sports to middle school students, fees would be charged only to keep the program going. School Committee members estimated the final charge for next year, should interscholastic sports continue, could be two and a half times the cost of switching to intramural.

Cohasset Middle High School Principal Michael Jones prepared projected revenue figures for student activities which included figures for charging both $75 and $100 fees. However, because some school activities are volunteer organizations which fall under the category of an "activity," where to draw the line in terms of charging fees can be a problem.

There are 16 activities in which students can participate, including the math and debate teams, band, peer leaders, the high school newspaper, and the yearbook. Often times, students are working really hard on a project that benefits the entire school, and Jones said many clubs meet at no cost to the school. If fees are imposed, it may affect participation in the activities, which are in many cases volunteer efforts. After Jones' presentation, School Committee members agreed that increasing fees for students participating in activities, which currently do not charge a fee, is not the way to go about generating revenue.

"We're not trying to make money off the poor kid working his tail off on the yearbook," said Flynn.

The School Committee agreed that if there is no charge to offset, such as a stipend for a group leader, students will not be charged a fee.

"It's too bad that it's even come to this. This is not where we want to go," said Vice Chairman Chartis Tebbetts.

dent program and a lesser quality product is going to be delivered," said member Pat Martin. "When you cut three teachers, you're affecting a product."

Other recommended reductions to the budget include ending the middle school athletics program as it currently stands, and adding a new program of intramural sports that will be self-sufficient in terms of funding (see related story).

The position of business manager is going to be cut from a full-time position with a salary of $85,356 to a half-time position. The position of curriculum coordinator is also going to be cut in half, but with a half-time administrator being added to the middle school, "It's a wash," said member Rick Shea. The proposed budget will also include cutting the Director of Physical Education and Health to the tune of $85,322.

There will also be no stipends for the head custodians in this budget, which will save the schools $15,288. However, Tebbetts said it seems very unfair in light of recent help the custodians have provided the schools. With pipes bursting in the middle of the night and custodians always there to help out, she said they deserve some compensation. "I think we need to consider the custodians if they're going to be called in the middle of the night to put their fingers in the dike," Tebbetts said.

Then Supt. Edward Malvey brought up the question of whether to stick with the outsourcing cleaning, or bring cleaning duties back in-house if it could save the schools money. "It's not cheaper. Last year some people thought it would be, but it's not," he said.

Member Mark DeGiacomo said he wouldn't mind looking into bringing the program back in-house, but he doesn't think anything should be changed just yet. Shea agreed and said he doesn't think the schools should give up on the program after only six months. Due to the construction projects at the schools, "It's still not a typical year," noted Tebbetts.

Flynn said during a meeting with Haddad, the issue of changing insurance for the union employees came up again. By increasing the insurance co-pay from $5 to $15, the town could save roughly $100,000. However, that $100,000 would be a gross total, as some of that money would have to be given back as part of the negotiation process.

"A lot of unions have voted to go along with the charge, some no," Flynn said, adding at this point, "Every dollar may matter."

"This is what we'll present at the open budget hearing," said Tebbetts, adding if the town's residents don't like it, she would love to hear their input. "They can't say we can't have an override if the town supports it."

Estate planning for lasting legacy

At 7:30 p.m. on Sunday, Feb. 8, Thomas C. Rogerson will speak at St. Stephen's Church, 16 Highland Ave on "The Family Wealth Paradigm: Integrating Family Values with Estate Planning for a Lasting Legacy."

Studies show that the families that preserve wealth the best, pay as much attention to values and vision as to money and taxes. The following important questions will be addressed:

- What will your children do with your inheritance?
- What will your inheritance do to them?
- Will your wealth last beyond your children?
- Will your children and grandchildren embrace the values most important to you?
- Will your savings foster independence or dependence?
- Are you taking charge of your legacy or will the government make those decisions for you?

Using case studies from his extensive experience with individuals and charities across the country, Rogerson will demonstrate how to join family goals and charitable desires with tax-wise planning and investing to create a unique wealth management plan for your family.

Rogerson speaks to individuals, business owners, and board members of universities, hospitals and charitable organizations throughout the country. His audiences include: Harvard University, Yale University, The Nature Conservancy, Lihcoln Center, The Museum of Modern Art, the New York Botanical Garden, the Young Presidents Organization and the World Presidents Organization, as well as many others. He also worked with leading charities and professional firms to educate and motivate their employees and clients on advanced planning strategies. His unique style combines humor and real-life examples, and emphasizes values, virtues and motivation as well as financial considerations.

Cuffs come off as police testimony starts

Interestingly, Selectman McMorris' marathon testimony did not address any of the charges, but rather an alleged pattern of behavior by the two officers that was brought to her attention through former Officer Brian Curran, the police chief's son-in-law.

Although Curran, who quit the department in September, has not appeared as a witness, McMorris said his letter of resignation came as a surprise. She had thought he was happy being a police officer and had done a great job. In the letter, Curran apparently made scathing accusations about Quigley and McLean. McMorris said in an exit interview, Curran expressed concerns to her that the officers were making false arrests following minor traffic violations in order to get overtime when called to court and he wanted no part of it. He said he no longer wanted to work in a "hostile environment."

On cross-examination, the officers' attorney, Doug Louison, put McMorris on the "hot seat", questioning her background (McMorris is a non-practicing lawyer) and knowledge of criminal law and police procedures. He vehemently objected to the line of questioning by Peter Berry, the town's attorney, stating the focus of the hearing should be on the specific charges and not on "everything that had ever happened" in Cohasset. He said McMorris' testimony amounted to hearsay and was prejudicial and unrelated to the charges.

Haddad allowed Berry — who said the testimony would explain what was going on in the minds of the selectmen, police chief and town manager — to continue. Berry noted the accused officers have said they'd been "railroaded" and he said McMorris' testimony would prove that not to be the case.

"The town welcomes the opportunity to have a public hearing on the who, what, when, where, why and how are the true facts underlying why the town took action," Berry said.

After hearing Curran's concerns, McMorris had several meetings with Haddad and Chief Robert Jackson, as well as discussing the allegations of unfair treatment by Quigley and McLean. She noted that Gerd Ordelheide, owner of the Red Lion Inn, had penned letters to selectmen highly critical of Quigley. McMorris said all complaints are investigated by the selectmen's office and in this case, resulted in discussions with Town Counsel, which hired a private investigator to investigate the officers.

She described Chief Jackson as having the same suspicions about Quigley and McLean as Curran, and as being worried about the safety of his family who might be facing retaliation from the officers. She said she talked Jackson, whom she described as an excellent police chief, out of resigning.

But Louison suggested both the chief and his son-in-law may have had the proverbial "ax to grind." He pointed out Quigley had arrested the chief's son, Keith Jackson, who was also facing domestic violence charges that were handled by Quigley last summer. He also noted that after Curran pulled a gun on Quigley (during a counseling session over allegations about Curran's behavior at the station), he was placed on 30 days paid administrative leave.

Louison questioned why she would give such credence to Curran, who is her neighbor, but had been with the department about two years when Quigley had been on the force for more than eight years. He also noted Ordelheide might be retaliating against Quigley, who had complained about liquor license violations at the Red Lion Inn that resulted in a terse warning letter to Ordelheide signed by McMorris.

It was also brought out the chief issued two separate written orders for officers to pay particular attention to public drinking, noise and disturbances occurring at the Red Lion Inn.

McMorris said things reached a head following the arrest of the chief's son, Keith Jackson, outside the Legion Hall Oct. 11, and it was decided to best protect the public by putting the officers on leave pending an investigation.

McMorris said the chief provided upwards of 100 copies of Quigley's arrest reports to John DiNatale, the private investigator. She also read them over to get a picture of what was going on in town, and had sleepless nights thinking about the faces of teenagers who had been arrested, handcuffed, booked and photographed. At one point, she charged the officers had purposely been seeking out young girls to arrest.

That accusation brought Louison, who has a flamboyant personality, out of his seat in protest. "Why don't you ask why they (teens) were out drinking?" he said, saying the proceeding should have some modicum of fairness.

McMorris said she talked with judges, lawyers and prosecutors to get a sense of how Cohasset compared to what was going on in other communities. But Louison noted she did not ask the District Attorney, who has jurisdiction over these matters, for an opinion.

Louison read a letter commending Quigley's work with middle-high school children from teacher Jack Buckley and another commendation from the Chief complementing his work establishing a student police academy.

After a 45-minute lunch break, Officer Frank Yannizzi testified about a Sept. 7, 2003 arrest involving three youths and what his observations were about the search procedures used by Quigley and McLean. Berry appeared to be alluding to the fact Quigley may have not had probable cause for the arrests and both officers may have "frisked" the teens, when they shouldn't have. Yannizzi was called to the scene as back up. But Louison produced a global department email from Det. Garrett Hunt and Officer Christy Tarantino sent sometime earlier warning officers that one of the youths in question might have a gun in his possession, which expands police authority.

The youths were also known to police. In fact even Yannizzi had arrested one of these youths on a prior occasion on Elm Street. The Sept. 7 incident took place outside Tedeschi's at about 11:15 p.m. when Quigley observed youths coming and going from the store, which was supposed to close at 11 p.m.

Rod & Gun Club

James Dean, general manager of the Red Lion Inn, categorically stated he saw both McLean and Quigley drinking beer at the Rod & Gun Club last May. Although Louison tripped him up on parts of his testimony including what the officers were wearing, Dean, who is also a member of the club, stuck to his guns and said, "I saw what I saw."

But Officer Rick Grassie's testimony conflicted with Dean's. Grassie stated McLean did have some beer along with Officer John Small, but that Quigley had returned to duty and wasn't there. The question of whether McLean was actually "on duty" was raised.

Officers who are not on regular duty when training is conducted are paid a minimum of four hours overtime, even though the training may not last the full four hours. That is also a common practice with details and court appearances. McLean was not on duty that day; so it is not clear if having beer following training at the Rod & Gun Club is in fact drinking on duty, when he could have just as easily gone home to have the beer. Grassie said, however, he didn't approve of the drinking "because guns and alcohol don't mix."

Grassie is not McLean's supervisor, so he did not object. But on cross-examination, Louison pointed out Grassie had had a beer at a restaurant following weapons training in Boston last summer; he was in uniform and wearing his gun at the time. Grassie recently served a two-day suspension without pay over that incident. Louison asked if Grassie had been ordered to submit to psychological and physical examinations to determine his fitness for duty, as McLean and Quigley had, and Grassie said no. Small also served two days without pay for drinking at the Rod & Gun Club.

In addition to today, further hearings are scheduled for 9 a.m. Thurs., Feb. 5; 9 a.m., Monday, Feb. 9 and 9 a.m. Thurs. Feb. 12.

Not an environmentally friendly place

NATURAL VIEW

JIM SHIPSKY

Last week's Mariner contained an article about recent work done on the dam at the Aaron River Reservoir. There were before and after pictures. The before picture showed a charming and inviting path bordered by lush greenery, yellow flowers, shrubs and slender young saplings. Having walked there frequently, I know there would have been birds, bees, butterflies, and other wildlife. The after picture showed the same area stripped bare. Every living thing was gone, scalped down to ground zero. The caption claimed this was somehow an improvement. I found it utterly mind-boggling! The idea that destroying every living bit of Nature was a good thing made me feel sick. If any readers share this feeling I'd love to hear from you.

I understand how large tree roots can eventually threaten the stability of an earthen dam. At the northwest end of the dam there is a sort of peninsula that extends out into the water. It is solid granite. No tree roots can do any harm there. It had been a lovely little spot, inviting one to come closer and touch the water. Now it too has been scalped bare. What a tragic loss to all Cohasset residents.

Previous issues of the Mariner have carried stories about the huge cost over-runs on the heat and electricity bills at the recently renovated Deer Hill and Middle-Senior High School. I have to tell you a sad story about this. When plans were announced to undertake these projects, I called the chair of the School Board to ask if the projects would be "green". That is, would they take into account indoor air quality, energy efficiency, use of renewable energy, use of renewable materials, daylighting, and airtight construction. He said he didn't know, that I should call the chair of the building committee. I did. He said, "What is green?"

Eventually, after calling the project manager, I ended up with the project architect, and asked him, "Will the projects be green?" He replied, "No. We don't do green. If Cohasset wanted green buildings, they should have hired a green architect." It felt like a dead-end to me, and I gave up, thinking about all the financial assistance for building green schools, available from the Massachusetts Technology Collaborative, that Cohasset was ignoring. We could have had schools that produced their own heat, rather than burning fossil fuels at double the rate of the old buildings. What will it take to wake up the powers that be in Cohasset to the energy crisis we all face? To the wonderful potential of sustainability and renewable energy? Previous issues of the Mariner have also carried stories about the proposed development of the Cook estate. I was recently speaking with Sandy Thomas of the North East Sustainable Energy Association www.nesea.org. It seems Jane Cook was an avid environmentalist, and funded a foundation to make grants to worthy environmental projects. NESEA is applying to Jane's foundation for such a grant. Sandy wanted to know if I, as a Cohasset resident, had any inside information about Jane Cook or her estate. I had to say, "Yes, Cohasset plans to tear down her house, build an upscale senior enclave on her property, and destroy nine acres of adjacent Town woodland to build so-called affordable senior apartments. I don't imagine Jane would be too happy about it."

Is the Patriot Act un-American?

Hingham forum draws a crowd

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

Does the 123-page U.S.A. Patriot Act make us safer?

That was the topic at a discussion last week about the law and its ramifications for Americans.

"We expect differing opinions will be expressed, and we ask that you listen to them respectfully," said South Shore Peace Forum member Shirley Brown. "Maybe we'll even find some common ground." The Patriot Act, which expires in late 2005, was enacted as a measure to combat terrorism following the events of Sept. 11.

More than 70 people attended the event at the Hingham Public Library, which featured two speakers from the Boston-based Jewish Alliance for Law and Social Action (JALSA), an organization working to protect human rights. Their talks were followed by an open discussion period.

The program was sponsored by Congregation Sha'aray Shalom of Hingham, the Study/Action Group of Old Ship Church, and the South Shore Peace Forum. The Peace Forum is a grass-roots organization of area citizens meeting since the first Gulf War. The group promotes peaceful and nonviolent solutions to conflicts at home and abroad. A follow-up meeting will be held this Spring. For further information about the Peace Forum, call (781) 749-9358.

While some say the search, seizure, and detention provisions of the Patriot Act are necessary to combat terrorism, others feel the law is intrusive, a threat to their civil liberties, and constitutes an erosion of First Amendment rights.

Joel Z. Eigerman and Allan Roth of JALSA presented their opinions about the Patriot Act before the large gathering. They hold the view that historically, curtailing civil rights has not brought the nation greater safety, and will not now.

"Our government has an unfortunate history of cutting back on the Constitution when we feel threatened, from the Civil War to the internment of the Japanese," Eigerman said. "We usually feel bad about it afterwards and sometimes make reparations, but it's hard to see how these incursions have made us more secure. . . . The September 11 terrorists were well trained. Do we think the Patriot Act will stop people like that?" He further noted that while some sharing of information could be "salubrious," in other cases the results are "frightening."

Not everyone agrees with their concerns. In a telephone interview, Pat Casey, who attended the talk, said the purpose of the Patriot Act is to track down and find terrorists. "Some think the law provides too much power to the government, although the Act received overwhelming support in the House and Senate by both parties," he said. "I think there is a sense within people opposed to the law that nothing should be done, but I believe that action is better than inaction. As Americans we're just as subject to attack whether we support the Patriot Act or not."

Others held a different view. "Someone took the beautiful word 'patriot' and applied it for their own use. People are people, American or non-American, and no human being deserves to be treated this way," one participant said, referring to numerous reported cases of indefinite detention of non-citizens without due process. "You don't lock people up without due process, even if we didn't have a Constitution. They can do the same damn thing to every one of us."

Carrying his point further, he said, "I'm concerned about the future. I don't want my grandchildren to live in a gilded cage, but the free country I grew up in seems to be going away fast."

The question of what Hingham Public Library can do to protect patrons' library habits was raised, referring to reports that the FBI is now in a position to monitor Internet use and book store purchases and check library records in the search for terrorists.

Library Director Dennis Corcoran was on-hand to address that issue. "We've made every effort to reduce the retention time for library records to about a month, keeping only what we need. Anything less than that would make doing business difficult," he said, noting that the library web page details its privacy policy. "Librarians have been at the forefront of trying to protect patron rights, but there are risks. If the government wants information from a library, the government can get it, and you'll never know they've obtained it."

While Eigerman believes widespread implementation of the right to check library records isn't likely, some, including Hingham resident June Freedman are concerned. "If checking out certain books is deemed so offensive, censorship could be one step away."

Roth's sense, though, is that the government "will go after people reading books like 'Making Atomic Bombs for Dummies.'"

Eigerman suggested that "better education of Americans about our real history" is needed, although he considers that path a "long and stony" one. "We need to allow students to realize there are two sides without sacrificing their patriotism."

Casey holds a different view. "That gives the sense that solving the problem involves changing who we are and the perception that we're the bad imperial United States rather than catching [the terrorists]," he said. "It makes it look as though we're the bad guy. If we're such a big bad imperial power, why are people risking their life and limb to come here? We're a freedom loving country."

Roth called this a "time of national emergency," adding that some detainees held under questionable circumstances have been teenagers. "If they ever get out of prison, we could have some nascent terrorists," he said. "I suggest holding hearings to find out why a person has been imprisoned and let them have council, as has been done in the past. The only real hope is the court system, which is not a happy prospect."

The issue is complex.

"What is the answer? I don't know," said Casey. "Have we done bad things like everyone else? Yes. This isn't and never will be a utopia. But there is something about this country that is good, and there is no equal to what we have. It's the longest standing constitutional democracy in world history."

Roth said keeping the United States safe from another terrorist attack is "impossible. We are all at risk. We're all mortal."

The Rev. Kenneth Read-Brown of Old Ship Church, who led the discussion, noted, "In addition to necessary security measures, it seems to me that our safety as a nation could also be enhanced if we were seen by others around the world as more dedicated to helping the poor and creating a world of greater peace, justice, and cooperation among the community of nations."

The Hingham Public Library is packed with citizens concerned about the effect the Patriot Act has on civil liberties.

About the USA Patriot Act:

USA PATRIOT Act, or USAPA introduced a plethora of legislative changes which significantly increased the surveillance and investigative powers of law enforcement agencies in the United States. The Act did not, however, provide for the system of checks and balances that traditionally safeguards civil liberties in the face of such legislation.

Legislative proposals in response to the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001 were introduced less than a week after the attacks. President Bush signed the final bill, the USA PATRIOT Act, into law on October 26, 2001. Though the Act made significant amendments to over 15 important statutes, it was introduced with great haste and passed with little debate, and without a House, Senate, or conference report. As a result, it lacks background legislative history that often retrospectively provides necessary statutory interpretation

The USA PATRIOT Act introduced sweeping changes to U.S. law, including amendments to:

- Wiretap Statute (Title III).
- Electronic Communications Privacy Act .
- Computer Fraud and Abuse Act.
- Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act.
- Family Education Rights and Privacy Act.
- Pen Register and Trap and Trace Statute.
- Money Laundering Act.
- Immigration and Nationality Act.
- Money Laundering Control Act.
- Bank Secrecy Act.
- Right to Financial Privacy Act.
- Fair Credit Reporting Act.

Patriot Act has its backers and detractors

Is the Patriot Act good? It depends who you ask.

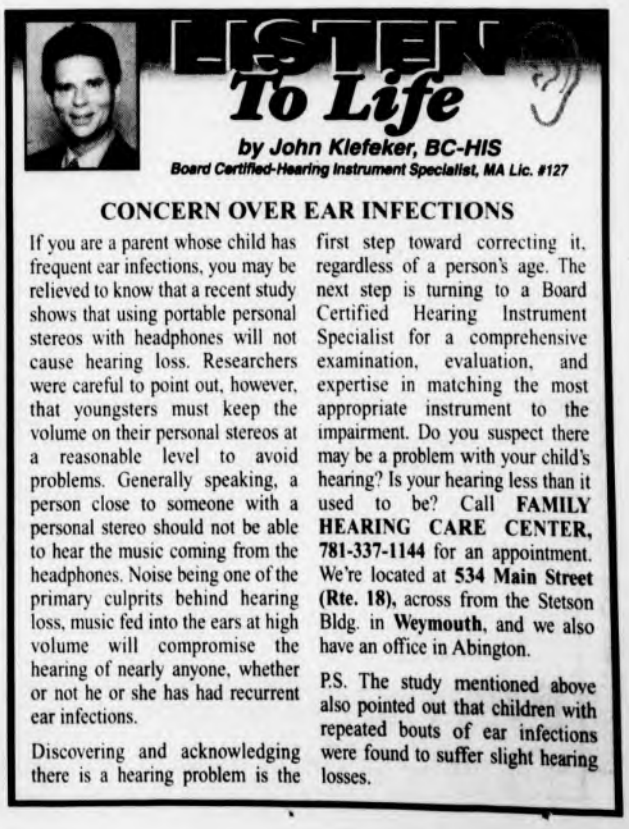
Two weeks ago while in the post office, I noticed an invitation to meet at the Hingham Public Library to discuss the problems with the Patriot Act. "The event was sponsored by South Shore Peace Forum, The Study/ Action committee of The Old Ship Church and Congregation Sha' Aray Shalom.

The following is a statement from the Department of Justice:

"The Department of Justice's first priority is to prevent future terrorist attacks. Since its passage following the September 11th attacks, the Patriot Act has played a key part — and often a leading roll — in a number of successful operations to protect innocent Americans from the deadly plans of terrorists dedicated to destroying America and our way of life. While the results have been important, in passing the Patriot Act, Congress provided for only modest, incremental changes in the law. Congress simply took existing legal principles and retrofitted them to preserve the lives and liberty of the American people from the challenges posed by a global terrorist network. The government's success in preventing another catastrophic attack on the American homeland since 9-11, would have been much more difficult, if not impossible, without the USA PATRIOT Act. The authorities Congress provided have substantially enhanced our abilities to prevent, investigate, and prosecute acts of terror."

What I took away from the meeting was the people in opposition of the Patriot Act brush off concerns about being attacked by terrorists as easily as the people in favor of the Patriot Act brush off the concerns of being brought in for questioning for the books they check out at the Hingham Public Library.

There are downsides to both positions and both sides tend to believe that their "downside" is more significant. Opposing the Act could potentially hinder the prevention of the next terror attack and supporting the Act could lead to a potential erosion of our personal rights under the constitution.



In my opinion, the approach to addressing the issue of terrorism has more to do with philosophy than party affiliation. There are democrats in favor of the current approach towards the war on terror and republicans opposed. For now we can only speculate what the majority of people think however we will have to wait until November to know for sure.

I believe the current administration is doing the best it can and I am in favor of taking the necessary steps to deter and disrupt those who want to destroy America and kill Americans. I also believe that there are people living among us who are awaiting orders to strike again. Can we stop the terrorists without dramatically changing our way of life? Working together, I believe we can.

The Boston/South Shore-area band is offering a possible sneak preview of big things to come right in its own backyard when it plays one of its first full-stage spectacle gigs at Plymouth Memorial Hall this Friday, Jan. 30 at 7:30 p.m. The show is presented by Scott Esposito, owner of Jamie's Pub in Marshfield.

Pink Voyd is not your average tribute act. Band member and keyboardist Dan Fisher, of Plymouth, can boast credentials of having built synth patches used by the original Floyd on their Momentary Lapse of Reason tour; the multimedia tribute stage show is delivered by a multi-talented crew that includes two actual former Floyd personnel; and the band was chosen to host last year's official 30th Anniversary CD & DVD release party of the classic Dark Side of the Moon album.Complementing all the performance paraphernalia are the four talented, multi-instrumentalist singer/musicians who step into the respective original Floyd member roles and know the classic band's repertoire inside out. Along with Fisher, the Voyd members include guitarist/saxophonist Walter Stickle, bassist John Pitigolo and drummer/percussionist Tony "The Hammer" Caliendo.

For more information on Saturday's show, call Plymouth Memorial Hall at 508 747-0234 or visit the PinkVoyd Web site at www.pinkvoyd.com <http://www.pinkvoyd.com>.

Two sides face off in Cohasset's cop case

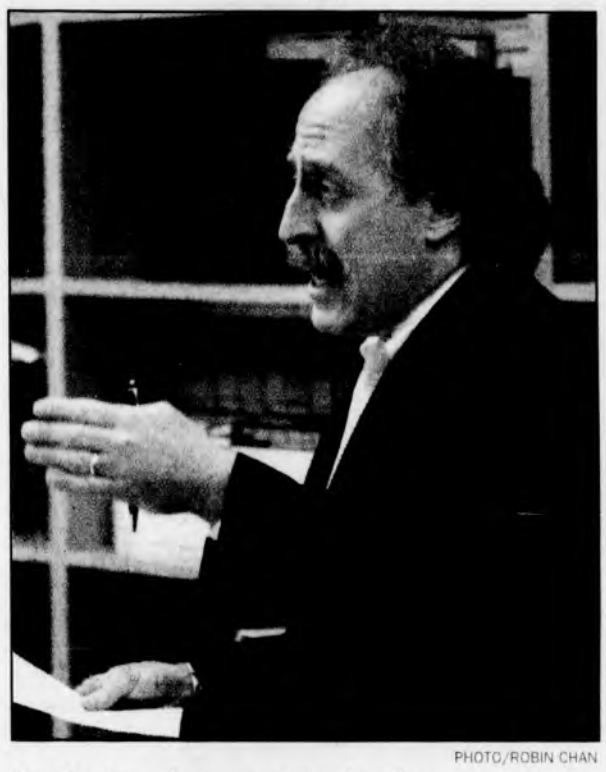
Town Counsel Paul Berry presents town's charges against Officer James McLean and Sgt. William Quigley.

Hearing resumes Monday at 9 a.m.

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

No one argues that Sgt. William Quigley is a motivated police officer, who was interested in climbing the ladder at the department.

In fact over the course of his more than eight years in Cohasset — the last 2-1/2 of which have been as commander of the 4 p.m. to midnight shift — he's consistently made the most arrests, according to testimony at last week's disciplinary hearing at Town Hall.



But the town's attorney, Peter Berry, claims that ambition coupled with problems over proposed changes in rules and regulations in the department may have led to a pattern of misconduct resulting in allegations of unlawful arrests that are now the subject of ongoing hearings that also involve Officer James McLean.

Yet Douglas Louison, the officers' attorney, says the case against Quigley isn't about the sergeant's desire to get ahead but retaliation by the police chief for Quigley's arrest of his son outside the Legion Hall last October and his seeking an arrest warrant for alleged domestic violence incidents last July that also involved the chief's son. The chief's involvement in the aftermath of the Legion arrest, which is part of the investigation of Quigley, could amount to the crime of intimidation of a witness because that case is still pending before the court, Louison said.

He said the officers, who also crossed paths with former Officer Brian Curran (the chief's son in law), have done nothing wrong.

The hearings, which the officers requested be held in public, continue at 9 a.m. Monday in the Selectmen's office. Last Wednesday and Thursday, the prosecution (town's side) presented its case, which will continue Monday. The defense (officers' side) will start when

Selectmen won't back Cedarmere

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Board of Selectmen will not send on an application for the affordable portion of the Cedarmere development to the Department of Housing and Community Development. While the project has already been approved by the Planning Board, and developers have a special permit in hand, Selectmen voted unanimously to deny the request, saying they don't feel comfortable sending the application forward, when they do not think the plans for the project are complete.

Town Manager Mark Haddad said it had been recommended by Town Counsel that the Board "not support the project because it is an incomplete project." Because the Senior Multi-Resident Overlay District bylaw requires projects have either a permit for an on-site wastewater treatment system, or written approval by the Sewer Commission to tie-in to the town's sewer lines to comply, and Cedarmere currently has neither, the Selectmen feel the plans are incomplete. However, the Planning Board has already given its approval for the project and has granted a special permit with conditions, while developers wait to receive a verdict from court which could change their septic status. After being denied

"It sounds like the Selectmen are trying to take the place of the Planning Board."

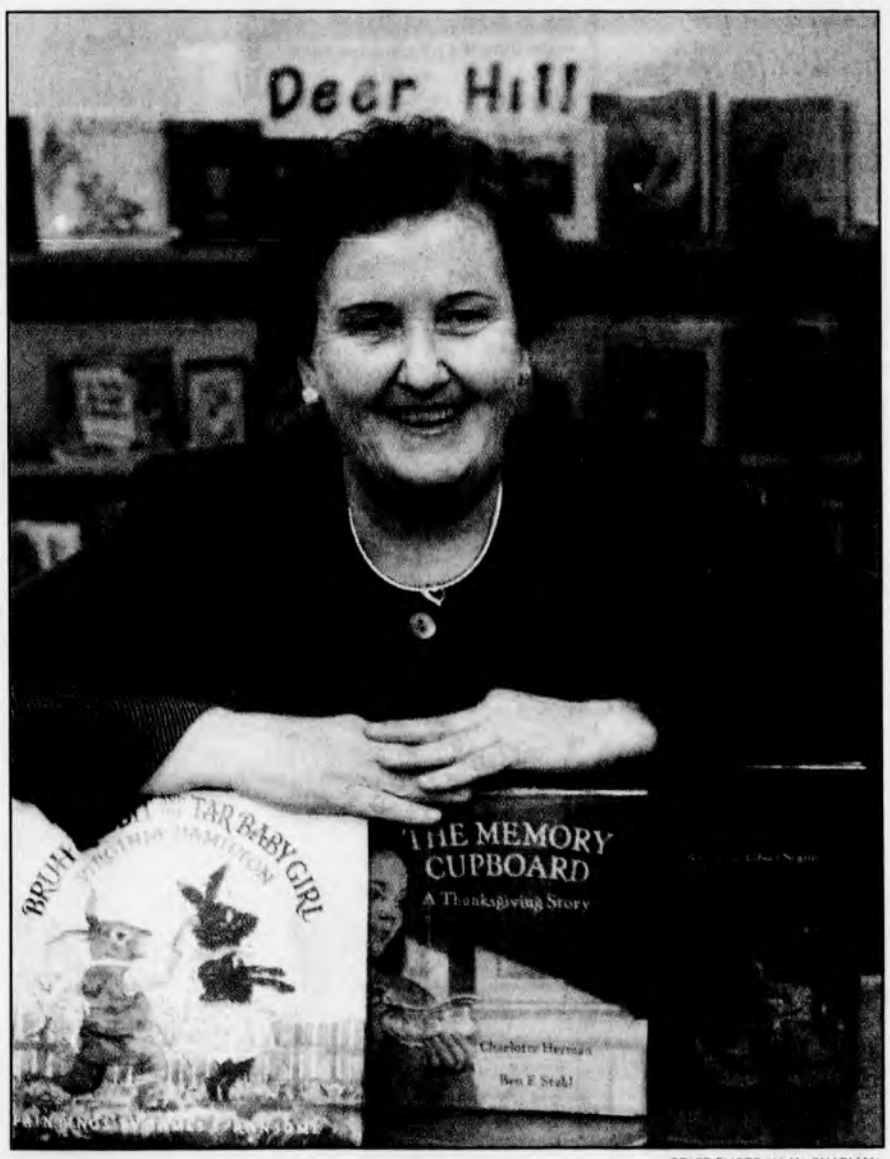
Girl Scouts send sweet reminders

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset residents serving in the US Armed Forces will not miss out on Girl Scout cookie time, thanks to the bright idea of one Osgood student, who has been working hard to ensure as many servicemen and women as possible receive a sweet reminder someone back home is thinking of them.



Madeline Curley, a seven-year-old second grader in Daisy Troop 4777, was writing her holiday thank you notes, when she began to think of all she was grateful for. She had just celebrated the holidays with her family and began to imagine what it would be like to be a soldier stationed overseas. As she wrote to her relatives, she began to wonder what she could do to show her gratitude.

"Because the troops have done a lot for us, they need something special from us to thank them," she said.

Madeline came up with the idea to send the troops care packages, and being a Girl Scout, it only seemed fitting to send cookies. Madeline had just received her cookie order forms and with the help of her mother, Lauren, began her regular door-to-door sales with a slight twist. While asking her neighbors if

A proper ending to a school librarian's career

Long-time Deer Hill Librarian Majorie Murphy has shared her love of reading with countless children.

Murphy is named Citizen of the Year

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Marjorie Murphy may look like a grandmother but she is totally cool right down to her vanity license plate that states "Marjie."

Her late husband got the plate for her back in the 1970s when she drove a Pacer. There were other Margies out there with plates "Margie 1", 2, or 3 but Bill Murphy knew his wife was one of a kind and ordered the different spelling.

With sparkling blue eyes and a smile that can light up a room, Murphy — who has graduated to a Lincoln Continental — is the school librarian that has forever put an end to the word "shhhhh."

She may be the only librarian with a Nerf basketball hoop in her library, a reward for children who share something interesting in a story with the class that Murphy hasn't already told them.

Just like her license plate, Murphy believes the library should be unique — a special, lively place where children can discover all the treasures that books possess.

After about 25 years with the Cohasset schools, Murphy will retire at the end of the school year. She won't soon be forgotten and the impact she has had on the lives of legions of elementary-age children is her legacy.

"With Marjie, children always come first," says Barb

Residency issue at middle-high school

The School Committee had a difficult decision to make at its Jan. 22 meeting, as residency issues pertaining to a student currently enrolled were addressed. The student, whose parents had bought a house in Cohasset but are still in the process of making renovations, is living out of town until construction is complete, which is against school policy. Although the Committee decided to let the child stay in school in Cohasset for another 90 days, with the assurance the construction will be completed before then, the School Committee is urging anyone who may be in violation of the school's residency policy to come forward so the situation can be addressed properly. School policy states any student attending Cohasset Public Schools must live in town, and a parent's owning property and paying taxes does not qualify a student to enroll.

Liquor stores are now open on Sunday

The Board of Selectmen voted unanimously to allow liquor stores in Cohasset to sell alcohol on Sundays. Because other surrounding towns have already given their permission to sell on Sundays, the board granted requests by Curtis Liquors, Cohasset Plaza Liquors, and Cohasset Food Mart, at their Jan. 27 meeting, in order to give them the ability to stay competitive. Town Manager Mark Haddad said in Scituate, stores are being charged a fee of $200 for the right to open on Sundays, but the board decided against imposing any fees to open the extra day.

Legion memorial may stay on island

Thomas Wigmore, Commander of the Sons of the American Legion, sent a letter to Town Manager Mark Haddad, requesting the town return the POW/MIA memorial back to its original location on the traffic island at the intersection of Depot Court and South Main Street, when streetscape improvements are made to the downtown area. While the Board of Selectmen had spoken with Craig Miller of the Waterfield Design Group about possibly moving the memorial to the corner of the street where the Community Center is located, Haddad said from both Wigmore's letter and conversations he has had with Legion members, it was made clear to him, they will not be in favor of having the memorial any other place. However, some members of the Board of Selectmen thought it makes much more sense to have the memorial up off the street where people can enjoy it, and have asked Selectman Merle Brown to have a talk with Wigmore, explaining the board thinks the memorial can be enjoyed more if it is not located in the middle of the street.

The island was dedicated in April 1994 to serve as a memorial to all personnel uncounted from all wars. The Legion members feel there would be no other appropriate location.

Brown speaks out about critical letter

Selectman Merle Brown doesn't think a letter to the editor printed in the Jan. 22 issue of the Mariner was fair. John Morgan, 24 Bow St., offered his thoughts on the RTF being closed due to the cold. Brown said employees of the RTF work outside all day and do not have the luxury of working indoors where there is heat, and said he still thinks closing the RTF for a day was the right thing to do. Brown added employees did not get the day off, and worked with the DPW instead. However, one worker did suffer from frostbite on his ear, from standing in the cold for a short time that morning before the decision was made to close.

Elderly neighbors need checking on

The Board of Selectmen wants to remind residents to keep their elderly neighbors in mind when both the snow and the temperatures fall. Take the time to lend a hand and help shovel someone out who cannot shovel themselves, selectmen said. When it's extremely cold, make sure to check on elderly neighbors to make sure their heat is in good working order, they said. In addition, the board wishes to remind residents to take a few extra minutes to clear in front of fire hydrants near their homes. Also, store owners are reminded they are responsible for clearing snow and ice in front of their own shops.

Great Neck granted a 60-day extension

The Great Neck development team was granted a 60-day extension for the preliminary phase of its project at last week's Planning Board meeting, although the developers hadn't planned on asking for one. Due to time constraints under the bylaw which only give a certain amount of time for the preliminary review process, the Planning Board would have been required to vote on the project that night, in order to meet the advertising deadline for the public hearings, which usher in stage two for the project. However, because changes had been made to the Great Neck plans since the last time the board had seen them, and the board did not have the time to thoroughly review the updates and make an educated decision, Planning Board Chairman Al Moore said the board would have had no other choice but to deny the project. Moore told Ellen Morrissey, owner of the property, that if she requested an extension, the board would grant it, but if she did not, her project would be denied.

Cook RFP committee

The Board of Selectmen has appointed eight Cohasset residents to serve on the advisory committee regarding the Cook property Request for Proposals. Committee members include: Steve Bobo, 292 Jerusalem Road; Joseph Buckley, 28 Linden Drive; Robert Hess, 11 Old Pasture Road; Ava Heggie, 228 Sohier Street; Richard O'Brien, 78 Old Pasture Road; Roger Pompeo, 130 Forest Avenue; John Steinmetz, 175 Sohier Street; and Martha Horsefield, 225 Jerusalem Road.

Responses for the RFP on the Cook property are due on Friday, Feb. 13. The deadline was extended three days to allow more time for bidders. So far, 73 people have taken out the RFP.

"I think we're going to have a nice response," said Town Manager Mark Haddad.

Local aid could be cut by 5 percent

Town Manager Mark Haddad said at this point, it looks as if the town could be facing an additional 5 percent cut in local aid this year. While he plans on banding together with neighboring towns to try to fight the cuts, if the 5 percent goes through, the town will be looking at additional reductions of roughly $100,000, and he does not know where that money might be made up in the budget.

Board appointments

Veneta Roebuck, 312 Beechwood St., has been appointed to the Turkey Hill Management Committee, filling the position formerly held by Susan Cope. In addition, Charles Higginson, 159 Atlantic Ave., has been appointed to Mark Dunne's seat on the Board of Appeals. Dunne recently resigned from the ZBA.

Town Counsel comments on two citizens' petitions

Town Manager Mark Haddad sent copies of the two citizen's petitions articles to Town Counsel Paul DeRensis, for comments and has received a response. The first of the articles would approve hiring an independent counsel and would provide funds to hire an investigator to look into the alleged misconduct, actions taken to remedy the misconduct, and identify any potential abuse of power, fraud or deceit that may have taken place regarding the investigation at the Police Department.

"The article about hiring of counsel to investigate only authorizes, but cannot require the hiring. In the end, that is up to the Board of Selectmen and you, to decide whether or not to spend the money if appropriated," stated DeRensis.

In reference to the article on the Cook Property, which would sell the property to the Cohasset Land Foundation to construct 48-60 affordable senior housing units while preserving the house and majority of land as open space, De Rensis said, "I do not understand the purpose or effect of this article. We cannot mandate a sale to a particular purchaser without procurement, so it if passes, and if the Cohasset Land Foundation is not the most responsive bidder, then we are unable to proceed with any deal at all. The whole purchase fails."

DeRensis said he does not recommend either article for legal reasons.

Planning Board public hearing on TM articles

The Planning Board will hold a public hearing during which the drafted zoning articles will be discussed in depth. The meeting will be held in the downstairs meeting room of Town Hall, on Wednesday, Feb. 18 at 7:30 p.m. and will be televised. Copies of the drafted Warrant are available at the library, Town Clerk's office, Planning Board office, and the Selectmen's office, for those who are interested. Town Counsel will be available at the meeting.

Legal issues develop for Great Neck plan

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Town counsel may need to get involved in the preliminary hearing process for the Great Neck senior housing development because planners see many legal issues that already need to be ironed out.

So far, issues dealing with buffer zones, ownership, access and tax status are going to require a professional opinion, to give both the Planning Board and development team a better idea of any changes that might need to be made.

"We need to get the legal issues resolved," said Planning Board Chairman Al Moore, and one of the top items on that list is the question of ownership.

Ellen Morrissey, 488 Jerusalem Road, has been trying to develop a piece of property she owns for the past 10 years. The parcel is flanked by Highland Avenue and Beach Street, and provides access to Great Brewster Woods, one of the town's pieces of conservation land. Plans for development have changed over the years and her most recent application includes plans to construct one- and two-bedroom units for residents 55 and older spread throughout three buildings on the property, on 11.98 acres of land.

Because Morrissey is the trustee of both the Mohawk Realty Trust and Great Neck LLC, the developers of the project, Town Planner Liz Harrington said due to wording on application forms, it is not clear who owns the property and what relationships others involved have to the project. Morrissey said there is no issue with ownership and she is clearly the owner of the land and always has been. However, town counsel will be in touch with her counsel to help straighten out any problems with the wording of application documents, to make it clear without question that she is the owner.

Additional legal questions include whether an existing access easement, which currently runs across Barry Getto's property at 137 Beach St., can be used as a permanent point of access for the development to be built on Morrissey's property. The driveway to the property has been changed to follow the original "S" curve, then continue on to meet up with the easement located on Getto's property.

Getto said there are a number of uses he could see for his property in the future, and may decide one day he wants to have a garden, but with the access road right there, his property will significantly change. However, rights of way are not solely under the control of any one person.

"If I have a right of way on my property, I can't park a bread truck on it to stop access," said Moore, adding questions regarding the right of way need to be addressed before the current plans can move forward.

In addition, the fact that the overlay bylaw requires 50 feet of buffer zone between any new development and the existing abutting property, causes complications with the easement as well. While the overlay bylaw states access roads and pedestrian paths may cross a buffer at the discretion of the Planning Board, because Getto's property is not larger than 10 acres, it is not subject to the provisions of the bylaw. That will be another matter for Town Counsel to take up.

Since a 50-foot buffer is required around the property, retaining walls have come into question as well. While it is still not clear whether retaining walls on the property line would be allowed at all because they are a fixed structure, it is clear that putting anything on or close to a property line requires applying for a variance with the Planning Board. Under the bylaw, it states the Planning Board may grant variances of no less than 30 feet to serve as a buffer. Current plans for retaining walls are only a few feet from the property line.

But there were other issues with the easement, including the fact that the maximum length for a common driveway, which is measured from the street down to the last residence, is 500 feet, and Great Neck's clearly is. Capt. Mark Trask of the fire department said from the proposed parking lot by building one, which is approximately the halfway point of the driveway, to the last building, is roughly 600 feet. To the proposed fire hydrant, it is roughly 1,000 feet. However, Zoltan Juhasz, civil engineer for Great Neck, said the easement is an access road and not a driveway because the final building is a multi-family dwelling, and not a single-family home, and therefore does not need to comply with the 500-foot rule.

Many of the new issues were brought up at the meeting as a result of a new set of plans the development team presented to the Planning Board last Wednesday. The new plans were an attempt to address feedback given by the board, Modelewski, and abutters the week before. The plans include a scaled-back number of units from 61 to 40.

"With the recent input from John [Modelewski] and comments from the police department and Board of Health, and now that we've heard concerns from abutters, we went back to the drawing board and made significant changes," said Juhasz.

The Great Neck development team will continue to work on its plans and will present any changes to the Planning Board at upcoming meetings. Great Neck was slated to come before the Planning Board Wednesday, Feb. 4 after the Mariner went to press.

Planning Board race possible

Nedrow, Ivimey take out papers

Two familiar figures in town have taken out papers for a one-year unexpired term on the Planning Board. The seat opened up unexpectedly last week with the resignation of board member Chris Ford, who is spending the winter months in Florida.

Stuart Ivimey, who is an attorney and chairman of the Community Preservation Committee, and Joseph Nedrow, chairman of the Senior Housing Committee, have both pulled papers for the one-year remaining of Ford's term.

Ford, 575 Jerusalem Road, stated in his Jan. 28 resignation letter to selectmen, that although he returns to Cohasset on a regular basis he has had to miss some crucial Planning Board meetings.

"These absences are not fair to the applicants before the board or to the town," he stated.

Ivimey said he is concerned about the pace of development and its effect on Cohasset.

"The unprecedented and virtually unchallenged development of over 400 housing units that are planned for this town will, in the absence of effective new leadership, forever and detrimentally alter the character of Cohasset," said Ivimey, adding the greatest challenges facing this town are the need to create affordable senior housing and the preservation of the town's historic character.

Nedrow, a retired executive with General Motors, said the one-year term provides a unique opportunity. "There are not many positions in town where you get the opportunity to try something for a year," he said. "And I'm retired and have the time to devote to it."

Nedrow, who served on the School Committee for most of the 1980s, said he wants to preserve the character of Cohasset. "It's a great place to live and a great place to raise children," he said.

The last day to take out papers is Thursday, Feb. 12 for the April 3 Town Election. Papers with the requisite number of signatures must be returned by 5 p.m. Feb. 17.

The last day to take out papers is Thursday, Feb. 12 for the April 3 Town Election.

Mike Wescott of River Road, who is a member of the Growth & Development Committee and head of the anti-Avalon group Cohasset Action, is running for the five-year Planning Board seat being vacated by Bill Good, who decided not to seek a fourth term.

Another race is shaping up for the one-year unexpired term on the Cohasset Housing Authority. Chris Allen, 21 Pleasant St., pulled papers this week for that seat. He could face off with Janice Rosano of 60 Elm St. who may also run for the seat vacated by Joanne Young, who moved away.

"I am running for Housing Authority to bring my business and management experience to a board that will soon face more change and challenges at one time than has been seen in decades," stated Allen in a formal announcement.

There is the potential for a four-way race for two seats on the School Committee. Incumbent School Committee member Pat Martin of Linden Drive plans to seek a third term while Adrienne MacCarthy of Doane Street, Jamie Williams of Surry Drive and Scott O'Grady of Sohier Street are hoping for their first. Incumbent Mark DeGiacomo is not seeking a third term.

School Committee member Rick Shea Margin Street, who was appointed to fill Jane Pescatore's seat in September, pulled papers for the one-year remaining of Pescatore's unexpired term. Pescatore resigned from the School Committee to accept employment with the school department. Betsy Connolly of Lily Pond Lane announced last fall she would run for Pescatore's seat. However, Connolly said this week she is supporting Shea and will not run.

So far incumbent Selectman Merle Brown of Beechwood Street, who is seeking a fourth term, and Rob Spofford of Heather Drive are running for two seats on the Board of Selectmen. Incumbent Selectman Tom Callahan is not seeking reelection.

Nathaniel Palmer of Little Harbor Road will run for the seat being vacated by Rob Kasameyer on the Water Commission and Elsa Miller of Reservoir Road is seeking reelection to the Board of Assessors. Steve Bobo of Jerusalem Road, chairman of the Board of Health, has taken out papers for a third term.

There are three seats up for grabs on the Library Trustees and so far there are three candidates: incumbents Sarah Pease of Sankey Road and Barbara Power of Beach Streeet; and Stacey Weaver, 44 Nichols Road, who is seeking her first term. Trustee June Hubbard is not seeking reelection.

Rick Grassie recently resigned from the Recreation Commission leaving a two-year unexpired term; Lisa LoJacona, 111 Nichols Road, pulled papers for that seat.

Recreation Commissioner Anthony Carbone is seeking reelection. By press time, Ann Barrett of the Cohasset Housing Authority and Sewer Commissioner Sean Cunning had not pulled nomination papers.

Town Census for 2004

The Town Census for 2004 has been mailed to each household. Information obtained from the census is ultimately used to prepare the street list, annual registry of voters, school list, dog owner list, and jury list. It also establishes eligibility for resident's tuition at state colleges, for veteran reimbursement, for senior citizen programs and other benefits. The census provides valuable information to various departments throughout the town.

Dog forms are on a tear off portion of the census forms. The licenses are valid through Dec. 31, 2004. Dog forms need to be returned as soon as possible although you may have recently renewed your 2003 license. If you did not receive your census, contact the Town Clerk's office.

the prosecution rests. The hearings could continue into next Thursday.

The hearing was scheduled to resume at 9 a.m. today, but Berry notified Louison Tuesday the town was exercising its right to postpone the hearing until Monday. According to Louison, Berry said the town hired another lawyer to help "look into the matters we've raised."

"It doesn't matter if they get Clarence Darrow," Lousion said. "The lawyers can't change the facts."

Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris explained the firm Deutsch Williams that represents the town decides when it's best to assign another attorney.

"The firm decides what's needed to represent us," she said. "That's their decision whether to use a paralegal or another attorney. That's what they do in every instance and this is no different."

McMorris said the hearing was probably being postponed to give the new attorney time to prepare.

The town has charged both Quigley and McLean with conduct unbecoming an officer for drinking on duty at the Rod & Gun Club. McLean faces charges of inappropriate activity in one arrest and three arrests and one booking procedure by Quigley are being questioned. The officers have been on paid administrative leave since Oct. 20 and did not learn about the charges until Jan. 13.

Town Manager Mark Haddad, who is the hearing officer, will decide what punishment if any to mete out including possible termination. The officers have the right to appeal Haddad's decision to Civil Service.

Jackson testified last Thursday (or hearing Day Two) that a dispute over filling a lieutenant's position at the department triggered his concerns about Quigley's arrests. He described Quigley as "visibly upset but respectful" when he was told last July that the lieutenant's position would not be filled.

"He mentioned he put a lot of time and money into taking the (Civil Service) exam and indicated he deserved the position," Jackson said.

Jackson said shortly thereafter he reviewed arrest trends and noted a sharp spike in the drug arrests over the past year.

"Quigley made one-half the arrests and was involved in three-quarters of them by booking or assisting," the chief said.

But Louison described Quigley's interest in the lieutenant's position as commendable and noted Quigley has always been a "very active police officer." He pointed out the District Attorney's office had not contacted the chief to say there were too many drug-related arrests in Cohasset.

"Are you blaming police misconduct for the removal of illegal drugs in Cohasset?" Louison asked.

Jackson said some officers also had concerns about Quigley's arrests, one of whom was Curran, the chief's son-in-law, who shared his issues in an exit interview with Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris. Curran resigned in September and his allegations of misconduct led to the investigation of Quigley and McLean, according to testimony by McMorris on Day One of the hearings.

McMorris said Curran expressed concerns the officers were making false arrests following traffic stops from minor violations in order to get overtime when called to court. However, none of the charges against Quigley and McLean involve any traffic stops or overtime violations.

McMorris said the investigation was also triggered by letters from Gerd Ordelheide, owner of the Red Lion Inn, that were highly critical of Quigley.

After Jackson testified on Day Two that other officers also complained about Quigley, Louison noted that as a superior officer, Quigley was rigid. He didn't allow patrol officers to hang around the station or watch television on their shifts, actions that may have made him unpopular with subordinates, Louison said.

He asked Jackson if he'd gone out on patrol with Quigley to see how the sergeant interacts with the public or told him "to slow down" that he was making too many arrests. Jackson said he had not.

Jackson also said he'd never reprimanded Quigley for making bad arrests nor did he suggest Quigley get further training.

Private eye

John DiNatale of the DiNatale Detective Agency testified he was retained by Town Counsel to do background investigations on Quigley and McLean that involved interviewing the officers' former employers and verifying the officers' training.

He was also charged with looking into allegations of drinking on duty at the Rod & Gun Club after weapons training last May. While Jimmy Dean, general manager of the Red Lion Inn, testified he saw both Quigley and McLean drinking at the Rod & Gun Club, seven Cohasset police officers indicated Quigley was observed by them at the station and not at the club at that time, according to Louison.

DiNatale, whom the town has paid $17,000 not including his time at the hearings for which he's billing at $100 an hour, found further allegations of McLean drinking while working on a detail were unfounded

DiNatale said he examined 100 arrest reports by Quigley over the past three years to see "if anything caught his eye." He said he met with McMorris to discuss his findings with her.

He also interviewed Officer Shellee Peters and Officer Frank Yannizzi, who both also responded to the scene the night Keith Jackson was arrested outside the Legion Hall.

DiNatale said he discovered Quigley was charged in a civil suit before he came to Cohasset.

Louison criticized the town for "floating out there" the civil suit that was filed 14 years ago that contained unverified allegations and which had been dismissed. He said the testimony was prejudicial and asked the line of questioning be stopped.

The town's attorney Peter Berry argued the civil suit was relevant because if the officers "had engaged in misbehavior before more likely than not, they would in these cases."

Louison peppered DiNatale with questions about his background in criminal law and asked if he knew the officers were required every year to get updated in criminal law and the laws of search and seizure. Louison questioned DiNatale's qualifications to conduct investigations into criminal matters other than his years as a private detective.

Tedeschi's arrest

In testimony on the "Tedeschi's arrest" that continued from Day One into Day Two (Wednesday and Thursday), Quigley and McLean are accused of improper search and seizure by removing items from the pockets of three youths they arrested outside Tedeschi's on Sept. 7. Jackson said while the officers conducted a "threshold inquiry" that includes a "pat frisk", they should not have removed a bag of marijuana from one of the youth's pockets. "In no way does a glassine bag feel like a weapon," Jackson said.

But Louison, who said two of the males arrested had admitted to "sufficient facts" in court and the other matter is still pending, argued case law allows officers to remove suspected drugs from a suspect during a search for a weapon. He noted two emails issued earlier by Cohasset detectives warning one of the youths in question might have a gun in his possession. He also said Quigley would have been shirking his duty if he didn't investigate the youths who were seen entering and exiting the store after it had closed at 11 p.m. Louison said one of the youths was a suspect in six "breaking and enterings" in the village.

Jackson conceded there was probable cause to search the juvenile, who had a pipe in his pocket that could have been construed to be a weapon. Upon inquiring what the juvenile was doing, Quigley pat frisked him and found a large ceramic pipe containing marijuana, according to testimony.

Car windows

At about 11 p.m., July 1, 2003, police received two reports about teenage males looking into car windows in the village and town parking lot. Quigley encountered one male who fit the description of one of the suspects in the village and upon talking to the male, testimony showed Quigley determined he was under the influence of liquor and was subsequently found to be in possession of marijuana. The male was taken into protective custody, brought to the police station. Within a few minutes the youth's father came to the station and Quigley released the boy to his father and did not charge him with possession of marijuana.

Chief Jackson contends an arrest report should have been filed not an incident report. But Louison produced two examples of other officers, who did not file the proper reports following similar incidents, and noted they had not been disciplined.

Officer Frank Yannizzi, who said he gets along well with Quigley and enjoyed working with him, but had concerns about his arrest procedures, said he thought the youth had been arrested because he was put in handcuffs and didn't realize the youth was in protective custody. Louison noted those placed in protective custody are put in handcuffs for their own protection.

Yannizzi said he expressed his concerns about Quigley to the chief in October because "I didn't come here to get sued and didn't come here to get fired."

Yannizzi, who started working in Cohasset in December 2002, was questioned about his background as a police officer in Hull. Under questioning from Louison, Yannizzi enumerated several disciplinary actions he had faced during his years as a Hull police officer. Yannizzi said he was also named in a civil suit involving the entire shift alleging civil rights violations and false arrest that had been thrown out after one day of testimony. Louison asked if DiNatale had been retained by the town to conduct an extensive background check on him. Yannizzi said the background check was done by Cohasset Det. Sgt. Gregory Lennon.

Seized evidence

Chief Jackson contends Quigley incorrectly filed evidence which was the result of the arrest of two young adults at Sandy Beach in the early morning hours of July 29. The arresting officer Paul Wilson charged both with possession of one bag of marijuana and attached the marijuana evidence to the male arrestee's file. Quigley later noted at the top of the report that the arrest of the male and female were related, a fact that Jackson acknowledged on cross examination. Testimony revealed there was no missing evidence; it was simply a case of two suspects and one piece of evidence. That prompted Louison to ask, "What has Sgt. Quigley done wrong?"

Wilson, who said he has a "good professional relationship with Quigley," testified that the chief told him a month ago that his arrest of the female under "constructive possession" was improper because she did not actually have marijuana on her person." Wilson said the male he arrested stated the girl had been smoking marijuana and Wilson noted the car smelled of marijuana smoke.

Louison pointed out the DA had not complained about the female's arrest case that was dismissed upon paying court costs. (Constructive possession means the defendant does not actually possess the marijuana but knows it's there and has the ability to use it).

On cross examination, Jackson said he didn't think "constructive possession" applied because he didn't believe the female "had access to the drugs on the other person."

Louison also confronted Jackson with the department's drug evidence policy that stated the arresting officer is responsible for all evidence, not the booking officer. Jackson also admitted to storing vials of human blood in the employees' refrigerator, but said that problem would be solved soon with the purchase a refrigerator for the detective's office.

Police Disciplinary Hearings

At left: Sgt. William Quigley confers with his attorney Doug Louison during Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris' testimony on Day One last Wednesday.

What are the charges?

During the ongoing hearing of Sgt. William Quigley and Officer James McLean the testimony and cross examinations are laden with point and counterpoint but the question, "What are the charges?" has remained largely unanswered. While there have been hours of verbal jousting with assertions varying from civil rights, abuse of power, search and seizure without probable cause to false arrests — the following charges are the basis for a three-month administrative leave:

Against McLean and Quigley

• May 22, 2003 — Drinking while on duty. After completing training both officers are accused of drinking beer as well as poor conduct, incompetence and violating police rules.

• Sept. 7, 2003 — Making arrests in front of Tedeschi's. Both officers are accused of improper police procedures as well as criminal conduct, negligence, incompetence and violating police rules.

Against Quigley alone

• July 1, 2003 – Answering call concerning suspicious person in a parking lot. Quigley is accused of failing to properly complete a report as well as criminal conduct, negligence, incompetence and violating police rules.

• July 29, 2003 – Booking of a young female arrested by another officer. Quigley is accused of lying, failing to properly complete a report, improper police procedures and withholding evidence as well as criminal conduct, negligence, incompetence and violating police rules.

• Oct. 11, 2003 – Making arrest of Keith Jackson and others at American Legion. Quigley is accused of lying, failing to properly complete a report and improper police procedures as well as criminal conduct, negligence, incompetence and violating police rules.

What happens next:

The hearings, which the officers requested be held in public, continue at 9 a.m. Monday in the Selectmen's office.

The prosecution (or town) has presented its arguments in two charges against Officer Jim McLean and Sgt. William Quigley concerning drinking and the Rod & Gun Club and arrests at Tedeschi's.

McLean is facing no other charges.

The town has also argued two more of the charges against Quigley regarding a juvenile he placed in protective custody and his handling of evidence in a booking procedure

It is expected allegations of police misconduct involving Quigley's arrest of Keith Jackson and two others outside the Legion Hall on Oct. 11 will be taken up Monday when the hearing resumes.

The hearing was scheduled to resume at 9 a.m. today, but the town has exercised its right to postpone the hearing until Monday. Town Counsel is bringing on another lawyer to help with the prosecution.

Sequestered witnesses, officers Rick Grassie and Shellee Peters, and Sgt. John Conte wait to be called.

What the hearings revealed:

McLean and Quigley

• May 22, 2003 — Drinking on Duty. Allegations of drinking on duty following weapons training at the Scituate Rod & Gun club aired. Witness Jimmy Dean testified he saw both McLean and Quigley drinking shortly after 3 p.m. on May 22. Officer Rick Grassie testified McLean did have some beer after the firearms certification was completed, but Quigley did not. McLean was not on-duty that day. Police roster and calendar shows Quigley was at the station. Testimony also revealed that seven officers confirm Quigley was at the station.

• Sept. 7, 2003 — Arrests in front of Tedeschi's. Allegations of unlawful search and seizure and civil rights violations in the arrest of two adults and one juvenile, all males, for possession of drugs.

Officer Frank Yannizzi, who went to the scene as backup, testified he had concerns about the arrest and whether the officers acted appropriately in searching the suspects. Chief Jackson testified the officers did not have probable cause to make the arrests. Although under cross-examination by attorney Doug Louison, Jackson agreed Sgt. Quigley would have been remiss in his duties if he simply passed by the Tedeschi Food Store, knowing it closed at 11pm, with teens coming and going from the store at 11:12pm. After being questioned about case law, Jackson said the arrest of the juvenile was proper. With that, Louison argued that the officers now had probable cause to investigate the others present. Louison noted two of the males from this case have already had their cases adjudicated, admitting to sufficient facts, and neither the District Attorney, defense counsel, nor the judge had any problem with the arrests.

Quigley

• July 1, 2003 — Answering call about suspicious persons in parking lot. In front of Cohasset Hardware, Quigley checked a juvenile male who fit the description of one of two youths possibly looking into cars in the village and town parking lot. Quigley determined the juvenile had been consuming liquor and placed him in protective custody. The juvenile was also found to be in possession of marijuana. Later at the station, Quigley released the young man to his father without charging him with marijuana possession.

Chief Jackson testified Quigley lacked probable cause to stop, frisk, and bring a juvenile suspect to the police station. Officer Yannizzi testified he had concerns about Quigley's search procedure.

Jackson also said Quigley should have filed an arrest report, not an incident report. But Louison showed Jackson examples reports by other officers, who only filed incident reports for protective custody. Louison also produced a Cohasset police log entry showing the chief's son in law, Officer Curran, and Sgt. David Cogill, did not file an arrest or incident report after taking a man into custody who was thought to be wanted in Hingham. When asked, Jackson said no charges were brought against those officers.

• July 29, 2003 — Booking female arrested by another officer. Shortly after 1a.m., Officer Paul Wilson arrested a male and female in their car at Sandy Beach. The male, was placed under arrest for possession of marijuana which was found on his person along with unlawful possession of prescription pills. The female was also placed under arrest for possession of marijuana. The male had admitted they were both smoking marijuana before officers arrived. When officer Wilson brought the prisoners to the station, Sgt. Quigley logged the one and only bag of marijuana under the male's name and not the female's. Quigley is charged with "withholding evidence" in this case. Because the evidence couldn't be split in two, Quigley issued separate property numbers for the drugs and noted that fact on top of the police report by linking the arrests.

• Oct. 11, 2003 — Arrest of Keith Jackson and two others at Legion. Expected to be the subject of Monday's hearing starting at 9 a.m. at Town Hall.

Tickets can be reserved by calling Mary Whitley at 383-9708 and will also be available at the door. The lecture is open to the public and light refreshments will be served. More info can be obtained at www.cohassetyc.org. This could be a great way to spend a cold, Winter evening and benefit a great cause!

DEAN'S LIST

Three Cohasset residents were named to the dean's list of outstanding academic achievement during the fall semester at Colby College in Waterville, Maine. Hats off to Caitlin E. Slodden, a senior, who is majoring in anthropology and minoring in women's studies. Caitlin, a Thayer Academy graduate, is the daughter of Henry and Karen Slodden. Lauren M. Smith, a junior, is majoring in English with a concentration in creative writing and sociology. Lauren, who is also a Thayer graduate, is the daughter of William and Maureen Smith. Jessie L. Zerendow, a senior, is majoring in international studies and minoring in anthropology. Jessie, a CHS graduate, is the daughter of Donald and Victoria Zerendow. Congratulations to the three of you and keep up the fantastic work.

HATS OFF TO JAY!

Jay Nothnagle, a young man from here in town is truly an inspiration to me and I am sure, to many others as well.

Jay is one of only a handful of people with Down Syndrome who drive in the state. In fall 2003, Jay purchased a 1998 Toyota Tacoma with money he had saved from working at Stop & Shop and at Mobil over the last five years. And what did he do with his 1990 Toyota Camry? Trade it in? No! Instead, he donated it to SOMA's Recycle for Gold program, making his used car the 75,000th donated in the since the program's inception 10 years ago. Recycle for Gold not only helps to clean up the environment, but also raises part of the funds necessary to provide year-round athletic training and competition to over 9,300 people in Massachusetts of all ages with mental retardation.

But perhaps one of Jay's more shocking moments will come on Saturday, Feb. 14, when Jay, along with his father, Geoff and approximately 400 others, will "plunge" into the waters of Nanasket Beach in Hull, for the sixth annual Passion Plunge. The Passion Plunge is an event in which people gather pledges from family, friends and coworkers on the understanding that they will plunge into the icy-cold Atlantic Ocean on that cold February morning. Last year, more than 400 people participated and raised more than $150,000 for Special Olympics!

Jay, you are truly a special man and to hear about you for me is an honor. If any readers are interested, they can pledge for Jay by logging on to www.PassionPlunge.org and donating online. If anyone is interested in plunging, joining a team or volunteering, they can check out the website for more information, or call Emily at 978-774-1501, extension 227.

OH BOY!

It is always so nice to announce new babies in the column and this next one is no different. Sarah and John Inferrera, 404 Beechwood St. are the proud parents of a new baby boy, Anthony Gregory Inferrera. Anthony arrived Nov. 6, 2003 at 11:51 p.m. weighing in at 8 lbs. 12 oz. and measuring 21-1/2 ins. long. His grandparents are Marion Douglas of Cohasset and John Douglas of Scituate, Lee Burke of Lakeville, Mass., and Paul Infererra of Tampa, Fla. Enjoy this new little bundle of joy!

CO-ED VOLLEYBALL

There's a new sport in town looking for members and it sounds like a lot of fun. The Cohasset Recreation Department is running a six-week coed volleyball program for students in grades 5-8. Classes will meet at the Deer Hill gym, Tuesdays and Thursdays, 2:45 - 4:45 p.m.. Call Jack Worley at the Rec Department to register: 383-4109.

GIRL SCOUT PROGRAM

Mark the date. All registered Girl Scouts are invited to a mother-daughter outing on Sunday, April 4. Scouts and their moms will be bussed into the Fleet Center for the 4 o'clock showing of "Champions on Ice". Permission slips and further information will be available through the troop leaders. Hope to see you there!

PLAYGROUND FUNDRAISER

Project Playground invites you to "Love Around the World" Saturday, Feb. 7 at 7 p.m. at the Red Lion Barn for dinner and dancing to the sounds of the Mike Dumas Band with Platform Soul. Great live and silent auction items. This is our last major fundraiser. The new Cohasset playground will be built this spring. Tickets are $75 per person. Please call 781 383 3198 for reservations.

That is all for this week. Make sure to keep sending in your news, event information and photos no later than Mondays at noon.

they would like to buy a box of cookies for themselves, she asked if they would also be willing to donate money to send cookies to the troops overseas.

"They were really surprised we were doing it," said Madeline.

Around the time Madeline came up with her idea to send care packages to the troops, Lauren had been looking up information on the Girl Scout's web site about the history of the program, and found that in 1917, a troop in Muskogee, Oklahoma began baking cookies to be sold as one of the first fund-raisers. Proceeds from the sale were spent on handkerchiefs and candy, and sent to soldiers during World War I. Girl Scout cookie selling efforts began with a connection with the troops, and Lauren thought it made sense to bring that connection back.

"For me, it's been an interesting experience to see the reaction from the families of the young servicemen and women, many of which have young men and women who have just graduated and are on their first service deployment," Lauren said.

Madeline's troop decided they would try to send cookies to as many Cohasset residents serving in both the armed forces and Coast Guard as they could. Lauren has been working closely with Veterans Agent Noel Ripley to confirm names and compile a list of those on active duty. In some cases, residents had completed their stint in the service, but the girls will send cookies to the squadrons they used to be a part of.

Once the initial efforts began, Lauren brought the idea to other troops to see if they would like to become involved, and the response has been overwhelming.

"Because the troops have done a lot for us, they need something special from us to thank them."

— Madeline Curley, a second grader in Daisy Troop 4777

Alison Callahan, one of the co-leaders for troop 4778, of which her daughter Katie is a member, was one of many Girl Scout mothers who jumped on board with the project. "There were a number of us who thought it was a good idea," she said.

Alison said once the idea was set, Sue Spofford, another Girl Scout mother, got right to work and helped arrange a booth sale at Stop and Shop on Superbowl Sunday, which was a huge success. "Over $700 was raised," during the course of the day, with 17 different girls taking turns running the booth, which is very impressive, Alison said.

"[Selling cookies is] the key means of fund-raising for the Girl Scouts," said Lauren, adding donating cookies to the troops is the perfect solution for those people who want to make a difference and support the cause, but "don't want to have cookies in the house (to spoil their New Year's Resolution diets)."

Katie Callahan and friend Colleen Richardson, both of which have served as Girl Scouts for the past 10 years and were a part of the Superbowl Sunday cookie drive, said they too thought the change in selling was a great idea.

"We've sold cookies for so long, this is a different way that serves a better purpose," Katie said. Colleen agreed and said, "It gives a new perspective on selling cookies."

For each box of cookies the Girl Scout's sell, normally 60 cents per box goes to the individual troop, however, for those boxes earmarked for the troops on duty, that money has been set aside to help cover shipping costs. "One-hundred percent is going to the troops," Lauren said.

But Madeline is quick to point out, not all cookies can be sent everywhere. Because of the high temperatures in the desert, troops stationed in the Middle East can only be sent shortbread cookies, lemon pastry cookies, and peanut butter sandwich cookies, as they travel the best.

Along with Madeline and Katie's troops, girls from troop 4784 and troop 4771, which are both sixth-grade troops, have also been involved in selling cookies for the cause. In addition, Lauren said she has spoken with Ham Tewksbury at the Historical Society, who will donate T-shirts featuring Minot Light, to be sent with the cookies to those on duty.

"It really is a town-wide effort," Lauren said.

If you would like to make a contribution, please contact Lauren Curley on behalf of all the troops involved at (781) 383-6463.

Many fine Cohasset citizens nominated for annual award

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The Cohasset Mariner received 14 nominations from 33 individuals, families or organizations for the annual Citizen of the Year Award. A selection committee consisting of Judy Volungis of Forest Avenue; Betsy Connolly of Lily Pond Lane; Roger Highland Avenue; and editor Mary Ford pored over the nominees at the Cohasset Mariner office in Hingham Square on Sunday and selected Marjorie Murphy of Cedar Acres Lane for the annual award.

The other nominees were:

• Anna Abbruzzese, the "spirit" of Cohasset for all her volunteering in town including at the Senior Center, her involvement with the Farmer's Market, St. Anthony's and so much more;

• Steve Bobo, who as chairman of the Board of Health, is providing guidance and useful information on so many health-related issues; and for transforming the Health Department into an open, informative and exciting department;

• Merle Brown, who embodies all that is a public servant, for his years as a conservation commissioner, a selectman, work with the Boy Scouts and for his efforts overseeing recycling at the RTF, and so much more.

• John Coe, who as a quiet, gentle volunteer, spends countless hours volunteering at the Senior Center, St. Anthony's, South Shore Hospital, to name a few; and for being a good neighbor and friend to many;

• Thomas Gruber for all his interest and civic mindedness on the Greenbush Mitigation Committee; his involvement with the Cohasset Historical Society and repairs to the museums in the village, and his volunteerism with the Rotary Club.

• Joseph R. McElroy for his having been the driving force behind many of the finest projects and activities in Cohasset including the Curtis Estate Action Committee, Lightkeepers Corporation, "Herb Day," senior walking club and so much more.

• John McNabb whose volunteer efforts to protect the water supply have a lasting, beneficial effect on every citizen; for his efforts to prevent pollution from Cohasset Heights and his concern about the AvalonBay project and its effect on Lily Pond.

• Joseph Nedrow for his work on the Senior Housing Committee to promote the planning on senior housing on the Cook Estate and adjacent town-owned land; and for his many years as a contributing citizen in town including service on the School Committee.

• Arthur "Hap' Pompeo for his long lasting and heartfelt devotion to Cohasset that has included volunteer work behind the scenes including playing a key role in building the new Community Center playground.

• Marjorie Steele for her 12 years as the devoted manager of the Cohasset Food Pantry carrying out her duties in a discrete, kind and caring manner; she has also served with distinction with the Social Service League and Habitat for Humanity selection committee.

• The late Herbert Towle for his unending support of the Cohasset Sailing Club, his lifelong love of Cohasset, and his participation at Town Meeting.

• Patience Towle, who as a mega-watt, high energy, relentless worker, provided the leadership and vision on the Board of Library Trustees to bring the new state-of-the-art library to fruition. She stayed the course despite a complicated process, fraught with obstacles.

• David Wadsworth, Town Archivist and member of the Cohasset Historical Commission, board of Cohasset Central Cemetery, and Cohasset Historical Society for his care, love and documentation of the town's history over the years.

Marjorie Murphy is named Cohasset Citizen of the Year

Mullin, 14 Lamberts Lane. "She's never too busy to help a child select that perfect book or listen to a review of their latest read.

"It's a pleasure to watch former students drop by – and they frequently do! She never seems to forget a face or a name. Ask any one of them about a teacher who positively influenced them and Marjie's name pops up!"

It is Murphy's infectious enthusiasm and her ability to share her love of the written word that led to her selection as the Cohasset Citizen of the Year.

A selection panel consisting of Judy Volungis of Forest Avenue, Betsy Connolly of Lily Pond Lane and Roger Hill of Highland Avenue joined Cohasset Mariner editor Mary Ford on Sunday to pore over 14 nominations from 33 citizens, families or organizations for the annual award.

With so many nominees, making the final choice is a challenge. But the words penned in the nomination letters for Murphy literally jumped off the page.

"Her smile, her sparks of enthusiasm, and her unending quest to interest every child in her love of reading has made her a very likely candidate for Cohasset Citizen of the Year," wrote Karen Murphy, 7 Haystack Lane, in her nomination.

Murphy, who is a Cohasset resident and a mother and grandmother, uses the word "wonderful" a lot. She can talk about a children's book or picture book as if it were on the best seller list of the New York Times. She can share countless anecdotes about her students' delight in finding just the right book. Some come in and ask for specific genres such as mysteries, realistic fiction or even wizards.

"A child will say, 'you know what kind of books I like – do you have any more of those?'" Murphy says.

After moving to Cohasset she worked as an instructional aide for a few years while her children were still fairly small. The then Deer Hill Principal Ken Ekberg hired Murphy as a long-term substitute in the library for the librarian who was out on maternity leave.

At first Murphy, who had taught the first grade, wasn't so sure she'd like the library and was afraid it would be boring, but she hasn't looked back.

"I've been here ever since," she says, adding not long thereafter getting started she returned to school to get her master's in library science.

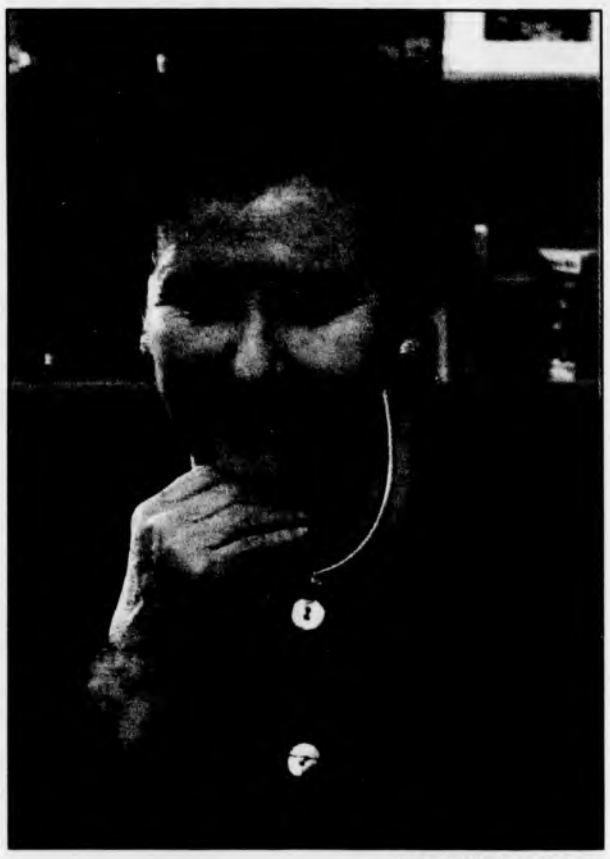
"I was allowed to be extremely creative," Murphy recalls. "We integrated the library into the school curriculum." Murphy also connected the town's Paul Pratt Memorial Library to the Deer Hill library by conducting a "puzzle club" at the Paul Pratt in the summer.

"What better gift can a citizen give Cohasset than instilling the importance of literacy in its youngest residents?"
— Pearl Smith,
Flintlocke Ridge Road

"The children would see me there," she says. The "puzzle club" that combines reading with solving a puzzle — and finishes with a Popsicle on the front lawn — was mentioned time and time again in Murphy's nominations for Citizen of the Year.

What's truly special about a school library, she notes, is all the books are "age-appropriate" so it is a place where the students feel comfortable.

The new Deer Hill Library, which was part of the school renovation and addition project, is a grand place and Murphy loves her new environs, describing them as "magnificent." But Murphy and her family assured the old library was a cozy and welcoming place, painting the walls and installing the shelves themselves.



The Cedar Acres Lane resident praises the parents who have worked with her over the years – including those who helped create the first computer lab – and her fellow teachers and the staff at Deer Hill.

Murphy, who attends Cohasset High graduation every year, says a former student, who is now in college, came home over the holidays and called her up. "Let's talk books," the student said and the two met for tea and a book discussion.

Murphy, who is also a talented storyteller, will retire "to try some new and interesting things."

An avid journal writer, she hasn't ruled out someday penning a children's book or two of her own. But even if she doesn't – her gift of the love of reading is sure to enrich all the students whose lives she's touched.

"What better gift can a citizen give Cohasset than instilling the importance of literacy in its youngest residents?" asks Pearl Smith, 9 Flintlocke Ridge Road.

OPINION

Citizen of the Year

As editor of the Cohasset Mariner, it is my pleasure to announce that Marjorie Murphy is the Citizen of the Year. The mother of three and grandmother of two has touched countless lives through her roughly 25 years as school librarian at Deer Hill.

With eyes that twinkle and an infectious smile, Mrs. Murphy – fondly known as Marjie — can make even the oldest readers among us decide to pick up a children's book, perhaps for the first time in many years.

Mrs. Murphy did not start out as a librarian. She taught the first grade and wasn't so sure being in the library was the right place for her – until she tried it, and then she didn't look back.

She doesn't forget any of the hundreds of children that have passed through the doors to her warm, welcoming library complete with sofas to curl up and read upon.

While nominations were open, a total of 33 different individuals, families or organizations took the time to propose a citizen for the annual award — detailing his or her contributions to help make this town we all love a better place.

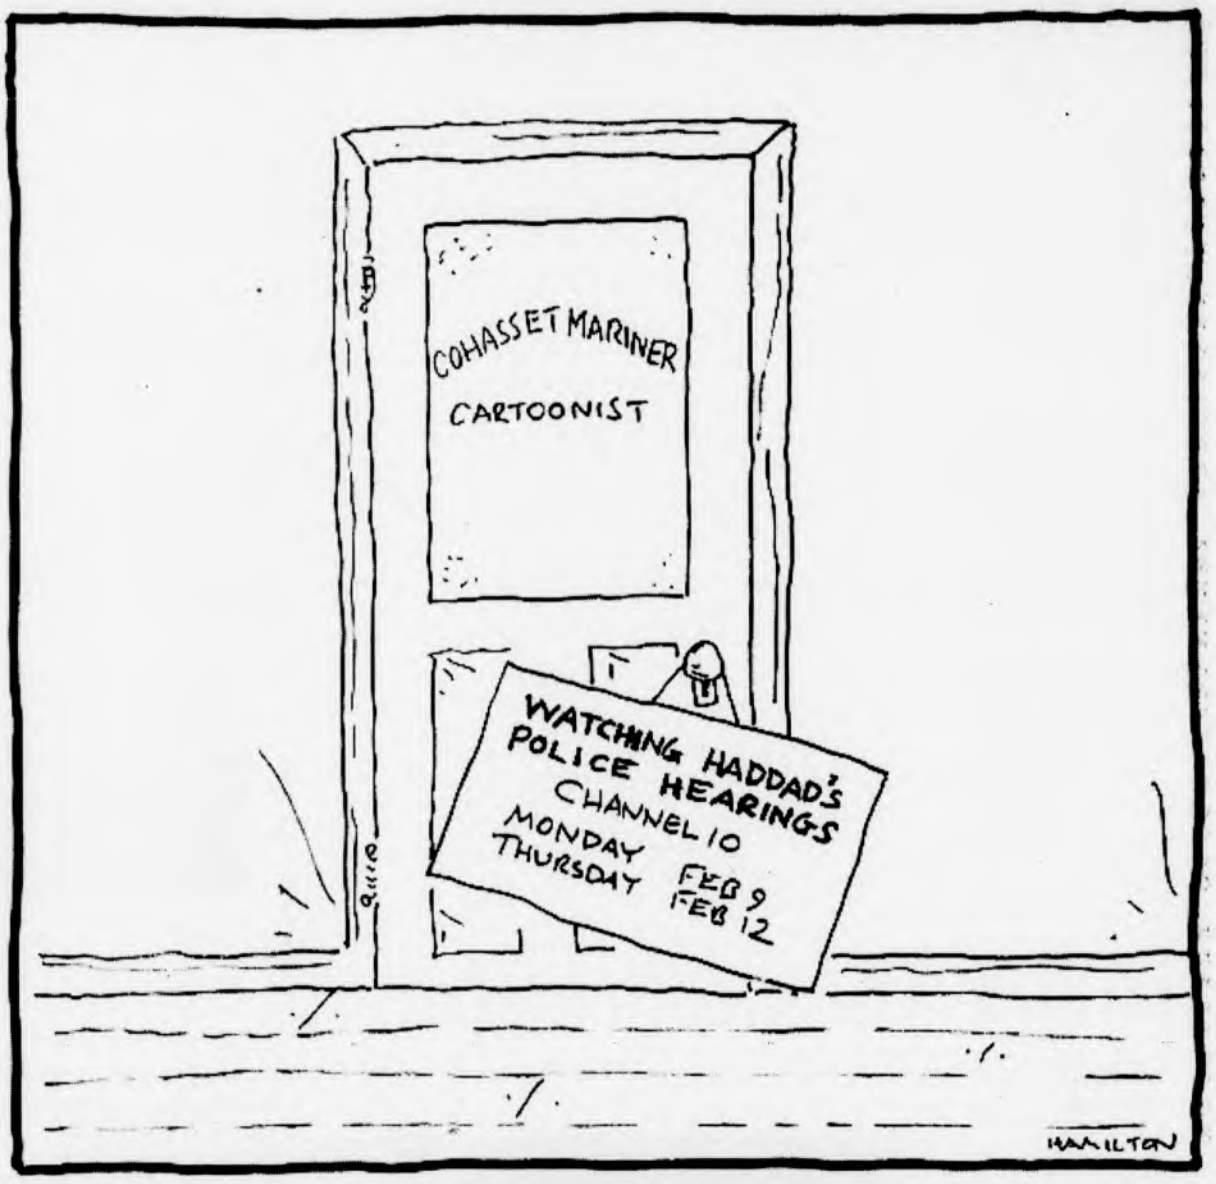
The selection panel consisting of Judy Volungis of Forest Avenue, Betsy Connolly of Lily Pond Lane and Roger Hill of Highland Avenue joined myself, editor Mary Ford, on Sunday to pore over the heartfelt letters of nomination.

Barb Mullin wrote, ""With Marjie, children always come first. She's never too busy to help a child select that 'perfect' book or listen to a review of their latest read. It's a pleasure to watch former students drop by — and they frequently do! She never seems to forget a face or a name. Ask any one of them about a teacher who positively influenced them and Marjie's name always pops up."

Claire Cahill said Mrs. Murphy deserved the award for her many years of dedication to the children of Cohasset.

"Her smile, her sparks of enthusiasm, and her unending quest to interest every child in her love of reading has made her a very likely candidate for Citizen of the Year," wrote Karen Murphy.

Dot and Lee Cisneros stated, "Marjie is a giver. She has given and continues to give of her time, her knowledge, her understanding, her devotion to selling the young and the old on her definition of the value of learning."



Judith Collins simply said, "She makes each child feel special."

So we extend our warm congratulations to Mrs. Murphy, who has devoted her life to helping children discover the wonders of reading and the value of a good book.

With this award, the Cohasset Mariner offers recognition for making a difference. In our society too many role models go unrecognized. Too often people today look to the sports, rock or movie stars with envy, when the real hero is the local police officer, firefighter, parent, teacher, church leader, neighbor or government official.

The annual Citizen of the Year Award is our way of taking our hats off to those among us who go that extra mile without asking for anything in return but the intrinsic reward of helping to make Cohasset a better place.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

'We are well served by our police force'

TO THE EDITOR:

My hat is off to Officers Yanizzi and Grassie and any other officer with the public spiritedness to testify at the police hearings. Moral courage is as admirable as is physical courage. It can't be easy to testify, possibly in support of the case against fellow officers, when it would be easier to just go with the flow and pretend lack of knowledge.

I observed the group of officers sequestered as potential witnesses in an alcove some distance from the hearing room, and was struck by how alert, how fit, and how spic and span they looked in their well-pressed and spotless uniforms. All of my encounters with the Cohasset police have been characterized by polite professionalism, although the encounters have been few and did not involve the two officers now charged.

At any rate, I think we are well served by our police force. To keep it that way, it has to be subject to the guidance and discipline of the department procedures and of its chief, to the lessons taught in training, and to the same principles of civility and fairness that all citizens should practice. All officers benefit, as well as the public it serves, by maintenance of its high standards. That requires aggressive and fair investigations of lapses from the standards, with fair and effective corrective action.

The force and the public are not well served by shrinking from the unpleasantness of investigation and corrective action. I note that public servants have safeguards against unfairness that are not available to employees of businesses; all the more reason not to shrink from the duty of investigation and correction. Again, kudos to the officers and other officials for seeing and doing their duty to the public and to the department.

'Who will govern the governors?'

COMMENTARY

WIG PIERSON

The citizens' petition filed on Jan. 12 calls for an investigation of "alleged misconduct, the actions taken to remedy the misconduct and identify any abuse of power, fraud or deceit that may have taken place" regarding he conduct of three members of Cohasset's police department (two police officers and the animal control officer)."

This writer was motivated to take action following publication in the Cohasset Mariner of the statement by the board of selectmen on Dec. 16, 2003, two months after punishment was administered without charging these three men with any wrongdoing.

When questions arise in the minds of the citizens in a democracy about the course of action taken by its leaders, there is but one recourse short of revolution, to be taken by the citizens.

Recall the words of probably the greatest thinker among our founding fathers and the author of the Declaration of Independence, Thomas Jefferson.

He asked rhetorically "Who will govern the governors?" and then proceeded to answer his own question as follows: "There is only one force in the nation that can be depended upon to keep the government pure and the governors honest and that is the people themselves. They alone, if well informed, are capable of preventing the corruption of power and of restoring the nation to its rightful course if it should go astray. They alone are the safest depository of the ultimate powers of government."

Recall, too, the preamble of the Constitution of the United States of America, "We the people of the United States...do ordain and establish this Constitution...". It does not say "We the governors".

In short, the petitioners have stepped forward as is our right, as "we the people" to bring clarity and fairness to the inquiry into whether two police officers deserved to be removed from duty and the animal control officer fired.

To this author's knowledge, not a single complaint has been filed against these three officers by an arrestee, defense attorney, officer of the Quincy District Court or the Norfolk County District Attorney's office.

Hearings for two of the three officers have begun at Town Hall and the hearing officer, as is his legal right, is wearing five hats: town manager, chief investigator, judge, jury and executioner. The accused officers' defense attorney asked him to recuse himself as hearing officer, but her refused to do so. Silence remains as to why the animal control officer was fired.

In closing, remember the words of Abraham Lincoln, "It is true that you may fool all of the people some of the time; you can even fool some of the people all of the time; but you can't fool all of the people all of the time".

Let us hasten to bring this sad chapter in our town's history to an open and fair conclusion and begin the process of healing and reuniting our beloved town.

Wigmore Pierson is a resident of Atlantic Avenue, the former talk show host of the cable TV show "Pierson to Person"(1987-1997) and a member or former member of several town committees.

Tebbetts selected as Democrat of the Year

Edwin "Ned" Tebbetts will be honored on Feb. 7 as Cohasset's Democrat of the Year. Along with co-honorees from Hingham, Duxbury, Hull, Weymouth, Norwell, Scituate and Marshfield, Tebbetts will receive his award at a dinner sponsored by CO-OP 8, an organization of eight South Shore Democratic Town Committees. He has been a member of the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee since 1981 and was an officer of the committee for 10 years.

Tebbetts was born in Newton in 1926. During World War II, he served in the US Navy for over three years and completed his service as an Ensign. After the war, Tebbetts received a BS degree from MIT and, in 1949, earned a master's degree in mathematics from the University of Michigan. In 1988, he received a master's degree at the Harvard University Kennedy School of Government.

Tebbetts is a Fellow of the Society of Actuaries and has a US Government designation as an Enrolled Actuary. He was for many years the Pension Plan Actuary for the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company in Boston. Since 1981, he has been self-employed as an Investment Advisor.

Tebbetts' public service has included advising for Pension Plans for municipal and state government employees and for the US Social Security and Medicare programs. In Cohasset, he served on the Capital Budget Committee for eight years and was elected to the Board of Selectman in 1989 and served as chairman for one year. As an enthusiastic advocate and a trusted advisor, he has been involved in many political campaigns, from holding the sign to holding the money. He has also served as a delegate to many Democratic Party conventions.

Tebbetts and his late wife, Priscilla, moved to Cohasset in 1960. Their three sons were all educated in the Cohasset Public Schools. He has been married to Chartis Langmaid Tebbetts for many years. They are both very active in public service and town affairs and are proud Democrats.

US Representative William Delahunt will emcee the dinner honoring all of the recipients of the CO-OP 8 Democrat of the Year Awards which will be held on Saturday, Feb. 7 at the Rockland Radisson Hotel. Tickets are available. For information, Call Agnes McCann, Chairman of the Cohasset Town Committee, at 781-383-0222.

HEALTH NOTES

Handling wastewater is biggest challenge

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Nearing the end of two terms on the Board of Health, one as its chairman, I believe it's appropriate to discuss some of the things which have happened during my tenure. I look on the Board as providing a service which implies a constant commitment rather than a series of accomplishments, although, with our health officer, Joe Godzik, there have been accomplishments aplenty: storm-water plan, numerous grants and improvements of almost all phases of the board's functions and duties, etc.

But the vast preponderance of our continuing task lies in the safe disposal of sewage. Many think that the best way to accomplish sewage disposal is with a sewer. However over my tenure at the Board, we have learned, and there is an increasing general recognition for towns like Cohasset, sewers may not be the best option — not from a cost, not from a health, not from an environmental standpoint, and that disregards zoning issues.

The Town Wastewater Committee, a committee whose members include the chairman of the Sewer Commission as well as the Board of Health, is charged with recommending planning solutions to the Town's various wastewater problems. Since the Town's wastewater management plan is to become an integral part of the master plan and is vital to any planning the town contemplates, John Cavanaro, the Wastewater Committee's Chairman and other representatives of the committee had a meeting with Liz Harrington, the town planner, to discuss the form our report would take. As a part of this meeting, we discussed the most appropriate options for wastewater management for the various parts of Cohasset.

A part of this discussion covered the relative benefits from septic systems vs. sewers, equitability between sewers and on-site systems, as well as shared and satellite systems. Before we start, let us say: it is clear that there is no easy way to make wastewater management fair for everyone. Nevertheless, there is an imperative, as we become a more densely populated community, to avoid the health results of population growth.

It is clear that there is no easy way to make wastewater management fair for everyone.

Relative cost

Because of the recent construction of the North Cohasset and Central Sewer systems, a good basis for cost comparison exists between the overall cost of sewers vs. on site septic systems. The Wastewater Committee made several cost comparison studies between sewers in Cohasset and septic systems in various parts of Town. Conclusions from these studies were that on-site wastewater systems were generally cheaper than sewers; sometimes by significant amounts such as 50 percent. Moreover, current treatment technology results in low-maintenance cost systems with life expectancies from 30 years on up. Such treatment systems also recharge groundwater and provide other environmental benefits.

Technical progress

Improved technology used in current septic systems makes them vastly superior to pre-Title 5 septic systems to the point that, if designed to current standards, the systems can be expected to perform indefinitely with annual maintenance costs in the neighborhood of $200. If one compares this with typical sewer operating and maintenance costs, there is simply no comparison. True, improvements have come to sewers and sewer management also, but many of the improvements are to materials which have been buried for years. As an example, many Cohasset sewer pipes are made of Transite which was a product developed to make use of the enormous quantities of surplus asbestos used as an insulator during the second world war. It was only after those working with the stuff (asbestos) began to die of cancer linked to asbestosis, that production stopped and we started to make our sewers out of more benign and durable materials. High pressure pumping technology also helped sewers with such developments as low pressure sewer systems as in North Cohasset which uses smaller buried pipes and pressure to replace much larger gravity sewer conduits. But these systems also come with unanticipated maintenance costs.

Special problems which militate against sewers.

- Lots of ledge, causing sewer construction costs to skyrocket.
- Sewers in low lying areas and near water bodies have chronic infiltration and inflow problems from groundwater causing sewer users to pay increased fees and causing the sewer treatment plants to process mostly salt water during high tide.
- Sewers present special zoning problems. Presently, Cohasset has no planning in place to cope with such problems.

Other factors

The issue of equitability of payment for required wastewater disposal improvements is a substantial problem and has consumed much of the Committee's efforts.

One document that has come to the attention of the Committee was the 1997 Town Meeting warrant article initiative petition which authorizes $3 million for low-interest loans over as much as 30 years directly to the homeowner for improvements to septic systems. The committee is currently investigating an initiative to update the Town Wastewater Plan to enable the town to apply for such state funding this fall. The update should include provisions for regular standardized condition assessments of on site systems, including rules for monitoring and assessment.

We are also considering a betterment system consisting of State Revolving Funds having zero interest loans and existing tax rebates not only on septic systems, but sewers. In addition, considerable effort has gone into characterizing the town using maps, and knowledge about the status of almost every wastewater disposal system in Town to form priority districts and establish an equitable schedule for upgrades of critical problems.

So as we go into the new millennium the health board is coping with its new challenges.

They called it 'reality' TV

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

The man told the woman, "I've chosen you," and she responded, "Are you serious?" and then he confessed to her that he really didn't have $50 million, only $19,000 a year working construction, but that was all right because the butler hustled out and gave them a million dollars on a silver tray.

And they called it "reality" television.

I don't know about you but the last construction worker I met was making more like $19,000 a week and the last time I told a woman, "I've chosen you," no one rushed out with anything, except, of course, the priest who was looking for an envelope.

Fox Channel's "Joe Millionaire," which aired last week, must have done something right because 40 million otherwise normal people tuned in, confirming Jim Poniewozik's contention in Time magazine that: "The essence of reality TV's success . . . it is the one mass entertainment category that thrives because of its audience's contempt for it."

Once upon a time there were these ten men and women who were dumped on an island off Borneo in the South China Sea where they could chomp on wiggling worms and roast rats for sustenance and run around half-naked spear fishing and plotting against each other while almost 52 million people watched on the boob tube.

And they called that "reality" television, too.

That was such a success that they did it again in the outback of Australia and the jungles of Kenya. I lost interest at that point but I think they went on to do it again and again in South America and Antarctica --- and may try it on Duxbury Beach during the next ratings sweep, for all I know.

I don't know about you, but the last time I was offered the chance to snack on ants I turned it down even though the ants were chocolate-covered and the offer was made by a charming young Filipino woman in Malabang across the bay from Zamboanga.

Once upon a time there was a blushing bride who agreed to marry a well-heeled stranger on "Who Wants to Marry a Multi-Millionaire," and the deed was done before 22.8 million viewers found that her brand new husband not only was a few million short of multi but was the target of a restraining order taken out by an ex-girl friend who said he threatened to kill her.

Furthermore, in real life he was a second rate comic whose best known performance was in the video sequel to the movie "Attack of the Killer Tomatoes."

And they called that "reality" television, too.

"America's ravenous appetite for 'unscripted' reality shows reflects a cultural emptiness," wrote an anonymous critic in the Hartford Courant. "As producers try to top each other with ever-more outrageous scenarios, the boredom threshold keeps rising. Don't be shocked if televised executions are next."

Thank Heaven for HBO!

Pristine dam not environmentally friendly

NATURAL VIEW

JIM SHIPSKY

The Mariner contained a recent article about work done on the dam at the Aaron River Reservoir. There were before and after pictures. The before picture showed a charming and inviting path bordered by lush greenery, yellow flowers, shrubs and slender young saplings. Having walked there frequently, I know there would have been birds, bees, butterflies, and other wildlife. The after picture showed the same area stripped bare. Every living thing was gone, scalped down to ground zero. The caption claimed this was an improvement. I found it utterly mind-boggling! The idea that destroying every living bit of Nature was a good thing made me feel sick. If any readers share this feeling I'd love to hear from you.

I understand how large tree roots might eventually threaten the stability of an earthen dam. At the northwest end of the dam there is a solid granite peninsula that extends out into the water. No tree roots can possibly do any harm there. It had been an enchanting little spot, inviting one to come closer and touch the water. Now it too has been scalped bare. All you'll see is raw tree stumps. What a tragic loss to all Cohasset residents.

I urge you to go and have a look for yourself. It matters that you notice. It matters that you care. See and feel what is being done to your town. You can reach the dam by driving to the end of Beechwood Street. Park in the cul-de-sac. Walk up the lane to the right. Where the chain-link fence ends, turn left and go out to the reservoir. If you turn right where the fence ends, you'll be on the Town-owned land known as the Wolf-pits, also an interesting walk.

The idea that destroying every living bit of Nature was a good thing made me feel sick. If any readers share this feeling I'd love to hear from you.

Previous issues of the Mariner have carried stories about the huge cost over-runs on the heat and electricity bills at the recently renovated Deer Hill and Middle-Senior High School. There have been stories about the lights blazing all night long. I have to tell you a sad story about this. When plans were announced to undertake these projects, I called the chair of the School Board to ask if the projects would be "green". That is, would they take into account indoor air quality, energy efficiency, use of renewable energy, use of renewable materials, daylighting, and airtight construction. He said he didn't know, that I should call the chair of the building committee. I did. He said, "What is green?"

Eventually, after calling the project manager, I ended up with the project architect, and asked him, "Will the projects be green?" He replied, "No. We don't do green. If Cohasset wanted green buildings, they should have hired a green architect." It felt like a dead end to me, and I gave up, thinking about all the financial assistance for building green schools, available from the Massachusetts Technology Collaborative, that Cohasset was ignoring. We could have had schools that produced their own heat from sunlight, rather than burning fossil fuels at double the rate of the old buildings.

Now is the time to do an energy retrofit to Deer Hill School and the Middle-Senior High School. The entire building envelope should be super-insulated, all air leaks sealed, a solar heating system installed, and photovoltaic panels installed to provide renewable electricity. If this work cost $2 million, and saved $250,000 per year, the payback would be 8 years, if energy costs do not rise in that time, which they certainly will, and if there is no financial help from MTC. After 8 years the retrofit would save the Town $250,000 per year (plus inflation) for the life of the building. The alternative is to do nothing and waste $250,000 per year (plus inflation) for the life of the building. What will it take to wake up the powers that be in Cohasset to the energy crisis we all face? To the wonderful potential of sustainability and renewable energy?

Previous issues of the Mariner have also carried stories about the proposed development of the Cook estate. I was recently speaking with Sandy Thomas of the North East Sustainable Energy Association www.nesea.org. It seems Jane Cook was an avid environmentalist, and funded a foundation to make grants to worthy environmental projects. NESEA is applying to Jane's foundation for such a grant. Sandy wanted to know if I, as a Cohasset resident, had any inside information about Jane Cook or her estate. I had to say, "Yes, Cohasset plans to tear down her house, build an upscale senior enclave on her property, and destroy nine acres of adjacent Town woodland to build so-called affordable senior apartments. I don't imagine Jane would be too happy about it." I expect this project will also ignore green building, proceeding on the assumption that fossil fuels will be endlessly available. They will not.

A recap of tough issues still facing the state Legislature

YOUR REP

GARRETT BRADLEY

As we enter 2004, I would like to update you on several issues that were before the Legislature in the 2003 legislative session. The budget was, by far, the biggest issue that was addressed. It was a very difficult year, but we were able to produce a budget that was on time, did not raise taxes and preserved as many vital services as possible.

Looking forward, next year's budget could have an additional $2 billion deficit. More than 50 percent of this is related to health care cost increases in Medicaid. Tough choices are in our future. I will continue, as I did last year, to fight to preserve the prescription advantage program as well as other vital services. The following is an overview of several issues that were before the Legislature last year.

Economic Development:

At the end of the session, we passed an ambitious economic development bill targeted at growth industries to attempt to generate jobs and boost the state's tax base. Legislation such as this is critical given the fact that our state, in the past year alone, lost 47,000 jobs. The law restores workforce taxing initiatives, makes the 3 percent investment tax credit permanent and offers new and expanded tax rebates and credits to help cutting edged technology focused companies.

We also moved to shore up the unemployment insurance system. The legislation avoids far more significant increases that the business community was facing.

Retirement:

Many of the calls that I received over the last year related to section 329 of the budget. This was proposed by the Governor and adopted by the Legislature. Section 329 expanded estate recovery beyond the probate estate allowing The Division of Medical Assistance to recover additional assets that an individual has legal title to, or interest in, at the time of his or her death. These assets include interest in real or personal property along with assets passed to a survivor, heir, or assignee through joint tenancy, tenancy by the entirety, life estate, living trust, right of survivorship, beneficiary designation, or other arrangement. I was, and am, opposed to this idea. It is another example of the state changing the rules in the middle of the game. People have relied on and planned according to a law, we cannot then change that law retroactively. I have co-sponsored legislation to repeal this section. I have also continued to pursue a repeal of the "nursing home tax" which unfairly punishes those individuals who have saved for their late in life care.

Education:

As many of you know, a law was passed by the people in last year's election that called for changes in "bi-lingual education." It mandated "English Immersion" after one year. The Legislature changed this prior to the law being implemented and the Governor wisely vetoed the change. I voted with the Governor to sustain his veto because I believe that the will of the people should have been honored.

A second issue that has arisen relates to the special education circuit breaker. The Legislature fully funded this program in the FY03' budget to begin to address the fiscal impact of special education costs on our public schools by having the Commonwealth share some of the costs. It was our firm intent for the Commonwealth to pay 75 percent above four times the "foundation" level. The Department of Education unilaterally decided to only reimburse at a rate of 27.6 percent. Myself, along with many of my colleagues, have, and will, continue to pressure the administration for a policy change and a full accounting.

We also met our obligations and fully funded Higher Education contracts that had been previously approved.

Chapter 40B:

As I began the past year, I had high hopes that the administration and the Legislature would take quick action relative to chapter 40B. Those hopes were soon dashed when I saw the make up of the "task force." This group was heavily weighted with people content with the status quo. Chapter 40B is the law that allows developers to override all local zoning if they make 25percent of the units affordable. I, and other like minded legislators, such as Representative Hynes and Senator Hedlund, have been pursuing changes that would, among other things, return some level of local control to communities. The task force report, and the legislation that was drafted from it, did nothing substantial to address any of our concerns. It is currently in the Ways and Means Committee and may be addressed this winter or spring.

Public Safety:

We passed a law requiring that DNA samples be taken of all convicted felons and be entered into the Criminal Justice data base. This will be used to identify criminals quickly and make prosecutions more successful. The Legislature also approved legislation to post sex offenders on the internet. As a former prosecutor, I know firsthand the tremendous impact this will have on the ability of local law enforcement to protect the public.

CANDIDATES CORNER

Jamie Williams

Williams running for School Committee seat

Jamie Williams has officially declared her candidacy for the Cohasset School Committee in the town election on April 3.

"As a 12-year resident of Cohasset, and a parent of children in our public schools, I want to work toward changing the administration of our schools to one of prioritizing our children's education, not jeopardizing it with cuts to important programs," says Williams. "Our children are our first priority and our best investment. I am running for school committee because I am passionate about protecting our investment by maintaining a superior standard of education. We cannot safeguard our children's education through risky taxpayer overrides that may or may not be approved."

According to Williams, Cohasset's schools are at a critical crossroads with difficult issues ahead. "We can only succeed in meeting upcoming challenges if our goals and objectives are prioritized and clearly communicated. I believe it is essential to develop a master plan for the schools to prepare for future needs, including the effects of rising enrollment. As a member of the school committee, I will see to it that we deliver consistency and accountability within committee responsibilities:

"We must change the way we create and manage the school budget by eliminating waste and overspending. I believe that if we do a better job identifying goals and planning we can provide an excellent education without making cuts that jeopardize student achievement.

"We must find a superintendent with budget experience who will provide a projected return on investment for identified priorities, ranging from improved MCAS and SAT scores to useful computer skills. I will work to create an environment where the superintendent can ensure a high education return for taxpayer dollars.

"Our existing teacher contract ends in 2005 with new negotiations beginning this year. Negotiations should be built around identified priorities from both sides, where history can show good faith and document positive results. My business experience in union negotiations will provide the levelheaded command to ensure that faculty is compensated without undue strain on our budget."

Williams concluded by saying that, "if elected, I will initiate the development of a master plan for the Cohasset School System and put us on the road to fiscal accountability without jeopardizing the superior education all our children deserve."

Williams and her husband Bob have been married for 24-years with two children in the public school system. She has been a classroom volunteer, committee officer and parent representative for various school programs, among them the PSO President's Board, Osgood School Council and district Parent Advisory Council. She is also active with The Friends of the Library, the Center for Student Coastal Research and Cub Scouts of America. Prior business experience includes management positions with NYNEX and AT&T. Williams is a graduate of the University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

Allen running for Housing Authority

Having filed papers today in Cohasset Town Hall, Chris Allen announces his candidacy for the position of Cohasset Housing Authority.

"I am running for Housing Authority to bring my business and management experience to a board that will soon face more change and challenges at one time than has been seen in decades," states Allen. "With the AvalonBay development alone, Cohasset may see as many as 50 new Section 8 vouchers to be administered by the Housing Authority."

Allen believes his background in business and military service offers a valuable asset to the Housing Authority, at a time when new affordable and senior housing initiatives present an unprecedented need for planning and management by the Housing Authority. These are expected to involve a significant increase in residents with Section 8 vouchers, which are administered by the Housing Authority.

"The two greatest roles in my life, being a father and being a Marine, have taught me about priorities, planning, and service," says Allen. "I will bring to the Housing Authority the tradition of service I learned in the Marines, and my commitment to the future of Cohasset, as a parent and a taxpayer."

Chris Allen is an active member of the Cohasset community, a father of two, and a United States Marine Corp veteran who served during the first Gulf War. Chris is a graduate of Strayer College with a B.S. in Business Management.

" I'm excited about the prospect of bringing my experience and commitment to the Board of Selectmen at this time, " said Spofford.

His tenure as chairman of the School Building and Facilities Committee has seen the on-time and within budget completion of $52 million in new construction and renovation projects.

A graduate of Northeastern University with a B.S. in Finance, he is founder and president of The Spofford Group, a Hingham-based specialty insurance firm. He is married to third-generation resident Susan Woods Spofford and the father of daughters Virginia, Jennifer and twins Robin and Meredith.

Everyone is invited to come meet Jamie and hear her important ideas on how to protect the children's education.

"I am running for Cohasset School Committee because I am passionate about maintaining a superior standard of education without continually relying on risky overrides that may, or may not, be approved by voters. Fogarty debuts her plan for GOP victories

Janet Fogarty shows Republicans how to win again on the South Shore. "As a Republican activist for many years, I know what it's going to take to get our party back on track," says Fogarty. "I have put together a plan to provide Town Committees and candidates the tools necessary to win again, and reverse the decline in Republican representation our district has seen over the past decade."

Fogarty, running for Republican State Committeewoman in the Plymouth/Norfolk District, spent the week canvassing the district to discuss her strategy for achieving local Republican victories. At a Scituate debate for State Committee candidates, Fogarty demonstrated her command of the issues and challenges facing local Republicans. Fogarty's strategy includes a step-by-step process for rebuilding the Republican voter base, developing shared resources for all South Shore candidates, and delivering regular training to prepare Republican candidates to win.

QUESTIONS

BHRC is sponsored and underwritten by Fleet Bank as a public service for readers of the Mariner. It is written by Bob Katzen who has covered the legislature for more than 25 years and has been providing this feature to newspapers since 1975.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local representatives' votes on four roll calls from the week of January 26-30. There were no roll calls in the Senate last week. On all four roll calls, the House overrode Gov. Romney's vetoes of items in a fiscal 2004 supplemental budget. The Senate has not yet acted on the four vetoes.

	Y	Y	Y	Y

REIMBURSEMENT FOR KOSHER FOOD IN NURSING HOMES (H 4330)

House 149-0, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of a section increasing by up to $5 per patient per day the Medicaid reimbursement paid to nursing homes that provide kosher food for their patients. Override supporters said that federal law requires the state to provide these types of specialty needs for Medicaid patients living in nursing homes, prisoners and military personnel. They noted that maintaining a kosher kitchen incurs additional expenses and said that some private nursing homes are facing budget crises and have indicated that they would stop providing kosher meals unless they receive this increase. They argued that without the funding, Jewish seniors who keep kosher would likely be provided with non-kosher meals or kosher TV dinners of questionable quality. In his veto message, the governor said that he vetoed the section because it "unnecessarily requires an increased rate for nursing facilities." (A "Yea" vote is for the increase of up to $5 per patient per day).

$600,000 FOR KOSHER FOOD IN NURSING HOMES (H 4330)

House 149-0, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of $600,000 in funding for MassHealth Senior Care Plans. Override supporters said this $600,000 would be used to fund the increased reimbursement of up to $5 per patient per day to nursing homes that provide kosher food to their patients. They noted that the federal government would reimburse the state $300,000. In his veto message, the governor said that he vetoed this funding for the same reason he vetoed the increased reimbursement. He noted that the funding "unnecessarily requires an increased rate for nursing facilities." (A "Yea" vote is for the $600,000).

$7.4 MILLION ENVIRONMENTAL CLEANUP (H 4330)

House 110-39, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of a section earmarking $7.4 million from a $700 million environmental bond package that was signed into law in 2002 to allow the state to borrow funds to finance various environmental projects. The $7.4 million would be used to ensure the cleanup of all contamination on the site of Norfolk's former Pondville Hospital. Override supporters said that 25 years ago the state dumped hazardous materials on this formerly state-owned property that is now privately owned. They argued that the state has an obligation to clean up the site and noted that the private company is likely to develop the land and construct assisted living facilities or senior housing that would help seniors and create jobs. Some override opponents said the legislature should not earmark these funds and should leave these decisions up to the executive branch. Others argued that they wanted more information on the owner of the property and proof that the contamination was caused by the state. (A "Yea" vote is for earmarking the $7.4 million. A "Nay" vote is against earmarking the $7.4 million).

HELP AMERICA VOTE ACT (H 4330)

House 149-0, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of $1.727 million for a reserve fund to leverage a Help America Vote Act (HAVA) federal grant to Massachusetts. HAVA, enacted following the voting problems surrounding the 2000 presidential election, provides federal funds to states to implement the requirements of HAVA including improving voting systems and machines, election administration, voter education and registration and accessibility for disabled voters. Override supporters said the state is required to spend some of its own money in order to access $11 million in federal funds for these projects. They noted that it is irresponsible for the state not to leverage the federal funds because it is required to implement the changes even if it does not leverage that money. In his veto message, the governor said he vetoed this item "to the amount projected to be necessary." (A "Yea" vote is for the $1.727 million).

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

GOV. ROMNEY'S BUDGET PROPOSAL (H 1A)- The big news on Beacon Hill was Gov. Romney's submission of a $22.979 billion fiscal 2005 state budget. Romney said that the proposal is a balanced one that implements major reforms, does not raise taxes and increases spending by only five percent over projected fiscal 2004 spending. Some Democratic leaders said the package is $400 million to $500 million out of balance. Other critics argued that the proposal does not provide sufficient local aid or funding for human service programs. Romney's proposal is the first of three that will be considered on Beacon Hill. The House is now holding hearings on the governor's package and will then draft its own version that will be debated and amended on the House floor. The Senate will follow the same steps with its own draft and a House-Senate conference committee will eventually craft a plan that will be presented to the House and Senate for consideration and sent to the governor.

GOP State Committee candidates show how they stand apart

By Alice Coyle
ACOYLE@CNC.COM

Not relevant.

Unfashionable.

Disconnected from young voters.

Those were a few of the terms some of the candidates running for the Republican state committee used to describe their party — a party they say they plan to rejuvenate if elected in the Presidential Primary March 2.

The six candidates, three men and three women vying for the two state posts — one for committeeman and the other for committeewoman — faced off in a forum last month in Scituate. Incumbent state committeewoman Polly Logan of Cohasset faces two challengers in the election, while committeeman Thomas Barry's decision not to seek reelection sparked a three-way race.

Sponsored by the Scituate Republican Town Committee, moderated by WATD's Ed Perry with a panel of local reporters firing off questions, the debate gave the candidates an opportunity to explain why they want to work for the party and help it grow at the state level.

"We need another Revolution here in Massachusetts," declared candidate Conley Ford, a member of the Scituate Republican Town Committee, who says he'll focus on strengthening the party in numbers by converting 5 percent of the state's 2 million unenrolled voters to the GOP if elected. That figure would break down to 2,500 new Republicans throughout the district which runs from Weymouth to Duxbury, or about 300 per town, Ford said.

On the women's side, Weymouth resident Anne Hilbert also weighed in on the need to capture the unenrolled noting that in every town in this legislative district their numbers top 50 percent of registered voters.

Hilbert punctuated her point by providing numbers for registered Republicans in the district — 13 percent in Weymouth, 20 percent in Hingham, 12 percent in Hull, 24 percent in Cohasset, 20 percent in Scituate, 16 percent in Marshfield, 25 percent in Duxbury and 22 percent in Norwell.

"For the past 36 years, someone hasn't been doing their job," Hilbert said.

An active member in the group Citizens for Limited Taxation, Hilbert suggested that organization as a good recruiting ground for Republicans.

All of the candidates agree that increasing the party's numbers is important, as is increasing the numbers of Republican legislators on Beacon Hill. Ford even noted that the entire Republican delegation of senators could travel comfortably inside an SUV, while the 23 Republican state representatives could be transported in a minivan.

A Democrat-dominated House and Senate doesn't benefit either party, said candidate Ron Wheatley, a Scituate attorney who has three times run for state Representative, losing all three bids to Democrat Frank Hynes. As it was in his campaigns for the Legislature, bringing party balance to Massachusetts politics is tops on Wheatley's "to do" list.

"The challenge for Republicans is to keep democracy going. There is no real debate. We need to show that we all need to debate and deliberate" to make good policies, Wheatley said. "We all need a two-party system."

Along with Hilbert, Janet Fogarty, chairman of the Cohasset Republican Town Committee, is the other woman challenging long-time committee woman Polly Logan.

Fogarty, who said she is soon to be moving to Scituate, said she has the energy, experience and enthusiasm, along with a vision for rebuilding the party in the district. Fogarty, who worked on Maryanne McKenna's unsuccessful bid for State Representative against Democrat Garrett Bradley four years ago, said Republican party members need to go with a more grassroots approach when it comes to getting candidates to run and be elected to office — a sentiment echoed by nearly all the candidates.

"We have to build the party from the bottom up," said Hingham resident John Cafferty who maintained he has a vision for the party, a 10-year plan he hopes to put to work if elected. "I know what's needed long-term," said Cafferty, who promised to work with the chairmen of the district's town committees to accomplish his goals. "I want this senate district to be a model for the rest of the state," he said.

Cafferty, who ran unsuccessfully for Plymouth County Commissioner in 2000, was elected to Hingham's Planning Board and the Housing Authority and said his town government experience give him the qualification for this very important position.

When asked how to get young people involved in the party, Cafferty was blunt but honest; "I don't know," he said.

Both Ford and Wheatley said reaching out through education was a good start. "We need to bring back civics lessons in schools," Ford said. Wheatley, noting he raised two children, both of whom are Republicans, said party members need to find ways to make politics important to young people, to make it a priority in their lives.

Dispelling the image of an elite, "country club" party was essential Fogarty said in attracting young people to the party. "Young people feel a disconnect and can't identify with the party," she said. Fogarty said bringing new blood to the state committee was a way to bring new life and new members to the Republican party.

"We need a complete shock to the system and a changing of the guard," she said.

For her part, Logan said she has done a great deal through mentoring and helping students obtain political internships to bring more youth to the party. She said speaking at area colleges is another valuable way to reach young voters and get them excited about and involved in politics. Logan also stressed the importance of showing compassion, something she believes the Republican party doesn't do a good job of when representing itself.

Logan has served as state committeewoman for more than three decades. She served as National committeewoman for a dozen more. In all her years, as perhaps one of the best known woman in the state Republican Party, Logan said she's never faced as many opponents as she faces in this election. In fact, only once did she have a challenge from fellow Cohasset resident Nancy O'Toole and Logan prevailed in that contest.

Logan said she's not daunted by the crowded race.

"Competition is always good, I say. If you don't have an opponent, rent one. It brings interest to the campaign."

While it makes her bid for reelection more challenging, the interest and involvement the campaign race has sparked is exciting and shows a new enthusiasm and energy among Republicans in the district, she said. "This is a dynamic party," said Logan. "We have six running for an office you won't get paid for and will have to put money out to get elected."

One of the more immediate challenges facing the six candidates for the state Republican committee will be generating interest in the campaign and getting out the vote. All of them expect a low voter turnout March 2, because Republican presidential candidate George W. Bush faces no challenger.

Fogarty said the candidates know the core Republicans in the district and need to reach them and remind them of the opportunity for positive change in the party. For Logan, calling on people in person and by telephone will be the method to bring folks to the polls. "It's a challenge," she said. "But it's good practice. This is what we should be doing for every candidate."

About the State Republican Committee

- One committeewoman and one committeeman is elected from each of the 40 senatorial districts every four years.
- The objective of the state committee is to recruit and elect Republican legislative, statewide and congressional candidates. The state committee works with local Republican parties and grassroots organizations to identify and train successful, civic-minded individuals to run for and win elective office across the Commonwealth.

CANDIDATES CORNER

Cafferty dedicated backers

A reception for John Cafferty was held recently at the Aisling Gallery in Hingham, hosted by John and Maureen Connolly. Many dedicated supporters crowded the gallery on his behalf. "John's hard work and track record building the Republican Party speaks for itself" exclaimed Senator Bob Hedlund. Republican activist, Don Hussey concluded, "The Republican Party in this district needs a fresh new beginning and John Cafferty is the answer!"

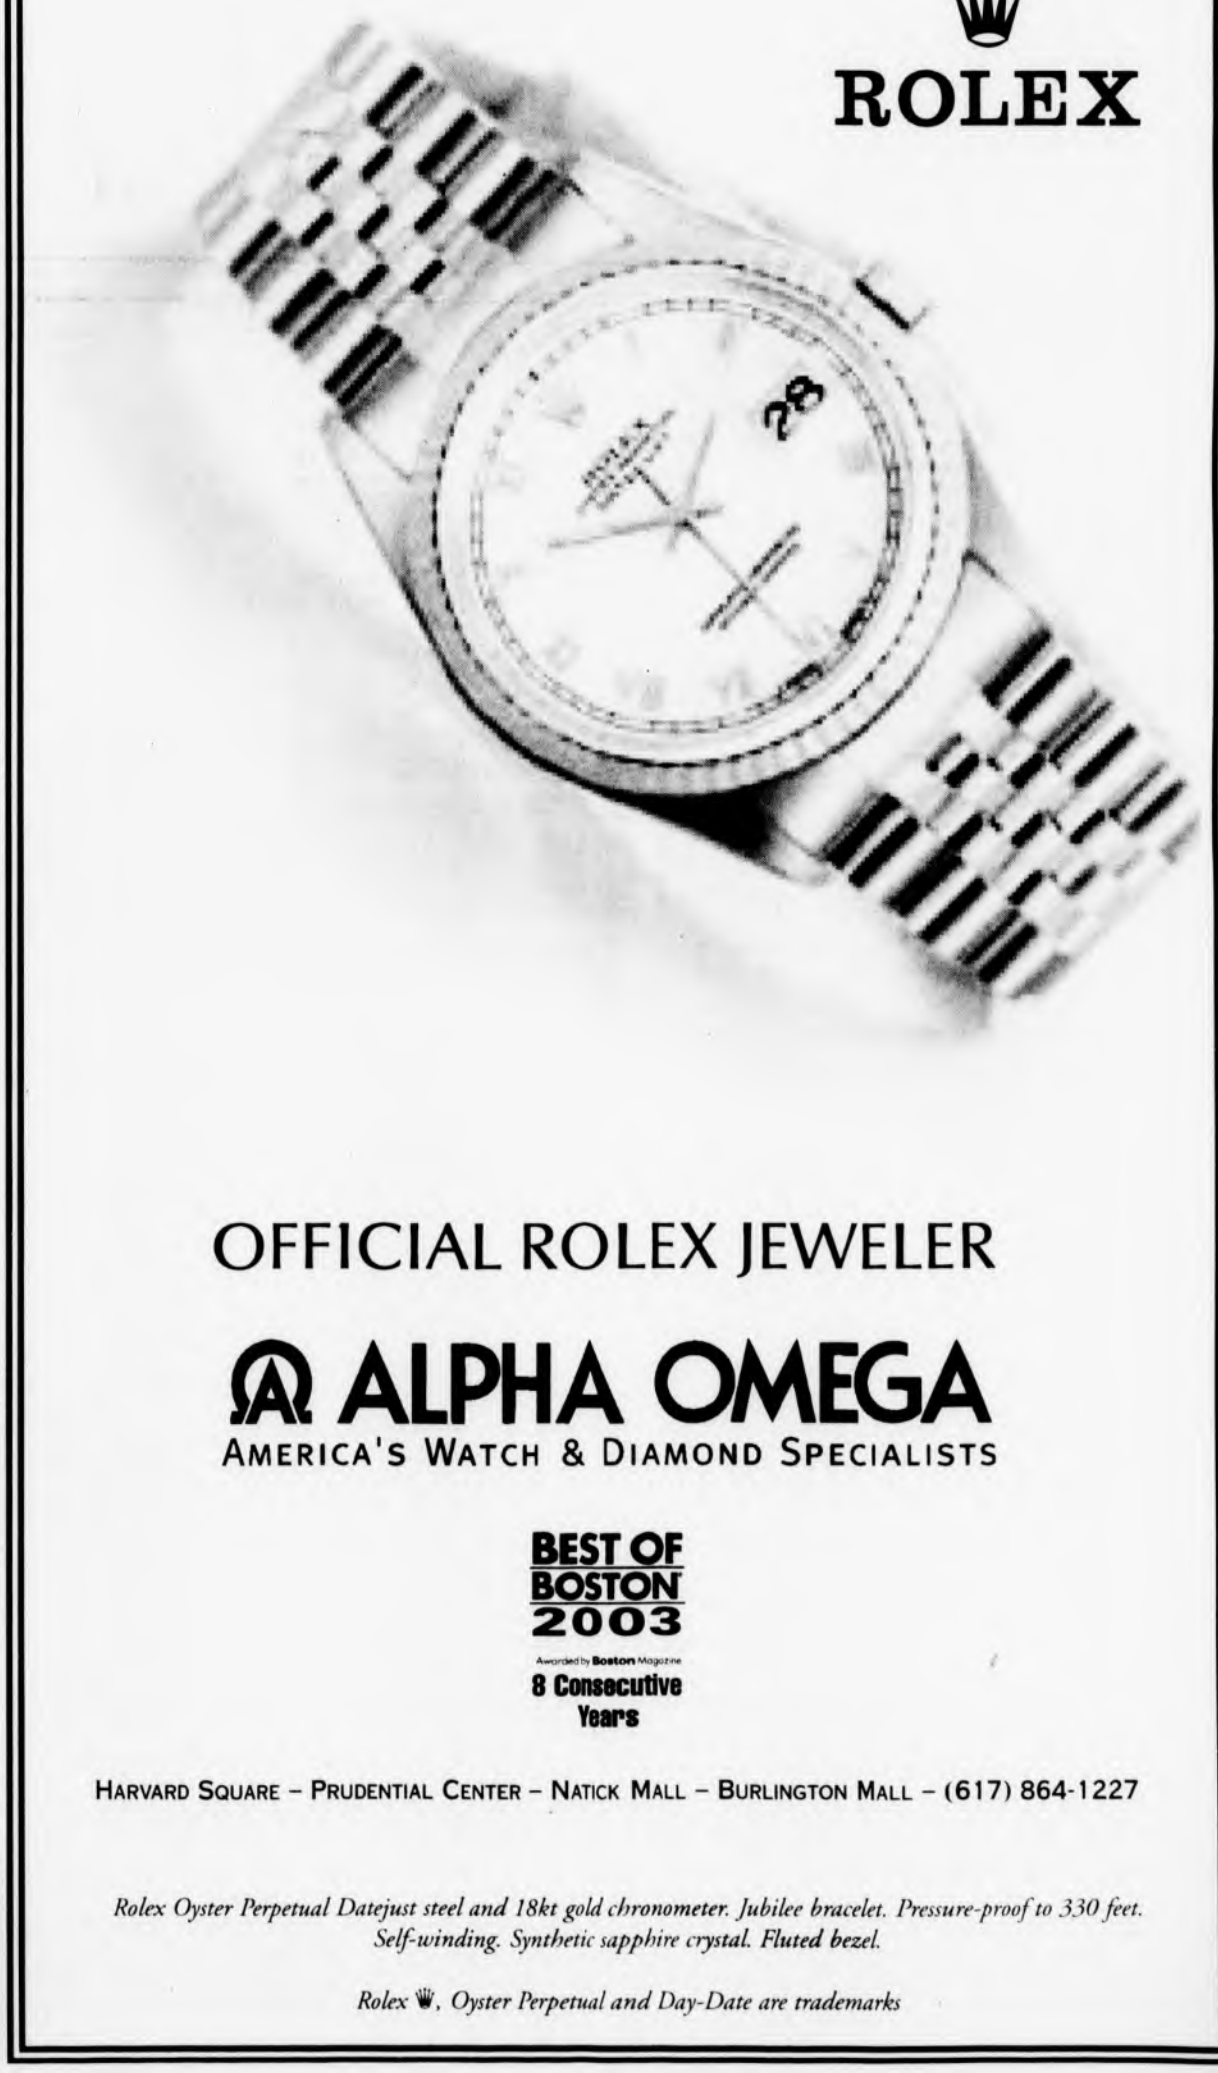
Former State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray is Cafferty's honorary chairperson. Campaign coordinator is Kathy Joyce of Hingham. A partial list of supporters and campaign workers include Deborah Lorenson Campaign Treasurer, Eileen Rocha, Christopher Mirarchi, Christine Cadegan, Janet Gray, Joanne & Bruce Peck, Maggie Costello, Connie Coleman, Ken Schwartz, Jim Claypoole and Carl Harris. Also in attendance were former State Rep. candidate Nathaniel Palmer and Chair of the Cohasset Republican Town Committee Kevin O'Donnell. To contact the Cafferty campaign, call 781-749-1417 or email cafferty@rcn.com.

Ford and American Dream

Unenrolled voters are not committed to either major political party because they don't know what the difference between them is.

"As Republicans in Massachusetts, we've done a poor job of defining what it means to be Republican and what's at stake," says Conley Ford, candidate for state GOP committeeman in Bob Hedlund's senatorial district.

Ford, who spent 35 years in the telecommunications management, knows a friendly business climate is key to economic vitality.



"Republicans understand profit is not a four-letter word," Ford says. "When business is successful, more people have jobs and more money to spend. In fact, a good paying job is the greatest social welfare program there is.'

"We need to persuade the unenrolled that the GOP is the party that believes in the American Dream – a job with a paycheck free from ridiculous taxes."

Deer Hill students to get a lesson in nutrition

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The program Deer Hill students will see addresses subject matter such as eating disorders and self-esteem, something children are just starting to become aware of at that age.

Childhood obesity is a problem that is sweeping the nation, and the Massachusetts Public Health Association is doing all it can to make sure children are educated on how to live healthy, active lifestyles from an early age. As part of that effort, Deer Hill students will be attending a live theater show put on by the MPHA, in conjunction with Foodplay Productions.

The play will address the many elements of building a foundation for a lifetime of healthy living.

On Friday, Feb. 27, students in grades four through six will gather in the auditorium for Foodplay's, "This Is Your Life," a national award-winning show which has received much praise for its efforts.

"It is a live theater performance which promotes healthy choices and healthy living," said Roberta Friedman, director of education for the MPHA, adding that by watching a lively show, children are fully engaged and learning which helps drive the point home.

Foodplay Productions has received many accolades for its programs, provinding age-appropriate shows for both elementary and middle school-aged children. While Deer Hill students will attend "This Is Your Life" — geared toward helping adolescents address nutrition, fitness, body image, and media literacy issues — a second program called "Foodplay" is offered for elementary level students, teaching lessons in healthy living while incorporating juggling, music, magic and audience participation.

"They won an Emmy," said Friedman of Foodplay Productions , which is part of the reason her organization has joined forces with the production company. By teaming up, children in 150 elementary and middle schools across the state will be exposed to the program, and will learn about the benefits of maintaining a healthy lifestyle.

"Kids need to understand we are facing an epidemic," said Friedman. The program Deer Hill students will see addresses subject matter such as eating disorders and self-esteem, something children are just starting to become aware of at that age.

Friedman said issues of media influence on children are also touched upon, because it is important for students to recognize what they see in magazines and on television is not always what it seems. Because companies are trying to sell a product, they send messages in their ads that children have to be taught to look past. While the program is only one hour long, by at least having some exposure to the issues, they will become more aware of the kinds of health issues that surround them every day, Friedman said.

"We've received very positive feedback," Friedman said of the show so far, adding some children have even reported back that it did change the way they live their lives.

In a time when the Centers for Disease Control is reporting that one out of three Caucasian, and one out of two African American and Latino children are projected to get diabetes due to poor eating and exercise habits, the message being spread by this program will hopefully help bring those numbers down.

The performances are part of a Healthy Schools Project by the MPHA, made possible by a grant from the Vitamin Litigation Settlement, which provides funding to support food and nutrition programs in Massachusetts. Friedman said the grant was written to include schools from all over the state, making sure a diverse mix of students from rural to urban, poor to wealthy, have the opportunity to be exposed to the program.

"We want to make sure every kid around the state gets hit with this," Friedman said, adding she hopes children who watch the performance will take the message back home to parents and hopefully make a change in the lifestyles of everyone in the family.

GOING DIGITAL

If you are hearing impaired and have been underwhelmed with the performance of hearing instruments in the past, you owe it to yourself to give consideration to a digital hearing instrument. These new instruments employ the same technology used in CD players to provide users with advanced sound quality and sophisticated features. Digital hearing instruments contain computer chips that take the continuous electronic signal fed to them from the microphone and change them into binary numbers or digits. These binary numbers are then analyzed and manipulated by the computer chip to perform precise, complex actions. The digital stream is then converted back into electrical signals and acoustic signals, which the listeners hear as "cleaned up" sound. Listen for yourself.

If you or someone close to you is considering a hearing aid, your timing couldn't be better. The digital revolution has vastly improved hearing aid features and sound quality without increasing their size. This combination of technology and cosmetic appeal opens up a whole new world of hearing possibilities. You can always rely on FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER to address your needs on a completely individual basis. Have a FREE hearing evaluation soon at 534 Main Street (Rte. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth. PH: 781-337-1144. We offer FREE repairs of any make of hearing aid.

P.S. A digital hearing instrument can be programmed by a computer to offer the greatest flexibility in matching the instrument's response to the wearer's specific impairment.

CHS lady hoopsters earn first postseason berth since 1988

Nobody on the Cohasset girls basketball team was more than two years old the last time it happened.

Some may not even have been born yet.

It has been 16 years since high school basketball fans have looked at the girls basketball tournament pairings and seen Cohasset among the group. All of that has changed.

With a 44-15 victory over Fenway last Friday, the Skippers have made the MIAA tournament for the first time since 1988.

Head coach John Levangie said the team's success has developed during a steady process that started the first day of preseason practice. Improving basketball technique, such as handling the ball with the weak hand or learning to produce from different spots on the floor, came first, according to the coach.

Then, around the fifth game of the season, Levangie said something clicked with the team that made them realize their defense was among the strongest in the South Shore League. The girls were able to build off of that, Levangie said.

"With their hard work and athletic ability, you realize that you can accomplish a lot," said the coach.

A perfect example of that stingy defense came in the girls' game against Norwell two weeks ago.

In a game where both teams needed a win - Cohasset to regain momentum, Norwell to Setting the bar higher

Norwell-Cohasset gymnasts can wrap up unbeaten season tonight

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Just like the Patriots, the Norwell-Cohasset gymnastics team can wrap up its second league championship in three years with a win tonight over Hingham-Scituate at the Hanover Middle School (7:30 p.m. start).

The Nor-Coh girls already bested Hingham-Scituate (6-1) by double digits this season, so they are certainly considered a good bet to complete their unbeaten season. Even if they lose, however, they'd still be assured of at least a share of the league crown and a spot in the South Sectional state tourney.

"It's nice knowing we have at least a share of the league championship, but I'm sure the girls don't want to share it," said veteran Nor-Coh coach Kara Connerty. "They've worked too hard, and really want this."

The girls remained perfect with a 127.7-114.6 win over Pilgrim Conference rival Carver on Thursday, sweeping the top three places in all four events to improve to 9-0 on the season.

Cohasset High junior Nancy Durkin once again led the way with a win in the all-around competition (33.5) and at least a shard of first place in all four events. This included a win for the floor exercise with an all-time high score of 8.9.

Durkin also won uneven bars (8.5) and beam (8.1) and tied teammate Samantha Rosen for top spot for vault with an 8.0.

Norwell freshman Erin Kelly was third in the all-around with a score of 32.1, and took seconds on bars (8.3) and beam (7.9), as well as a third on floor (8.5).

In addition to tying Durkin for top honors on vault, Rosen set a personal best on floor with an 8.5, good for second place.

Cohasset sophomore Kate Carpenter added third place finishes on beam (7.6) and bars (7.8), and Norwell freshman Kiersten Schontz was third on vault (7.5).

The girls will get a chance to put an exclamation point on their perfect season at this Saturday's All-League Meet at Carver High School (3 p.m. start).

Pounding down the stretch

CHS grapplers eye school wins record, postseason glory

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

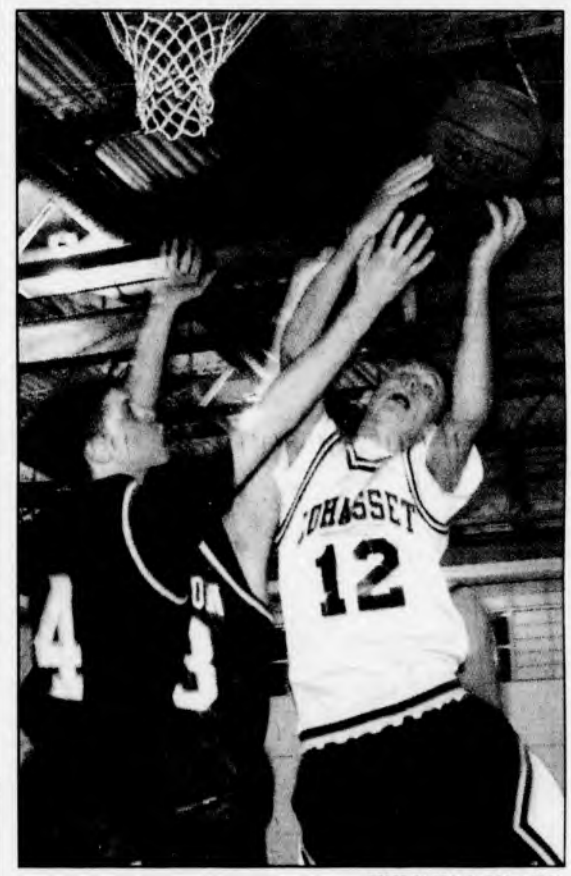
Four up, four down. Yup, the Cohasset High wrestling team is in typical stretch run mode right now.

The Skippers capped off last week with a decisive 38-12 win over Hopkinton on Thursday and then ruled supreme at a home quad meet on Saturday, hammering Rockland, 52-18, North Quincy, 43-18 and Middleboro, 43-21. The wins improved the Skippers to 14-4 on the season and kept them in the running to tie the program's all-time win record of 18, set last year, with four matches still remaining.

"We've got some guys who are really coming on right now, and this is the time of year you like to see that," said longtime CHS head coach Torin Sweeney, who two weeks ago notched his 200th career win.

Junior Kevin Dinsmore, in the 125 pound division, would certainly appear to be one of those wrestlers who is "coming on."

The B.C High transfer won all three of his matches and also got a win at Hopkinton over the wrestler who finished third at 125 at Sectionals last year.



Junior Matt Casey, at 160, wrestled hard with another Hopkinton grappler who placed high at Sectionals last winter before falling in OT. However, coach Sweeney felt getting Casey this kind of experience before Sectionals was more important than getting another win to his already gaudy record.

This thinking was also in evidence when Sweeney bumped junior 215-pound star Matt Baroudi up to wrestle Hopkinton's Steve Peschler, currently the second ranked heavyweight in the state. Baroudi, who reached the New England championships last winter, scored first and carried a 2-2 tie through the end of regulation despite giving away considerable pounds. He almost had Peschler spun in overtime, but couldn't quite pull it off and the much larger grappler prevailed.

Triple winners abounded in Saturday's surprisingly easy quad-meet sweep.

Dinsmore, Casey, Ryan McLellan, Jonathan Littauer, Joe Kehoe and Phil Strazzulla each won all three of their matches, while Baroudi and sophomore Dave McKenna

Cohasset freshman Jeff Brown (#12) goes high to snare a rebound in showdown versus SSL rival Abington Tuesday night. Unfortunately, the Skipper fell, 61-46, and now must win four of their final five to sneak into the postseason.

Up against it

CHS boys must win four of final five to qualify for postseason

By Mark Goodman
CORRESPONDENT

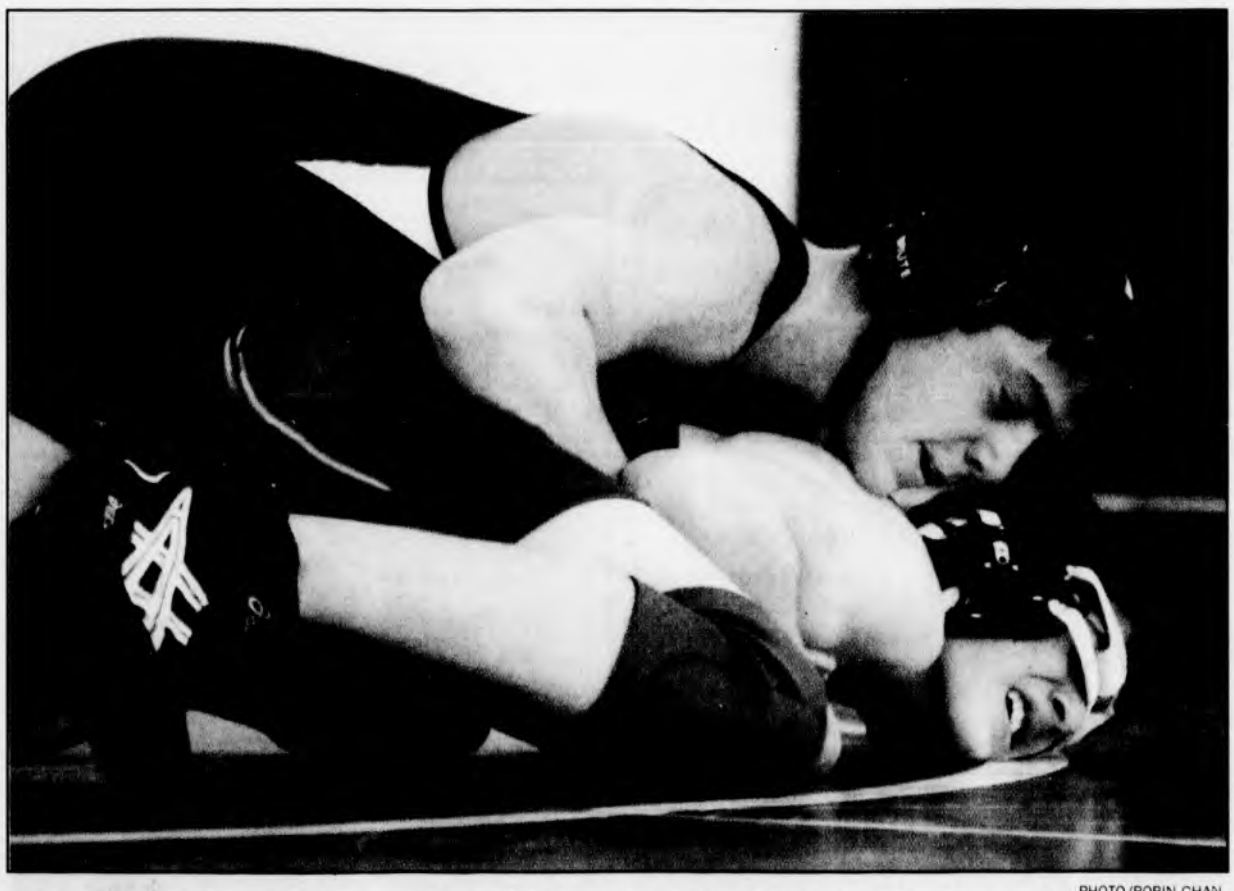
It's now or never for the Cohasset boys basketball team.

After Tuesday night's 61-46 loss to Abington, the Skippers stand at 6-10 going into this week's action. The boys need to win four of their last five games to qualify for the tournament.

After defeating Mashpee last Tuesday, Cohasset took another tough loss on Friday against Nantucket. The final score was 58-48, but the deficit was that wide only because of several late free throws by the visiting Whalers.

Senior Chris Bilodeau had another strong effort in the loss, leading all scorers with 28 points while also collecting 10 rebounds. Fellow seniors Sean Connolly and John Andrade chipped in with 10 and eight points, respectively.

One of the keys for the Skippers was to stop Nantucket's 6-foot-6 center, Sam Herrick, a sophomore who came into the game averaging over 17 points per game. Cohasset did a reasonable job by rotating their big men and making a couple more substitutions than usual to keep fresh bodies out on the floor.



The efforts of Connolly, Dan Tarpey and Nick Arment held Herrick to 15 points on 6-for-13 shooting. The Whalers center did manage, however, to pull down 16 rebounds and block five shots.

Cohasset's freshman forward Jeff Brown also contributed by doing what he does best: rebound. Despite being a little undersized for his position at 6-0, Brown has an incredible knack for getting to the loose ball. He had nine rebounds, four on the offensive end, against the Whalers.

Head coach Ron Ford said he was pleased with his team's effort, particularly on the defensive end, and that the Skippers could have won if they had gotten some shots to fall.

"We didn't play poorly," he said. "Free throws killed us. We just didn't shoot well as a whole. But this was a good test for us; [Nantucket] will Blinded by ambition. Things certainly don't appear to be going the way Rockland's Nick Keough (bottom) hoped they would in this recent bout with Cohasset's Nick Cambi.

Coastal Stars Youth Hockey

Mite C1

The Stars Mite C1's defeated the Seahawks this week by a score of 5-0. The shutout was earned by Jake Burchill who had several outstanding saves. Also deserving credit for the win were the Stars defensemen, Brodie Jackisch, Tommy Prendergast, Adam Benson, Charlie Blackington, Brian Palmieri and Kevin Meehan, who all played great positional hockey and worked hard to protect Burchill. The first period saw plenty of action in fact for both goalies, with great shots in particular coming from the Star's Brendan O'Connell, Colin MacDonald, Justin Fein, Cameron Lamoureux and Charlie Michalowski. In spite of great shooting, the game remained scoreless until late in the second period. The Stars first line off the bench broke the tie, and in fact, earned three goals in their 2 minute shift. Pat Shea, flanked by Brendan O'Connell and Tucker Ambrose, drove to the net from the face off and quickly scored, then turned around and scored again off the very next faceoff. Shea tried for a third goal on the next faceoff, but his shot was deflected by the Seahawks goalie. A sharp Tucker Ambrose grabbed the rebound and scored to make it a quick 3-0. The second line off the bench earned the Stars fourth goal on the next shift when Colby Comeau, supported on offense by Justin Fein and Derek Benson, scored on a beautiful shot from 15 feet out. The third period saw continued aggressive play with good shooting from both teams, great defense and strong goaltending. The Stars were able to add one more goal before the end of the game, again by Pat Shea. This one was a nice shot in the corner, a tough goal that gave him the hat trick, his second this season. Good game Pat. Good game Jake. Good game Stars.

Squirt C4

The final score read 6-5, Good Guys, as Squirt C4 took on a very physical Taunton Bruins and beat them at their own game on Sunday. The Stars took the early lead when Mike Foley fired the puck in from the point to Mike Masciulli who crossed it to Ally Ryan. Ryan fired the puck in the net from close range to break her recent scoring drought. The next 15 minutes was all Bruins as they scored three unanswered goals with aggressive offense and physical defense. Sick of getting pushed around, the Stars collectively tightened their chinstraps after the third Taunton goal. Masciulli stole a breakout pass, drew the Taunton goalie to his left and slid puck just inside the right post. Moments later, Vinny Calorio evened the score on a beautiful pass from Willy Brown. All game long the line of Brown, Calorio and Nick Craig put on a passing clinic, drawing applause from Stars and Taunton boosters in the crowd. Starting the third period, the Stars took the lead for good when Ally Ryan scored her second goal of the game on bang-bang passes from Masciulli and Johnny "Go-Go" Sinkins. Moments later Masciulli stripped the puck at the blue line, skated in uncontested, and lifted the puck in the top, left corner of the net. The Stars scored their final goal when Ryan returned the favor and fed the puck to Masciulli, who stuffed it in from close range. Defensive stalwarts Ryan Foohey, Justin Henriksen, Sam Labo and Foley kept pressure in Taunton's zone most of the game with aggressive play along the boards. Goalie Alec Hurd saved the game for the Stars when he gloved a chest high rising shot headed for the top, right corner. The Stars C4 improved to 11-3 on the season.

Pee Wee C1

Justin Yeager played his best game of the year Saturday and led the Coastal Stars Pee-Wee C1 team to victory against a very competitive Whitman-Hanson team. Yeager scored two break-away goals and Mike Caira scored a third goal to secure a 3–1 Stars' victory. John Carrigg was back in net for the Stars and he also played one a heck of game. Carrigg turned back countless quality shots through all three periods. The entire Stars Pee-Wee C1 squad stepped up the play this week. Chris Fazzina, Joe Fitzsimmons, Phil Murphy, Andrew Bell, and Brian Meehan played very aggressively up and down the ice and did an excellent job forechecking. The defense also played a super game against an explosive opponent. Mike O'Halloran, Kevin O'Connell, Geoff Evans and Connor Ofsthun were very effective at clearing the puck out of the Stars defensive end and in pushing the puck up the ice to the offense. Mike O'Halloran deserves honorable mention for his great play again this week. O'Halloran had a number of fine rushes up the ice and also made some terrific passes to the offensive lines.

won both of theirs.

Fast-emerging frosh McLellan won two at 103 and bumped up to take another at 112.

Dinsmore continued his climb, as two of his three wins came over wrestlers who'd previously beaten him this season.

Littauer, three weeks back from leg injuries, got some revenge of his own over Rockland star Leo Mahoney. He lost to Mahoney last year, and had to bump from his normal 130 to 135 to chase him on Saturday. Littauer got caught early in a five-point reverse and takedown, but battled back for the 10-7 win.

Kehoe, who has only one loss this year, notched two pins and then dominated Rockland star John Erickson, 10-1.

Casey bumped from 160 to 171 for tow of his three wins

Strazzulla, who also has just one loss this year, moved up from 145 to 152 from all three of his matches, but had little problem in any of them. Most improessive was a 7-2 win over Middleboro's Nick Kelly, who finished second at Sectionals last year.

"Phil is just wrestling unbelievably right now," said Torin of his grappler who took fourth at Sectionals last year. "Anyone can get caught in a pin at some time, but if that doesn't happen to Phil, it's tough to imagine him not going far at Sectionals and States, even with 145 being one of the toughest weight classes in our Section. He's worked hard at it, and is a much better wrestler than he was a year ago."

McKenna won both his matches at 135 by pin. Ditto for Baroudi at 215.

Coach Sweeney also considered heavyweight Jake Berger's pin over a highly thought of and bigger Rockland wrestler to be one of the highlight matches of the day, and also lauded sophomore Jake Watts for his win at 103.

The Skippers (14-4) have four matches left, so tying last year's program best 18 win total is still a possibility. The Skippers were slated to travel to Scituate yesterday, and should have few problems there, and they'll wrap up the regular season with a quad at New Bedford on Saturday. Marshfield and Norwood are the other two teams on the docket there.

The Div. 3 South Sectionals are scheduled for Feb 13 and 14 at Foxboro High.

Cohasset High will host the state divisional championships the following weekend, Feb. 20 and 21, something their brand new wrestling facilities have made possible. There are 57 Div. 3 teams in the state and there will be 240 wrestlers eligible to wrestle at CHS on the 20th.

"We're still working out the logistics and making deals with hotels," reported Sweeney. "It's a lot of work, but it should be a great time."

If any alumni are interested in volunteering their time to help out at the Divisional championships, they should call coach Sweeney at Cohasset High (781-383-6103).

Also, any business or individual interested in purchasing advertising space in the official program that is being printed for the State meet is asked to call Tony Carbone at 781-383-9575. Funds raised by the program will help defray costs associated with hosing the meet.

This will be the final tune-up before the South Sectionals. The seedings for that event will be announced by the MIAA next Tuesday, Feb. 10, with the meet to be held at Foxboro High on Monday, Feb. 16.

Only eight teams qualify for the South Sectionals, and that includes league champions from the OCL, Pilgrim Conference, Hockomock League and Eastern Athletic Conference. The remaining teams will be selected based on the average of their top four scores.

The Nor-Cohs have a top four score average of 129.5, which would likely put them right in the thick of the competition for postseason advancement even if they hadn't won their league title.

Only two of these teams will automatically advance from Sectionals to the All-State championships, though there will be two more "wild card" teams chosen based on best score from the three Sectionals-- South, North and Central-East.

Say what you want about the Cohasset High hockey team; it does keep things interesting.

After 1) a 5-3 upset win over Norwell on Wednesday that avenged an earlier season 5-0 loss, 2) a 3-2 loss to an allegedly weaker Rockland team on Friday and 3) a 1-0 loss to South Shore League leading Abington (9-3) with a commendable effort on Saturday, that's the best this typist can do to sum up the week that just was for the CHS icemen.

"Forget the wins and losses, I actually think we're starting to turn a corner," said Virga, whose team fell a game below the all-important .500 mark to 4-5-3 with the Saturday loss. "Our best hockey is ahead. I'm proud of the way the team is playing right now, and I'm proud to be their coach."

Virga believes firmly that his team will make the playoffs when all is said and done. That will require playing one game over .500 over the final eight games. The next four games certainly appear winnable, as Hull (1-13), Mashpee (3-8-1), Harwich (7-8-1) and Carver (6-7-1) all have worse records and there is still a makeup game to boot with Mashpee.

It gets interesting after that, though, as the Skippers close the season with Mayflower League leading Blue Hills (8-3-2), who they tied 4-4 earlier this season, higher division opponent Stoughton (4-7-3) in the opening round of the annual Bourne Tourney and then either Div. 3 power Westwood (10-3) or Bourne (12-3-1) in the championship or consolation game of that tourney.

Virga feels the 5-3 win over Norwell (7-5-1) might well have been the turning point in the season. Sophomore goalie Stefan Parnell played what might have been the best game of the season, in the coach's opinion, and the whole team seemed to gain confidence from that.

"It's taken a while but I think some guys in here are figuring things out," said Virga following the emotional win. "It's up to them. (Junior captain) Ted Straughn has done exactly what a captain should do and put that challenge to them. We've got players who are now putting more responsibility on themselves."

Strong skating and physical junior Joe Durkin, who's recently been flip-flopped with senior captain Mike Devine from defense to top line right wing, opened the scoring versus Norwell just 1:18 in. Freshman defenseman Conor Holway moved the puck quickly out of the zone to Straughn, who then hit Durkin on the fly up the middle, allowing him to walk in on Norwell's returning all-league goalie Tom Sullivan and slip the puck by him.

Norwell junior Paul Snell answered a few minutes later to send the game into the first break tied at 1-1, but Cohasset would score three of the next four to open up a two goal lead.

Durkin scored his second of the game 5:30 into the second, with assists going to linemates Straughn and senior Rob Carpenter, giving the Skippers the lead for good.

Devine would make it a 3-1 game a few minutes later, finishing on a pass from Carpenter to make it a 3-1 game.

Norwell senior standout Terry Smallcomb would cut the lead back to one with three minutes to go in the second, but a Devine slapper on the power play would get the Skippers lead back to two, 4-2, three minutes into the third. Carpenter and junior defenseman Tim Pilczak would get the assists this time.

Norwell (7-5-2) would not go away, however, and Smallcomb cut the lead back to one with four minutes to play.

Parnell and the rest of the defense held tough, however, and Straughn iced things inside the final minute of play with an empty-netter on a pass from Carpenter, the senior standout's fourth assist of the game. Devine picked up the other assist, giving him three points for the game.

"Our big guys came to play tonight and that was the difference," asserted Virga, who went on to say his first line forwards—Straughn, Carpenter and Durkin-- were "the best three players on the ice on this night."

Of course, he also lauded the play of the resurgent Parnell (26 saves), as well as his four man defensive unit of Devine, Leahy, Pilczak and fast emerging sophomore Brandon Smith. In fact, noted the coach, it was Smith's recent improvement that ultimately convinced him to move Durkin to forward.

"Stefan was huge," said Virga. "Norwell had chances to tie the game a few times or move closer, but Stefan just shut the door. Hopefully, this is the beginning of a nice little run for him and for us."

Even the 3-2 loss to Rockand on Friday did not get the coach too far down. The Skippers outshot the visiting Bulldogs (6-6-2), who are themselves fighting tooth and nail for a playoff berth, 35-20, but Rockland goalie Chris Garofalo was just one save too good.

Rockland scored the first goal of the game off a defensive end turnover, and that advantage tripled in under a minute early in the second, with the Bulldogs scoring twice in 43 seconds.

Carpenter would net the only two goals of the third period. However, despite a number of flurries in front of Garofalo down the stretch, the Skippers simply could not punch home the equalizer.

Parnell was the story of the game less than 24 hours later, as he stopped 34 salvos. Unfortunately, the high riding Green Wave (7-0 in SSL play) had 35 shots, and standout Abington goalie Bryce Beauragard stopped all 22 shots he saw.

"I think we're going to finish strong," asserted Virga. "The signs are good. If we continue to play like we are right now, the wins will come."

Girls travel basketball report

The girls travel basketball teams in the Old Colony League for grades 5-8 entertained Hingham Sunday afternoon at the Cohasset High gym.

The fifth graders improved to 5-1 on the season with a 20-6 triumph over their guests. As has been typical for the Blue & White, they scored off the opening tap for the fourth game in six tries, with Carly Haggerty controlling the tap to Lindsay Davis, who in turn tossed a pass to Emma Musto downcourt for a quick 2-0 Cohasset lead.

The Fledgling Fifthers increased their lead in short order, with Haggerty and Musto combining for eight more points for a 10-0 bulge just six minutes into the fray. The Cohasset girls continued to played strong defense and controlled the boards at both ends of the floor for the rest of the half to walk off at the buzzer with a 12-0 lead. Jen Curley, Carly Martin, Colby Smalzel, Logan Pratt, and Kate French provided the strong frontcourt support, with Rachel Fredey, Amy Costa, Olivia Murphy, and Emma Quigley shutting off the Hingham attack on top.

The second half proved more of the same, though Hingham at one point rallied to close within six points. However, a four point play by Haggerty stopped the Hingham momentum. (Carly hit the first of two free throws, was fouled while scoring off her own rebound of the second shot, and then converted that free throw.) Buckets by Kate French and Carly Martin sealed the deal for the 20-6 final count. Haggerty led all scorers with 10 points and Musto was second high scorer with six.

The sixth grade squad kept its perfect record (6-0) intact with a hard-fought 23-16 triumph over a determined Hingham opponent. Both teams played tough defense to start the contest and baskets were few and far between. Hingham took an early 2-0 lead, marking only the second time this season that the Cohasset Super Sixers have trailed in a game. However, some aggressive mid-court trapping by Mimi Mahoney (who had three points on the day) and Erin Fontaine (two points) created scoring opportunities for the Blue & White. In addition, tight man-to-man coverage in the paint by Amy Meikleham combined with solid defensive rebounding by Isabelle Franklin (two points) to limit Hingham's second-chance opportunities. Meredith Kelly (14 points) then took over on offense with some powerful baseline drives to give Cohasset the impetus for a 10-4 advantage at the half.

Lucy Noble, Lucy O'Keefe, and Olivia Sullivan maintained Cohasset's intense defensive pressure to start the second half. Although the Blue and White's aggressive defensive play soon placed Hingham in the bonus situation, Cohasset managed to control the clock and the ball the rest of the way. Kelly continued to display her offensive prowess from the power forward position, with Samantha Crough, Franklin, and Mahoney also getting into the scoring column to ensure yet another win for the Super Sixers.

The seventh grade team also maintained their undefeated mark (6-0) with a 24-16 win over their Hingham counterparts. The Seventh Wonders put forward a well-balanced scoring attack with Sammi Lehr, Marissa Tangherlini, Tess Calorio, and Carly Salerno each scoring four points. Liz Tetreault and Rachel McMorris also turned in strong efforts for the Blue & White. .

The eighth grade squad fell to 3-3 on the year with a hard-fought 35-32 loss to Hingham in a game which went down to the wire. Both teams exhibited a potent offensive arsenal in the up-and-down battle which saw the visiting Red & White foe barely holding on at the final buzzer. Cohasset's Effervescent Eights never quit, battling back from an eight point deficit with under 10 minutes to play, but their attempt at a closing rally fell just short as a pair of three point attempts failed to tingle the twine at the buzzer.

stay alive in the playoff hunt - the Skippers defense carried the way in a 39-29 win. Cohasset forced the Clippers into a lot of bad shots, as the Skippers held them to an incredible 10-for-57 shooting, or 18 percent.

As she has done in most games this season, junior forward Casey Anderson led the team in scoring that game. Putting points on the board is nothing new for Anderson. After a soccer season in which she led her team in goals, she is now leading the South Shore League with 16.1 points per game coming into this week's action.

Also starting in the Cohasset frontcourt is center Ashley Faber, whom Levangie called one of the best rebounders in the league. Senior Jenn Buckley is the team's defensive stopper, frequently assigned to guard the other team's point guard.

Danielle Pinkus and Chelsea Grossman round out the starting five. Levangie said Pinkus has a knack for coming up with a big shot or rebound, , while Grossman, a sophomore, has gotten better and better as she gets more experience at the varsity level.

The top four players off the bench are forwards Mia Lappen and Lisa Musto, and guards Courtney Caron and Nicole Whitney. Levangie praised the versatility of the forwards, while the guards can change the pace of the game with their quickness.

The whole team played a part in the tournament-clinching win. The girls all played in five-minute shifts, which Levangie said allowed them to play with even more intensity.

And now, instead of playing out the string, the Skippers are 10-4 and positioning themselves for postseason seeding. Athletic Director Ron Ford said he is thrilled to see the team qualify for the tournament, and that he saw the potential for success early on in the season.

"I felt that this was the best team we've had in years," said Ford, who also coaches the boys basketball team. "They play smart, they're fundamentally sound, they pass well, and they play a strong zone defense."

Ford also had some good words for his new coach, who has years of prior head coaching experience at BC High and Westwood.

"I knew that in hiring John, we'd be getting a top-notch coach," he said. "I couldn't be more happy with the job he has done. He's a Hall of Fame coach, in my opinion."

While Ford and parents are quick to praise the players and the coach, Levangie is just as fast to deflect the praise to his team.

"They really do, as basketball players, work very hard," he said. "It makes it fun to go to practice every day."

be a good Div. 4 tournament team."

The shooting numbers back up Ford's assertion. Cohasset shot 30 percent from the floor, and made just seven of 21 free throw attempts.

Despite the shooting struggles, the home team still had chances to win, thanks largely in part to Bilodeau. With Cohasset down 40-31 with 10:39 to go, Bilodeau scored all the Skippers points during a 14-6 run that brought them within one with 4:30 to go.

The guard, averaging over 20 points a game for the year, scored most of his points by driving down the lane and drawing contact. The run included two three-point plays.

All told, the last six field goals Cohasset made in the game came from Bilodeau. Despite a few chances to take the lead, however, the Skippers could not convert. Nantucket put them away with a three from guard Wesley Lamotta and several free throws down the stretch.

In terms of qualifying for the tournament, the loss will not count against Cohasset's record. The team will play 21 games this year, with the Nantucket game being considered an extra because they have a hard time finding games to play, Ford said.

Thus, an overall record of 10-11 would get Cohasset into the tournament. Before the Abington loss, Ford said getting four wins down the stretch is not an impossible task.

"We have to go 4-2. That's not asking us to move mountains here," he said. "We have a lot of young kids who have played a lot of minutes for us. It's just a matter of buckling down, working hard at practices, and watching film of our previous games."

The team should have plenty to watch, as they have already played all of their remaining opponents at least once, having beat three of the five teams that are left on the schedule.

With Tuesday's loss, Cohasset now has to go 4-1 down the stretch. The Skippers have road games this weekend against Carver and Archbishop Williams. They have already beaten Carver and lost to Archies, both close games that each could have gone the other way.

The most reasonable scenario would be a split in those games, and then hope for a sweep of a homestand next week against Harwich, Hull, and Mashpee. Cohasset has already beaten Harwich and Mashpee rather handily. Hull, however, has already beaten the Skippers twice, most recently a hard-fought 63-58 victory in the Pirates' home gym on Jan. 20.

Scit-Cohs go down fighting

Swim team no match for larger Coyle Cassidy squad

By Becky Keys
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Scituate-Cohasset Swim Team had a difficult loss to Coyle Cassidy High School last Friday in Taunton. With only 10 swimmers representing the Sci-Cohs, the team had a hard time overcoming the Coyle Cassidy Warriors.

Despite the snow on the ground, SHS freshman standout Bill Grace plowed eight seconds off of his initial season time in the 100 yard freestyle. He improved his best time by two seconds.

"It is Bill's enthusiasm and eagerness to improve his strokes that has allowed him to chop off so much time in his races," noted Scit-Coh head coach Jami Kearney. "Without his determination and drive, there's no way he'd be where he is now. From the way that he swims during practices and meets, there's no doubt in my mind that he will continue to take off more time in his events."

Another up and coming swimmer is CHS freshman Roxanne Tehrania. Tehrania had an excellent backstroke race, and set a new personal record. She also swam her 400 Freestyle Relay to a first place along with Becky Keys, Maura Whalen, and Sheelah Scott.

Jim Zotz, head swim team coach at Brandeis University and a resident of Scituate, held a stroke clinic at one of the team's practices in the beginning of the season. The four strokes have changed radically over the past several decades. Stroke clinics are an important way for swimmers to understand and improve the techniques behind their strokes.

"The practice that Jim held was so important to all of my swimmers," reported Kearney. "They have not only improved their times, but have enhanced the quality of their strokes. Seeing Roxanne's backstroke and Bill's freestyle made it very clear to me that the stroke clinic was an essential component of our season."

This week will be a testing one for the Sci-Cohs, with two swim meets and a diving invitational.

As well as finding books to read, users can learn more about books and authors through Author Read-alikes, Feature Articles, Book Discussion Guides, and Book Talks. Approximately 10,000 new fiction records are added to the database per year, including book reviews and descriptions when they are available. NoveList is available in the library from our website www.cohassetlibrary.org. For help using NoveList or for more information, please contact Judy Simons at 781 383 1348.

Hornstra marks months with history

Dairy delivers the old-fashioned way

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

In addition to the usual eggs, milk, bread, and fresh-squeezed orange juice, Hornstra Farms customers received a unique history lesson in their milk boxes earlier this month.

For the first time since the 1970s, Hornstra Farms delivered calendars to some 2,500 customers in Hingham and other South Shore communities.

"Business has never been better, and this is our way of thanking our customers for their patronage," said John Hornstra, who runs the business. "I'm a history buff and thought using our photos would be fun and would educate people about how dairy farming used to be and what Hingham was like when it was a small town. We're trying to bring back some nostalgia."

Seeing old photos brings back memories from his own childhood. "I remember getting corn seed out of a big bin when Little Plain Hardware was in Hingham Centre," Hornstra said. Others recall seeing an occasional cow peek in a high school window when a class was in session.

"Some people today have never seen a cow," he said. "Sharing the photos through the calendar is a way of encouraging an appreciation for dairy farming and the hard work that went into a quart of milk and still does. That's not evident when you buy a gallon of milk at the grocery store."

Each calendar page shows a scene from the days when the Hornstras ran a working farm. As times changed, the milk production operation was moved from Union Street to the family farm in North Haverhill, N.H.

Historic scenes from the Hornstra Farms photograph collection which appear in the calendar include the fleet of milk trucks in the early 1950s; a herd of cows heading for the Union Street pasture where children now play soccer; John's great-uncle, also John Hornstra, delivering milk around 1920 along North Street in a milk "truck" pulled by "Governor," a horse formerly owned by Governor John D. Long; and John's father, Jack, readying the soil for another spring planting in the early 1940s. A couple of the farm scenes were photographed for Eleanor Roosevelt's World War II book, "This is America."

The proud fleet in the early 1950s when Hornstra milk trucks were a common sight on the South Shore. Manufactured by Detroit Industrial Vehicle Company between 1926 and 1985, these trucks were famous for their "Step 'N Drive" design which saved times when stops were close together. (Photo from Hornstra Farms' February calendar page).

Besides milk, bread, cheese, and eggs, Hornstra Farms also offers many specialty items, including lasagna, Cape Cod clam chowder, American flat bread pizza, homemade pies, and lemon blueberry coffee cake — all delivered to customers' doors.

Hornstra Farms has an interesting history, spanning four generations. In 1912, Hornstra's great-grandparents and their six children left their home in Holland and headed by ship to America, "the land of opportunity." They eventually landed in Hingham, where they worked for a small Fort Hill Street dairy farm. The family purchased the property in 1915. Hornstra Farms has offered fresh milk in glass bottles since that time.

The family bought the much larger 100-acre Jordan Farm on Union Street when they outgrew their original dairy farm. The new barn could hold 85 cows. On moving day, the Hornstras walked their herd of 25 Holstein cows over New Bridge Street to Cross Street, then down High and Free streets. The Hornstra family has lived on the farm ever since.

A replica of the original barn, which burned down many years ago, stands on the property now. A new weather vane adorned with a gold-leafed rooster was recently installed on top of the barn to match the original.

"We hope people who drive by will enjoy seeing it," Hornstra said. "It's a reminder of yesteryears. It looks kind of cool when you drive by."

For more information about Hornstra Farms, visit www.hornstrafarms.com.

Saving Duxbury farm

Bond Printing Company in Hanover, which prints the Hornstra Farms order forms and also printed its calendar, liked the old photographs so much that he used them in the company's 2004 calendar. Those were distributed to some 1,000 customers and others. The photos were described as "disappearing historic scenes of farming and agriculture on the South Shore from the Hornstra Farms Collection, Hingham, Massachusetts."

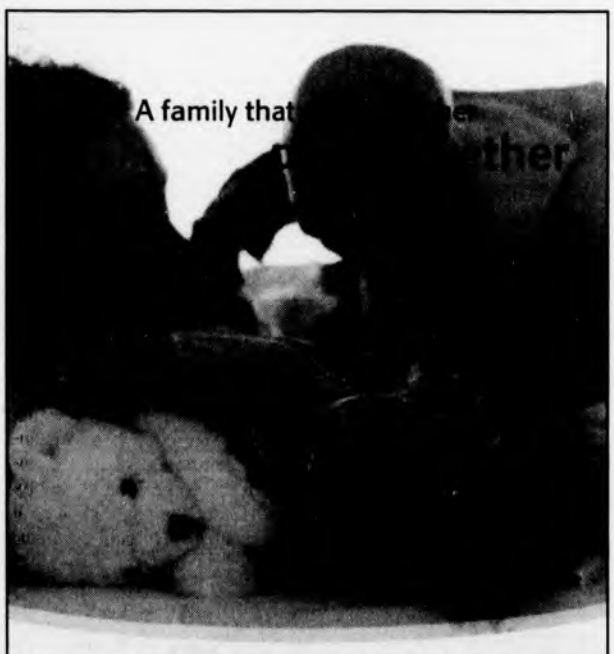
"I love local history. Every year our calendar incorporates old postcards of the South Shore," said John Bond. "We liked the Hornstra Farms photos so much that this year we decided to use them. It was a nice cooperation that came about naturally."

The Bond calendar also included information about the fundraising efforts of The Wildland Trust of Southeastern Massachusetts to preserve the O'Neil Farm in Duxbury, which has operated continuously since 1710, as a working farm in perpetuity. The farm is the oldest in Plymouth County and the last working dairy farm in the South Shore coastal towns. The farm, with 140 acres of forest and pastureland, has a herd of 70 cows.

"The Wildlands Trust wants to save the farm so our children and grandchildren know what a cow looks like," Bond said.

The Trust needs to raise $4.3 million to buy a conservation restriction and hopefully an agricultural restriction to permanently protect the working farm. Nearly $1 million in private donations has already been raised. The Trust is also hoping for $1.7 million in state and town funding, which means they still need to raise an additional $1.6 million to complete the project.

The farm has been in the O'Neil family for six generations and would continue to be run by Carl O'Neil. The protected farm would become a charitable corporation run by a board of directors, including a member of the Wildlands Trust and O'Neil as chairman. The Trust would never own the farm.



"The project involves historic preservation and preserving our agricultural heritage," said Pat Loring, who coordinates the Trust's Duxbury projects. "The great-grandfather of one of the young women who cares for the calves used to work on the farm."

MOST RUGS ARE MADE OF WOOL. MORE ELABORATE DESIGNS ARE OFTEN WOVEN FROM SILK. WE HAVE SOME THAT COMBINE WOOL AND SILK.

WE HAVE THE WIDEST SELECTION AND BEST VALUE OF ANYONE IN NEW ENGLAND, LIKE THIS RUG FROM THE MAHAL COLLECTION BY SAMAD (M-101 RED/RED).

If it feels a little too smooth, if you can't feel the knots, if it feels a little stiff, then it's probably a machine-made rug. There's nothing wrong with a rug made by a machine as long as you aren't paying like it was a rug made by hand. The same design executed by a machine should cost a third of what a hand-made costs. Hand-knotted rugs are guaranteed to out-live you. A machine-made rug has the life expectancy of five to ten years. Many people buy hand-made rugs for a living room, dining room, or entrance hall. They put the hand-mades where there's a lot of traffic. They put the machine-mades where there's less traffic. That's pretty much the rule.

If you're really serious, measure an inch (the tip of your index finger in length) and count the number of knots. More knots per inch are another measure of quality. There are some amazingly elaborate works of art that have as many as 800 knots per inch. (We have some in our store.)

A simpler design might have around 80 knots per inch. The knottier rugs are often made of silk. The simpler ones are generally made of wool. We have some outstanding rugs that are a combination of wool and silk, basically the best of both worlds. At our store, Dover Rug, we can show you everything from an investment grade rug to a beautiful broadloom carpet. We have the widest selection and the best value of anyone in New England. Plus, on our hand-made rugs, we offer a lifetime (That's lifetime) exchange policy.

So, another way to make sure you're getting what you paid when you buy a rug is to turn the corner and look for our label.

Cedarmere abutters petition Selectmen

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

While the Planning Board may have drafted the Senior Multi-Resident Overlay District bylaw, abutters to the proposed Cedarmere development think the board has set a dangerous precedent by granting a special permit without having plans that meet all the bylaw's necessary requirements.

In a letter dated Jan. 23, written to the Board of Selectmen, a group of 35 abutters asked the board, "Do whatever is in their power to thwart this approval which violates both the spirit and stipulations of the enacted bylaw."

The letter states, "Our major concerns are the lack of a proper sewage disposal plan, surface water run-off, the density of the project, (along with the massive size of the proposed manor house), the significant increase in local traffic, and the omission of betterments to the surrounding neighborhood (i.e. sidewalks, etc.). The Cedarmere Team was not required to make any concessions whatsoever to accommodate for their impact on the area."

One of the conditions of the special permit is that Cedarmere secure a solid wastewater plan. Currently, the project has neither plans for an on-site septic system, nor written proof from the Sewer Commission allowing the project to tie-in to the town's sewer lines. If the development team does not get one or the other, the project will not move forward because the Planning Board has said it will not approve the plan if all conditions have not been met. Developers are currently awaiting a decision from the courts, as they have filed an appeal against the Sewer Commission's decision, which denied their application to tie-in to the town's sewer lines.

Abutters also said they are concerned that the project, as originally proposed, included 105 housing units, and remains at 105 housing units. However, the bylaw has a special density component to help build incentive for projects, and specifically states, "The total number of dwelling units shall be limited to 10 units per acre," which means that at 41 total acres, Cedarmere could have built 410 units and still be in compliance.

The letter also mentions that the town's tax dollars are used to pay for the advice of Town Counsel, and that "The Planning Board has squandered our money by ignoring legal opinion."

The Planning Board has gone against the opinion of Town Counsel by granting the special permit to Cedarmere. The board had received a letter from Town Counsel, which stated, "In our opinion, Cedarmere is not eligible to receive the special permit because the project as currently configured does not satisfy the requirements of the bylaws regarding disposal of septic waste." The majority of Planning Board members chose not to heed that advice.

Although the Selectmen will not send forward Cedarmere's application for their affordable units, it is still unknown whether or not it will actually stop the project from moving forward. The Selectmen are currently in the process of setting up a meeting with the Department of Housing and Community Development, which will hopefully be able to shed some light on the situation. In the meantime, Cedarmere is moving ahead with plans, with or without the endorsement of the Board of Selectmen.

Selectmen say Cedarmere project plans are incomplete

town sewer access by the Sewer Commission, Cedarmere filed an appeal with the courts and the final development plans will depend on how the case is ruled. The Cedarmere development will not gain ultimate approval from the Planning Board without a sewer plan in place.

"Applicants must show a plan for wastewater. We as the Board of Selectmen don't have a right to move that [project] forward," said Selectman Michael Sullivan, adding that without a wastewater plan, Selectmen won't approve the project, and if they don't approve it, it won't move forward.

"It sounds like the Selectmen are trying to take the place of the Planning Board," said Walter Sullivan, one of the attorney's for the Cedarmere team.

However, even though the board has said it will not file the application for the affordable units, Kelli Calhoun, one of the principals for the project, said plans for Cedarmere will go forward, because she and her partners have been given permission from the Planning Board to move forward. "The units won't count, but they'll be built," she said, adding it's a shame the town will have units that could have potentially counted toward its affordable housing stock. "It's unfortunate the Selectmen have chosen not to submit our application," she said.

Since early summer, the Cedaremere team, consisting of Kelli and David Calhoun of Sheldon Road and Tom Ragno of Lexington, and their consultants, have sought feedback from town boards and their consultants, as well as abutters, on the proposed senior housing development. The project is slated for 41-acres on the former Hayes Estate off Beechwood Street on the east side of 3A. Cedarmere would consist of 105-units of both affordable and market rate apartments and condominiums for seniors 55 and older.

Under the Senior Multi-Resident Overlay District bylaw, the project is required to include an affordable component. The Cedarmere team plans to construct its affordable building as a Local Initiative Program "units only" project. Currently, the town is trying to fulfill a 10 percent affordability threshold set by the state, and Cedarmere would help meet that requirement. However, the DHCD regulates all LIP projects, and as the highest elected official of the town, the Board of Selectmen is responsible for submitting the application to the state for approval.

While the Selectmen have said without their endorsement the project won't move forward, developers believe their project will satisfy the requirements of the town's bylaw even without Selectmen approval. They have interpreted the bylaw to read the Board's endorsement is a prerequisite only to the actual counting of the units by the DHCD and not to their eligibility to be counted. In other words, for the units to "count" the Selectmen need to send the application, but currently, without the board's endorsement, the units are eligible to be counted in theory, which is all Cedarmers says matters in order to build under the bylaw.

Court grounds runway conflict

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

Word of a United States Court of Appeals ruling upholding the Federal Aviation Administration's (FAA) approval of a controversial new runway at congested Logan Airport spread fast, causing disappointment among residents who have been fighting the proposal for a long time. The court dismissed opponents' arguments as "meritless."

The runway is expected to direct many thousands more flights annually over Boston Harbor, which would impact area towns, including Hingham, Cohasset, and Hull. The court case stemmed from claims by citizens groups that the environmental review of the project was flawed. Key issues include noise, air quality, and potential negative property value impacts.

Thomas Maloney of Main Street in Hingham objected to the use of the word "meritless" to describe community concerns. "Countless items in Massport's runway proposal have been found to be seriously flawed and blatantly untrue by a team of experts hired by residents and local communities, including Hingham, Hull, and Cohasset," he said. "I seriously doubt that the judge even opened the documents to make such a statement and ruling about this serious issue."

Massport spokesperson Jose Juves, on the other hand, said the court decision "reaffirms eight years of extensive environmental analysis and public process." He emphasized that this decision was not the one allowing the project to go forward. That was accomplished last year with the lifting of a decades-long injunction preventing the runway's construction. "This decision just removes a potential obstacle, which was an appeal of the FAA record of decision," he said. "One of the advantages of a court of law is that there is no room for rhetoric in the interpretation. This decision reiterates that a lot of the claims made by opponents are baseless."

"You can bet the judge who made this decision has never been awakened or kept awake even one night by jet noise, but we are supposed to accept this, every night, and be told by Massport that the noise does not even exist."
— Thomas Maloney, Hingham

Maloney called the entire process "a shame – nothing more. You can bet the judge who made this decision has never been awakened or kept awake even one night by jet noise, but we are supposed to accept this, every night, and be told by Massport that the noise does not even exist." Maloney also said it's obvious that those making decisions at Massport "have never experienced the disruptions and noise caused by their careless planning, which sends every runway configuration over the South Shore at this time."

Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, was disappointed but not surprised by the news. "I feel it's unfair that the runway construction plan will result in an inordinate amount of negative impacts," he said. "Unfortunately, we're a state legislature dealing with a federal agency."

Hedlund and Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, have been working with other state legislators — including one from Winthrop, which has been significantly impacted by Logan Airport for many years — to find ways to stop the runway or mitigate the impacts if it were to become a reality. Bradley and Hedlund have also joined efforts with the SSJPC and the regional CARE (Communities Against Runway Expansion) group.

"All along we've looked at safeguards in terms of when the runway would be used and tried to alter proposed flight paths," Hedlund said. "But it's been a David and Goliath situation even though a lot of the data indicates the new runway won't help with backlogs because of the runway's own limitations."

Hedlund and some other project opponents feel a regional approach is the way to go to take the pressure off Logan. "It doesn't make sense to close the Worcester Airport and then build a new runway at Logan," he said. "There's no coordination between Massport and the Providence and Manchester airports, either." Those airports are located close enough together to make a regional solution viable, according to Hedlund, "but that approach has been ignored all along."

Maloney emphasized that he feels it's important for residents and elected officials "to stand up and protect our communities. We have sat back for years, accepting all the added noise until we have reached this situation with Massport, hoping we would not notice. It's time to fight back and fight back hard."

Whether the runway gets built or not, Maloney said, "we should not bear the constant noise that we are already getting. On Sunday night there were two planes after midnight that were less than 2,000 feet over our homes. There is no reason this should be happening at all except for careless operations at Massport. They need to come forward to the communities and find some honest solutions to the current problems before they come at us with this proposal for a new runway."

A David and Goliath runway fight

LOGAN VIEW

MARY ANN FRYE

The Washington, DC, Appeals Court ruled against Communities Against Runway Expansion, the South Shore Jet Pollution Council Trust and the City of Boston last week. If the court had ruled in favor of the communities, Massport would have had to start over to make a new case for runway expansion. A victory would have been great. The judgement was narrow. It ruled that the FAA had completed the steps of the required process. Nothing was granted by the court to the petitioners!

Citizens are so small in the political scheme. The forces for wholesale expansion of air transport are huge, but they are wrong, and they need to be turned around. "Jet pollution impacts don't belong on communities!" is the person-scale experience of the much wider truth. A recent study by a UK based firm, Trucost, that measures business impact on the environment concluded that the carbon from jet exhaust will account for 25 percent of global warming in a matter of a few years if all the airport and new runway expansion plans on the drawing boards are implemented.

The DC Appeals case is one of the places that proponents for quiet and clean air have looked for support. It is not the first place but maybe the hundredth or thousandth place, counting letters to the editor, Town Meetings, Public Hearings, presentations to Selectmen, state elected officials, the Garvey Panel, the post 9/11 Special Advisory Task Force on Massport, state development chief Doug Foy, Congressman Delahunt, Senator Kennedy.

I last wrote to this paper asking readers for donations to pay our lawyer in the DC Appeals Court case. I am glad to say the fundraising was successful, and credit goes to all of you who helped so generously. The FAA and Massport employed at least 10 lawyers. It goes without saying that in any one battle the odds are against citizens who challenge a big entity.

Our battle map is a wide, flexible, front of persistence. We are pursuing every route that brings our needs into the light. Jet pollution impacts are real. Reality gives strength to a long fight on home turf. We welcome your help in the long fight!

Actor and Weymouth native Corddry has two small parts in the national tour of "The Graduate." At one performance during the show's current Boston run, however, Corddry will step in for the actor who plays the title role and get his own chance to play love scenes with Lorraine Bracco ("The Sopranos") on-stage in front of more than 2,000 people including his parents, friends and high school drama teacher.

"I probably won't sleep at all the night before," explained Corddry, 26, last week about plans for him to play the title character in "The Graduate" Feb. 4 at the Colonial Theatre. As understudy for Jonathan C. Kaplan, the actor who usually performs the role of the sexually frustrated Benjamin Braddock in the play's national tour, Corddry has gone on in the lead just a few times during his six months with the show. At most performances, his regular roles as "Bellhop" and "Man in Bar" place him further from the action.

"Jonathan offered to take a night off so that I could have the chance to play this role in front of my family and friends from high school," explains Corddry who graduated from Weymouth High School in 1995 and now makes his home in Brooklyn, N.Y.

Set in 1960s California, the stage version of "The Graduate" is adapted by Terry Johnson, from the novel by Charles Webb and the screenplay by Calder Willingham and Buck Henry. An iconic piece of American pop culture, "The Graduate" is a comedic coming-of-age story about an innocent college grad who is seduced by an older woman. The now classic 1967 film adaptation starred Dustin Hoffman and Anne Bancroft, while the 2002 Broadway production featured Jason Biggs and Kathleen Turner. The current tour is being directed by Peter Lawrence.

"The Graduate" will be at the Colonial Theatre, 106 Boylston Street, Boston, through Feb. 8. For tickets, call 617/931-2787 or visit www.ticketmaster.com

Fired ACO wants job back

Murphy says his termination was unfair

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

When Town Manager Mark Haddad cleaned house at the police department last Oct. 20 — swept out along with Sgt. William Quigley and Officer James McLean — was animal control officer Paul Murphy, who had worked in town for five years.

Until now, Murphy, who is not protected by a union or Civil Service, has been silent about being forced out of a job he says he loved.

The Hingham resident is now speaking out, claiming he was fired for political reasons because he is a long-time family friend of Quigley's and the fact he refused to back the police chief in a meeting with Haddad last October.

To date, other than a terse, one-paragraph letter stating he was fired — Murphy said he has not been given any official reason for his termination.

Haddad and Chief Robert Jackson have declined to comment on the ongoing police matter. Neither returned phone calls to comment on the case involving Murphy.

In recent weeks, Murphy could be seen sitting quietly in the back of the selectmen's office during the first two days of the public disciplinary hearing involving allegations of police misconduct by the two police officers.

"It is obvious the charges are trumped up," Murphy says about the allegations against Quigley and McLean.

Murphy says he has retained an attorney and is considering fighting back and is poised to take legal action to "get my job and my reputation back." He says potential civil suits could involve discrimination and unfair termination. Murphy, 65, is a senior citizen and is blind in one eye due to an accident several years ago.

Haddad told the Mariner on Oct. 20 — the same day he placed Quigley and McLean on paid administrative leave — he fired Murphy due to numerous complaints.

But Murphy, who also works part-time as the animal control officer in Norwell, says he was never told of any complaints about his work or given any progressive discipline. In fact about two years ago, Haddad made Murphy "inspector of animals," a post previously held by Health Agent Joseph

Juvenile's parents seek court action

'Legion arrests' on docket today

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Those who are following the ongoing police disciplinary hearings at Town Hall won't hear any more about one arrest and one protective custody involving a juvenile until after a hearing slated for 3 p.m., Feb. 25 in Norfolk Superior Court in Dedham.

At that time, Judge Isaac Borenstein is expected to decide whether to close parts of the hearing involving the juvenile. He said the press has the right to seek to intervene to keep the hearing open, and the Mariner is expected to exercise that option.

But at 9 a.m. today, testimony about the arrest of Keith Jackson, the police chief's son, and two others outside the American Legion Hall on Oct. 11 is expected to begin. The town (or prosecution) is continuing to present its case involving charges against Sgt.

School board paints picture

Says override is requirement

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

It could be up to the town to decide the fate of the schools, as the School Committee has voted to present a budget which includes a $400,000 Prop. 2-1/2 override. If the override passes, the schools could see a total loss of three classroom teachers, but if it doesn't pass, the School Committee estimates more teachers would be cut to balance the budget.

"Obviously we need an override. We can't come up with a smaller number. This is the minimum we can afford to give up," said School Committee Chairman Rick Flynn.

— School Committee Chairman Rick Flynn

The School Committee, Board of Selectmen and Advisory Committee met last night after the Mariner went to press to discuss the school budget. Selectmen must give the OK for an override question to go on the ballot.

School Committee member Mark DeGiacomo said, "If the override doesn't pass, we're looking at possibly eight teachers," who will need to be cut. However, while the goal is to keep as many teachers employed as possible, when a large sum of money is needed, the only place that figure can be made up is by cutting teacher salaries, officials said.

ICEBOUND

For more than a month, the town's lobster fleet was locked in the ice keeping local lobstermen from getting out to check their traps. This past Monday, thanks to the combined efforts of Selectman Fred Koed, U.S. Rep. William Delahunt's office, and state Rep. Garrett Bradley — an old Coast Guard boat (now owned by the State Police) came down and ran up and down the ice pack creating a wake that helped break up the ice and free the lobster boats.

Shan Shan Nie, who is Chinese, is one of 50 METCO students in Cohasset.

The long road from China to Cohasset

METCO student makes an impact

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Every day, Cohasset Middle-High School student Shan Shan Nie wakes up at her home in Dorchester at 5:30 a.m. in order to make it to the bus stop on time. She, along with 46 other students picked up along the way, ride the bus to the South Shore, making stops first at Hingham High School, then at Hingham Middle School, then finally in Cohasset, where she will spend her day until boarding the bus back to Dorchester in the afternoon.

As a student who participates in the Metropolitan Council for Educational Opportunity, or METCO program, Shan Shan is one of 50 total students who commute to school in Cohasset every day. The program is intended to expand educational opportunities and reduce racial imbalance, by permitting students in certain cities to attend suburban public schools in participating communities, and if Shan Shan's experience is a gauge, the program is doing exactly what it set out to achieve.

Only four short years ago, Shan Shan moved from China, where she had lived all her life, to come to the United States. She had grown up with her father in Sichuan, a province in the southwest portion of China, but with college on the horizon, felt she would have more opportunities living in the states, and decided to pack things up and go live with her mother and stepfather.

"It's like going swimming. Either you drown or you swim, and I survived."
— Shan Shan Nie, METCO student

"I guess I just wanted to do something new and something different," she said.

With a flair for writing and language, Shan Shan spoke English very well when she arrived, but it was still her second language. She was completely immersed into the English speaking school system, which was a challenge at the beginning, but as someone who thrives on challenge, she had no trouble adapting.

"It's like going swimming. Either you drown or you swim, and I survived," she said.

Not only has Shan Shan survived, she has excelled in many different areas and has received much recognition for her efforts. She was inducted into the National Honor Society and serves as its secretary. She has also been named as student of the month at the high school and was featured in the "Who's Who" column of the Spinnaker, the Cohasset High School newspaper, for which she has served as the graphics and design editor for the past two years.

"I love art. I've been doing it since I was two or three years old," she said, adding she has a strong interest in architecture, and loves being creative.

Shan Shan's creativity has been showcased in a number of venues. She created the playbill cover for a student production of "The King and I," in which she also held an acting role, and the program for Diversity Day 2001. She also won first place for one of her pieces at the South Shore Art Center's Festival on the Sen. Hedlund also maintains a district office at 66 Sea St., North Weymouth that is accessible Monday through Friday for constituents and appointments with the Senator.

The telephone number is 781-340-9866 or at the Statehouse 617-722-1646.

METCO program rally

On Thursday, March 18 from 9 a.m.-4 p.m. at the Statehouse, there will be a rally in support of the Metropolitan Council for Educational Opportunity (METCO) program. School Committee Vice Chairman Charlis Tebbetts asks anyone who is concerned about the program's future, which is unknown due to budget cuts state-wide, to come show their support. In addition, Tebbetts asks that anyone who has been involved with the METCO program at any point in time please contact her, as she is trying to set up a database of those who have participated in the program over the years. Many have come forward already and she encourages others to contact her as well. The state does not have a database, and Tebbetts hopes to collect names back to the program's inception.

Snow day reminder

Supt. Edward Malvey reminds students and parents, during inclement weather, school closings or delays will be broadcast on the major media outlets, including television stations 4,5, and 7 as well as WBZ 1030 AM and WATD 95.9 FM. While the fire department is notified as a courtesy by the school department in the event school is cancelled, it should not be called. The media outlets will be notified and will include Cohasset if school is cancelled, said Malvey, adding he notifies the stations of the schools' decision very early. "If we're not there [on the list], come to school, I didn't sleep late," said Malvey.

In addition, School Committee Chairman Rick Flynn said he received a call from a concerned citizen who said it has become a "Free for all," at Osgood School when parents drop their children off in the morning. Flynn reminds parents to be courteous when dropping students off, keep order, and don't block the buses in the morning.

S.S. cycling website

The South Shore Recycling Cooperative has a new web site, which is under construction. Currently, the site has information on the different towns that participate, what to do with hazardous waste, and the fall 2003 and winter 2004 newsletters. To access the site, please visit www.ssrc.info.

MBTA ombudsman provides an update

Kristina Patterson, MBTA ombudsman for the town of Cohasset, said as of right now, it looks as if construction for the Greenbush line in town is far off. "It will be months. Definitely from three to six," she said. In Cohasset, all work is waiting for a wetlands variance, and only the two proposed sites at Pleasant Street and the station could begin construction without one.

For more information on the Greenbush project, contact Patterson either by phone at (781) 383-4129, by fax at (781) 383-0228, by e-mail at kpatterson@cohasset-greenbush.com, or through the inquiry form on her web site at www.cohasset-greenbush..com. In addition, letters can be sent to Patterson at Cohasset Town Hall - 2nd Floor, 41 Highland Avenue, Cohasset MA 02025.

While Patterson's office hours will not officially begin until construction commences, she will be checking for correspondence regularly and is available to schedule appointments.

Fire Department receives $77K grant

The Cohasset Fire Department was given $77,166 in federal homeland security assistance to enhance emergency response efforts. Cohasset will use the money to upgrade breathing masks, purchase automatic defibrillators, and enhance first responder training. The grants are part of the continuing public health and safety mission of the Department of Homeland Security, which includes the Federal Emergency Management Agency and the US Fire Administration. The funds come from the competitive National Assistance to Firefighters grant program, which awards one-year grants to upgrade the first response capability of local fire departments across the country. The towns of Weymouth and Barnstable were also given funding of $194,754 and $65,052, respectively.

Brush at the RTF

Residential brush will be accepted through April 30. No trees over 3 inches in diameter. No contractors please.

CEA gets state grant

State Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, and state Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, announced the Cohasset Council on Elder Affairs is to be the recipient of $6,956 in a Formula Grant Award. The award is from the Executive Office of Elder Affairs. The money is intended to hire a part-time secretary and cover additional expenses for the council.

EOEA Formula Grants are calculated based upon the size of the town's elderly population.

Town Census for 2004

The Town Census for 2004 has been mailed to each household. Information obtained from the census is ultimately used to prepare the street list, annual registry of voters, school list, dog owner list, and jury list. It also establishes eligibility for resident's tuition at state colleges, for veteran reimbursement, for senior citizen programs and other benefits. The census provides valuable information to various departments throughout the town.

Dog forms are on a tear off portion of the census forms. The licenses are valid through Dec. 31, 2004. Dog forms need to be returned as soon as possible although you may have recently renewed your 2003 license. If you did not receive your census, contact the Town Clerk's office.

Broken fence charge is still before Quincy District Court

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The good news for the three men charged with breaking spindles in the handicapped railing at the American Legion Hall Street during a wrestling match outside the barroom last Oct. 11 is that they don't have to appear in court for the next round.

The bad new is the felony charge of malicious destruction of property valued over $250 is still pending in Quincy District Court and the District Attorney's office is also appealing a judge's decision dismissing the charges of affray and disorderly conduct.

That October night Sgt. William Quigley arrested the men on the three charges. The arrests are now part of an ongoing disciplinary hearing at Town Hall involving allegations of abuse of police power by the sergeant.

In fact, the "Legion arrests" are next on the agenda at the disciplinary hearing which was scheduled to resume at 9 a.m. today in the selectmen's office.

During Monday's pretrial conference, Judge Robert Tochka waived the need for Keith Jackson, Jerry Cogill and Adam Thibault to be present for a status hearing slated for 9 a.m., April 6. Monday's proceeding was at least the third time the men have appeared in court on this matter.

Initially the men were slated to be arraigned on the charges Oct. 14, but then police prosecutor Rick Grassie didn't process the complaint at court because of a letter signed by the post commander that was presented to him by Keith Jackson's attorney, Ronald Rice, stating damage to the railing was preexisting. The District Attorney's office subsequently removed Grassie as prosecutor for not filing the complaint. Judge Mark Coven issued the malicious destruction charge following a Nov. 11 probable cause hearing, and the men were arraigned Nov. 20.

"Dismiss it now and save the Commonwealth the expense."
— Bill Bowling, attorney

Tochka said Monday he needed time to review the tapes of the Nov. 11 probable cause hearing conducted by Coven, who wrote the decision issuing the malicious destruction charge but dismissing the charges of affray and disorderly conduct. (The DA is appealing part of Coven's decision and is seeking to have the dismissed charges brought forward.)

It was at least the second time the tapes were raised. At pa retrial hearing on Dec. 6, assistant DA Michael Connolly argued before Judge Tochka that the hearing be continued until the DA's office had time to review the tapes of the probable cause hearing. The pre-trail hearing slated for Jan. 7 was continued until this past Monday, Feb. 9.

But Monday, Connolly said the tapes were not received in a timely manner and he did not know if they had been transcribed.

Tochka discussed procedural matters with the men's attorneys, Rice, Robert Cohen and Bill Bowling, as their three young clients stood behind them in the courtroom on Monday. Efforts to have Judge Coven, who was in a courtroom across the hall, conduct the hearing didn't materialize despite the urging of the attorneys because they said Coven was familiar with the case.

On behalf of their clients, the three attorneys had all filed motions to dismiss the malicious destruction charge. At Monday's proceeding, they argued the malicious destruction charge should be dismissed due to lack of evidence.

Tochka was concerned he was being asked to dismiss a charge that another judge (Coven) had found probable cause for and did not dismiss, hence the need for the tapes.

Cohen, who is representing Cogill, argued "willful malicious destruction" involves malice. He noted the facts show the men were "horsing around" and if they indeed damaged the fence, it was accidental and not intentional.

Bowling, Thibault's attorney, agreed saying even if it had been a real fight and the men "were really going after each other," property damage accompanying a violent crime doesn't make it malicious.

"There's no evidence of malice," Bowling said. "There's no evidence of anything close to malice."

The attorneys argued it did not make sense to bring this matter to trial. "Dismiss it now and save the Commonwealth the expense," Bowling said.

Rice said his client, Keith Jackson, may have been yelling at the others who were rolling around on the ground but did not cause any damage to the fence himself.

"Everything you've got before you is not enough for that complaint to issue," Rice said. "It's just not there and it should be dismissed prior to going to trial."

Assistant DA Connolly said Coven's written decision makes it clear there was probable cause for the arrest and charge of malicious destruction. He said at this stage the motions to dismiss are premature.

"The individuals were intoxicated and rolling around – whether there was malicious destruction is a trial matter," Connolly said.

Fired ACO wants his position back

Godzik, who planned to retire. The additional duties increased his hours from 20 to 25 hours per week.

As part of his job as animal control officer — a post that pays about $15,000 a year — Murphy kept detailed records of every call and what action was taken.

"If there were complaints about my work," Murphy says, "then Haddad failed in his responsibility to call me in and tell me about them. Neither Haddad nor Jackson ever sat down with me to say 'we've had complaints – what's going on?'

"They never called me in – it was just a cold turkey termination and I was never been given a reason why."

But Haddad did call Murphy in around Oct. 14 to reprimand him for allegedly "bad mouthing" Chief Jackson to the merchants around town, Murphy recalls.

"During that meeting, Haddad demanded my 100 percent support of Chief Jackson and I told him I couldn't provide it because of problems at the police department," he says.

While Murphy admits he may have said something "off the cuff" that apparently got back to Haddad, "I do have freedom of speech," he points out.

Murphy categorically denied he was spreading malicious gossip. "It was like barroom conversation," Murphy recalls. "People would ask 'what's the latest? Is this true?"

Murphy says Jackson handed him the termination letter from Haddad at the police station on Oct. 20 in front of other police department employees. The terse one paragraph letter said he was fired and to turn in all is equipment.

To Murphy, who says he enjoyed years of praise and positive feedback under former Police Chief Brian Noonan, says his phone calls to Haddad asking why he was abruptly fired were not returned.

Before considering legal action, Murphy said he thought about "whether I want to spend $15,000 on attorney's fees to get a $15,000 job back."

"But I want to clear my name," he says. "I'm in good health and I want to work until I'm 70. I want to be reinstated and I want an apology from Haddad and Jackson."

Murphy described the charges against McLean and Quigley as a "political witch hunt."

"Bill and Jimmy have done nothing wrong," he says. "The three of us were just thorns in (chief) Jackson's side."

William Quigley.

The juvenile's parents sought an injunction in Superior Court to close the part of the hearings involving their child. Monday's court proceeding in Dedham postponed the continuation of the disciplinary hearing for the second time. Last Thursday's session at Town Hall was rescheduled to this past Monday to provide an additional attorney from Town Counsel's office time to prepare.

Public interest in the hearings is high. The Mariner office in Hingham received numerous calls asking why Monday's hearing did not take place.

During the first two days of hearings, Jan 28 and 29, efforts were made not to reveal the identity of the juvenile, who is under 17, and others whose arrests are the subject of charges facing Sgt. Quigley and Officer James McLean. Those arrested were supposed to be referred to only by the first initial of their last name such as "Mr. X" but the juvenile's last name and street address were inadvertently revealed during testimony.

Borenstein said he didn't issue a ruling but the attorneys involved have agreed on their own to hold off on that part of the hearing about allegations involving the juvenile until after Feb. 25. They are also preparing briefs for the judge.

Doug Louison, who is representing the officers, said the juvenile's family is asserting the privacy rights of their child trump the privacy rights of the officers. "We disagree," he said.

Louison said he didn't think "relative to criminal proceedings juveniles have over arching privacy rights."

The town has charged both Quigley and McLean with conduct unbecoming an officer for drinking on duty at the Rod & Gun Club. McLean faces charges of inappropriate activity in one arrest and three arrests and one booking procedure by Quigley are being questioned. The officers have been on paid administrative leave since Oct. 20 and did not learn about the charges until Jan. 13.

The officers, who asked their hearings be held in public, will present their side once the prosecution rests. Borenstein's ruling Feb. 25 will determine if part of their defense will have to be conducted behind closed doors.

Town Manager Mark Haddad, who is the hearing officer, will decide what punishment if any to mete out including possible termination. The officers have the right to appeal Haddad's decision to Civil Service.

School board budget picture that limits the amount a town can raise its tax levy over the prior year without an override, which is first approved at Town Meeting and then by at the ballot box.

The school budget is increasing this year by 6.45 percent, or $723,753, for a total recommended budget of $11,942,050. However, of that increase, a large portion has to be set aside to fulfill contractual obligations.

"The salary requirements are 3.16 percent of our budget. Before we even start, it eats up a lot of our increase," Flynn said, adding that means right off the bat, $355,452 needs to be taken out of the budget. Flynn added the contracts were "negotiated in good faith three years ago," and the schools have to honor that agreement. At the time the contracts were signed, there was no crystal ball that would have predicted what the economic climate could have looked like a few years out, and the schools need to stand by what was agreed upon, he said.

The second most significant budget item is the $223,000 cost for utilities. The increase is due almost entirely to the renovations at the schools, and while the School Committee expected it would cost more to run larger buildings, the increase in the price of fuel coupled with the new heating system which is constantly heating up fresh air from the outside, has caused an expense the schools must address.

"We can't not pay our utility bills," said Flynn.

In addition to the salary requirements and utilities costs, the schools have some obligations that need to be fulfilled in terms of special education. In order to be able to provide the services needed for the current students in the school system, it was necessary to add one special education teacher at Osgood and one at the middle school, each at a salary of $42,000. There will also be a school psychologist added to the payroll at $45,000 and an increase in special education transportation of $40,000.

Supt Edward Malvey said while the school system currently has a great special education program, in the future, there is expected to be an increase in enrollment. That could impact the amount of students in the special education program, he said. Although the town is not able to fully anticipate what the needs of future students might be, based on current student's needs, it has been deemed necessary to add staff to the program or risk having Cohasset's students sent out of district to receive the help they need.

"We have a great special education program. However, if we can't meet the needs of the children, we will have to send them elsewhere," said Malvey, adding the schools pay for those children out-of-district services, including transportation costs. However, by doing the necessary upgrades to the program the schools currently offer, the schools will be better equipped to provide services in-house, Malvey said.

Tough decisions

But in order to accommodate for the increases, there have to be decreases, and the School Committee had some tough decisions to make. To begin, three elementary level teachers will lose their jobs to the tune of $105,000. Although the budget specifies it will be two Osgood teachers and one Deer Hill teacher who lose their positions, because of the pending grade shift which will take place next fall, it is not certain where the teachers will ultimately be taken from. In addition, the School Committee decided to eliminate the position of Director of Physical Education and Health, currently held by Michael Gill, to the tune of $85,322.

There will also be some positions in the schools which will change in scope, rather than be totally eliminated. Current Curriculum Director Ruth Fennessey will now serve not only in her usual job, but as the Middle School Administrator. When planning for the reorganization of the schools, it was decided an administrator was necessary to ensure the new renovations to form two separate schools under one building are in fact separate in all aspects. By allowing Fennessey to essentially serve as a place holder, the position can begin to take shape throughout the course of the year, and can be revisited as a full time position during the next budget talks. In the meantime, the principals for all three schools will have to help pick up some of the duties which Fennessey held this year. Fennessey's position currently pays $77,792, but with her split duties will be paid $80,000. While it is a wash in terms of funding, it will allow the position to begin at the middle school.

The position of Business Manager, currently held by Ivan Klimko will be changed to a part time clerk position, for a savings of $45, 356. The Middle School athletics program will also change from an interscholastic program to an intramural one which is self-sufficient in terms of funding, which will save the schools $68,000.

Vice Chairman Chartis Tebbetts said even if the override passes, it will still be a reduction from the increases of the past, and she is concerned people don't understand the ramifications of cutting programs.

"It's a lot easier to cut than it is to restore. If we had the right state and federal aid, we wouldn't have a problem. It's a pittance in the federal budget, but we're not getting it," she said.

All seats spoken for in Town Election

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Town Clerk Marion Douglas may get her wish. Every space next to a position on the ballot for the April 3 Town Election will have at least one name if all those who pulled papers return them by 5 p.m., Tuesday.

Nomination papers with the requisite number of signatures must be returned to the Town Clerk's Office by 5 p.m. Feb. 17. The last day to take out papers is today, Feb. 12.

Expected to add some spice to this year's election are three potential races: a four-person race for two seats on the School Committee; and races for one-year seats on the Planning Board and Housing Authority.

Nomination papers must be returned by 5 p.m., Tuesday, Feb. 17.

Stuart Ivimey, who is an attorney and chairman of the Community Preservation Committee, and Joseph Nedrow, chairman of the Senior Housing Committee, have both pulled papers for the one-year remaining of Chris Ford's term on the Planning Board. Ford, who spends time in Florida, recently resigned.

Mike Wescott of River Road, who is a member of the Growth & Development Committee and head of the anti-Avalon group Cohasset Action, is running for the five-year Planning Board seat being vacated by Bill Good, who decided not to seek a fourth term.

Chris Allen, 21 Pleasant St., and Janice Rosano of 60 Elm St. have pulled papers for the one-year unexpired term on the Cohasset Housing Authority. The seat was vacated by Joanne Young, who moved away.

There is the potential for a four-way race for two seats on the School Committee. Incumbent School Committee member Pat Martin of Linden Drive plans to seek a third term while Adrienne MacCarthy of Doane Street, Jamie Williams of Surry Drive and Scott O'Grady of Sohier Street are hoping for their first. Incumbent Mark DeGiacomo is not seeking a third term.

School Committee member Rick Shea Margin Street, who was appointed to fill Jane Pescatore's seat in September, pulled papers for the one-year remaining of Pescatore's unexpired term. Pescatore resigned from the School Committee to accept employment with the school department.

Selectman Merle Brown of Beechwood Street, who is seeking a fourth term, and Rob Spofford of Heather Drive are running for two seats on the Board of Selectmen. Incumbent Selectman Tom Callahan is not seeking reelection.

Nathaniel Palmer of Little Harbor Road will run for the seat being vacated by Rob Kasameyer on the Water Commission and Elsa Miller of Reservoir Road is seeking reelection to the Board of Assessors. Steve Bobo of Jerusalem Road, chairman of the Board of Health, has taken out papers for a third term.

There are three seats and three candidates for the Board of Library Trustees: incumbents Sarah Pease of Sankey Road and Barbara Power of Beach Streeet; and Stacey Weaver, 44 Nichols Road, who is seeking her first term. Trustee June Hubbard is not seeking reelection.

Rick Grassie recently resigned from the Recreation Commission leaving a two-year unexpired term; Lisa LoJacona, 111 Nichols Road, pulled papers for that seat.

Recreation Commissioner Anthony Carbone is seeking reelection. Ann "Nancy" Barrett has pulled papers for reelection to a five-year term onf the Cohasset Housing Authority and Sewer Commissioner Sean Cunning is seeking another three-year term.

The locals take over at Cohasset Harbor Resort

For a business to do well, it needs to have the support of the surrounding community, but to celebrate real success, there needs to be local support from the inside out. Luckily for the Cohasset Harbor Resort, which includes the Cohasset Harbor Inn (formerly Kimball's), Atlantica Restaurant and the Olde Salt House, four key management positions are filled by town residents who have strong ties to the community, which allows customers to consistently be provided with the service they expect, as well as a friendly smile.

Director of Operations Joe Campbell, General Manager Joe Dooley, Functions Manager Michelle Scully, and Front Desk Manager Ellie Andrews are all essential parts of the operation at the Cohasset Harbor Resort. Because they know the community so well, they are able to anticipate the expectations of residents, as well as provide a welcoming environment for out-of-towners.

"It's exciting for them to bring in non-local people and show off their hometown," said Katie Howard, Director of Marketing and Sales for the Cohasset Harbor Resort.

Ellie Andrews has been working at the Cohasset Harbor Inn for the past 25 years. While she may have grown up in Rockland, Maine, she has been living in Cohasset for the past 30 years and knows the ins and outs of the town. Andrews began working as a waitress in the dining room, and over the years "kind of slid into the front desk," position, she said.

"She knew more about the property than anyone else," said Howard.

Andrews said one of her favorite aspects of the job is "the variety of people you run into and deal with on a day to day basis," which includes locals as well as out of town guests who arrive for various functions.

While a good portion of her job entails overseeing the front desk, which requires making reservations, checking guests in and out, and coordinating housekeeping and maintenance, she also plays a big part in making sure those attending functions who stay at the Inn are more than comfortable. In addition, Andrews is also overseeing the $1 million renovations to the Inn.

"She makes sure the rooms are up to standard, and makes sure the guests' stay is a pleasant one," said Howard.

Andrews also helps Functions Manager Michelle Scully during wedding preparations. She books the rooms and makes sure anything the bride and groom need in terms of accommodations are met, so both they and their guests have a positive wedding experience.

However, in the wake of all the preparation, it is ultimately up to Scully to make sure the festivities go smoothly, and while a good majority of functions the Resort hosts are weddings, Scully also plans wedding and baby showers, corporate functions, and family parties.

Scully had never anticipated becoming a functions planner, and had aspirations of becoming an elementary school teacher after graduating from Cohasset High School. However, when she came home during vacation from Northeastern University, she would work as a waitress at the former Hugo's (now Atlantica), which she continued doing after graduation. From then on, "I never left," she said, and couldn't be happier with her decision.

"My favorite part is getting to know the families, and the brides especially," she said, adding she feels very lucky she has come to know so many nice brides over the years. "We have had no bride-zillas," she said with a smile.

And over the years, some of those brides have been from the Dooley family, of which General Manager Joe Dooley is a part. As the General Manager, Dooley is in charge of myriad day-to-day operational tasks including scheduling and answering customer feedback.

Dooley is another proud graduate of Cohasset High School, and was a member of the class of 1974. He too had different aspirations after graduation and headed off to Bryant College in Smithfield, R.I., looking to receive a degree in accounting. However, after he took his first two courses, he knew accounting was not the route he wanted to take and switched his course load to pursue a degree in hotel and restaurant management.

"My first job out of college was working as the manager of a restaurant," he said.

Before coming to Atlantica, Dooley worked at the Red Lion Inn in Cohasset Village. During his 13 years there, he served as everything from the bartender to the General Manager, "to the guy who mops the floors." When Dooley decided he wanted a change of venue, he began talking to Joe Campbell, Atlantica's Director of Operations, about possibly coming to work at Atlantica. He was offered a job and began working there the following week.

"Atlantica was a breath of fresh air," said Dooley.

But Dooley wouldn't have the job he does without the help of Campbell who is responsible for working on the business plans and business development for the restaurant, as well as working with the other managers in their areas of expertise.

"I'm a fiscal watchdog too," he joked.

Campbell has lived in Cohasset for 17 years and was working in Boston as the Vice President of Operations for Legal Seafood prior to his current job. After taking a summer off from working in Boston, he ran into Peter Roy, owner of the Cohasset Harbor Resort, who said he was looking for someone to run Atlantica. "One month later I got the call, and here I am," he said.

A common thread shared by all four employees, is the convenience of being able to work close to home.

"With my previous job, I did a lot of traveling," said Campbell, who added working close to home in Cohasset allows him to be around for his family, including wife Janet and children Alyssa, 14 who is a freshman at Cohasset Middle High School, and Ben, 11, who is in the fifth grade at Deer Hill. Dooley agreed and said not having to deal with a lengthy commute also allows him to spend more time with his family, including wife Kieli and two children, Jackson, 4 and Teagan, 1.

But Dooley said working locally has another advantage. "There are numerous people you know personally," he said, and with that comes a certain comfort level on the job. "This week, both my cousin and neighbor booked functions here," he said.

Campbell echoed Dooley's sentiments and said, "I do know most of the people who come in here," adding it gives the restaurant an almost an old-fashioned feel. In a time where large chain restaurants are abundant and managers stay for six months before they move on to something else, Atlantica has been able to maintain personal relationships. "We are able to help local organizations, and they reciprocate by helping us," which makes them a valued business in the community.

For more information on the Cohasset Harbor Resort or to make reservations, please visit its web site at www.cohassetharborresort.com or call the Cohasset Harbor Inn at (781) 383-6650, or Atlantica Restaurant at (781) 383-0900. The Olde Salt House is open late spring through Columbus Day.

Hoskin is instrumental in middle-high school music program

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset Middle-High School teacher Stephanie Hoskin keeps students after school on a regular basis and never hears any complaints. As the instrumental music teacher for students in grades seven through 12, Hoskin holds combined rehearsals in her classroom when the school day is done, and her extra time and effort has made a noticeable difference in the school's music program.

— TEACHERS WITH CLASS —

Hoskin came on board at the middle-high school in September of 2002, and in her short time on staff has generated an increasing amount of enthusiasm for the music program school-wide. Since last year, participation in the middle school band has climbed from 32 to 50 students, and the high school band has climbed from 23 to 35.

But what is most impressive, is the fact that in her first year on staff, Hoskin started a jazz band, in which 18 students participated. Cohasset hasn't had a jazz band since the 1980s, but the overwhelming response to the new program suggests it was long overdue. This year, the number of students participating in the jazz band has climbed to 27.

"I'm so passionate about music," she said, adding that throughout her own adolescence, through all of the ups and downs, music was always something comforting and fun for her, as well as rewarding. She credits much of her love of music to the numerous people who taught her along the way, and tries to be as influential in her student's lives.

"My middle school band director was inspiring," she said, adding when she walked into his classroom on the first day of fifth grade, she immediately knew she wanted to be the one directing the band someday. In fact, she went home and shared her new dream with her mother that same afternoon, and hasn't looked back since.

Growing up in Northborough, Mass., Hoskin played both the clarinet and saxophone throughout her middle and high school years. However, "If I could do it all over again, I think I'd be a trumpet player or a drummer," which she said is most likely because they are so different from the instruments she currently plays. After high school graduation, she went on to earn her bachelor's degree in music education from the University of New Hampshire.

Now that she is teaching in Cohasset, Hoskin directs the middle school concert band, the high school concert band, the jazz ensemble, the pep band, the jazz band, and a new flute choir, which "just got started," and she couldn't be happier with the way things are going.

"I absolutely love it here," she said.

In addition to conducting the bands, Hoskin co-teaches a general music class for middle school students with Chorale Director Bryan Marks. Students are taught the elements of music, including rhythm, melody and harmony, and are given the opportunity to compose some of their own music. The class ends with students learning how music plays a role in their everyday lives.

"Everyone is musical in some sense or another, it's just finding what that is," she said, adding there are many ways to appreciate and understand music without necessarily being an outstanding musician. At the beginning of the year, Hoskin had her students make a list of all the jobs that have anything to do with music, and they came up with very long lists, encompassing every occupation even remotely connected with music.

Stephanie Hoskin, middle-high school instrumental music teacher, has helped increase band participation.

"I know the majority of my students will not major in music, but I want them to develop some sort of appreciation for it," she said.

In addition to rehearsals, Hoskin has been working with other members of the fine arts department to plan activities and concerts for students to participate in. This year, both the high school band and chorus will travel to a music festival in Toronto, Canada during which the students will have the opportunity to perform for judges who will then prepare both written and taped comments. Although seeing the judges "is the primary reason for going," Hoskin, along with Marks, have planned other activities, including attending a music festival and visiting the Toronto Zoo, for students to enjoy on their trip.

Hoskin said she has also been working with Steve Biagini, instrumental music teacher at Deer Hill, to coordinate a day of musical clinics and workshops for students in grades four through 12 on March 25, as March is "music in our schools," month. All 285 musicians who play with the bands in Cohasset are invited, and will work together to put on a combined performance at the end of the day.

"We work cooperatively all the time," said Hoskin, adding it's really nice for the younger students to get to know the older students, so they will have a friendly face when coming to the upper grades, which is especially helpful in light of the planned reconfiguration. This September, when the sixth grade moves from Deer Hill up to the middle-high school, band members will have already had some experience working together.

"With Steve's help, we hope to make the music program a familiar place for those kids," she said.

When Hoskin is not busy devoting her time to music, she enjoys spending time with her family and friends, skiing, and baking. While she is currently not playing with a band herself, she said in the future she may go back to auditioning. However, for her first few years in Cohasset, "I want to be available to the students whenever they need me. I'm here a lot, but the payoff has been enormous. I have really amazing students and they're all really talented," she said.

OPINION

'Be my Valentine'

The origin of Saint Valentine's Day is as unclear as a window pane smudged with children's fingerprints as the little ones proudly tape red and frilled paper hearts on the window for all to see.

There are two Saint Valentines who could be the inspiration for our day of candy hearts, mushy or silly poems, and long-stem roses.

There was St. Valentine, a third century A.D. Roman Christian who, according to legend, was martyred during the persecution of Christians by Emperor Claudius II. Another martyr named Valentine, who was bishop of Terni — a region in present-day central Italy — may also be the patron saint for the Feb. 14 holiday, according to the American Heritage dictionary. Today, the Catholic Church recognizes at least three different saints named Valentine or Valentinus, all of whom were martyred, according to the History Channel Web site.

It is the third century Saint Valentine, slain by Claudius II, whose story is told at www.historychannel.com.

According to legend, when Claudius II outlawed marriage for young men because the Roman emperor believed single men made better soldiers, Valentine realized the decree was unjust and defied Claudius by continuing to perform marriages for young lovers in secret. When his actions were discovered, Claudius ordered Valentine put to death. Another version of the story told on history.com is that Valentine may have been killed for attempting to help Christians escape harsh Roman prisons.

Perhaps both stories are true. The man who loved so much that he braved death himself by performing forbidden weddings could very well be a man who would try to help others escape from imprisonment at the hands of brutal guards.

The story goes that the saint may have sent the first valentine himself. While in prison, Valentine is believed to have fallen in love with a young girl, perhaps his jailer's daughter, who visited him in his cell. Before his death, it is thought he wrote her a letter, which he signed, 'From your Valentine.'

While the truth behind the Valentine legend may be murky, history.com tells us, the stories certainly portray the saint as a sympathetic, heroic. and decidedly romantic figure. By the Middle Ages, Valentine was one of the most popular saints in England and France.

The phrase, "Be my valentine," can be taken in two ways. One is the traditional entreaty for someone to be our sweetie. This simple expression tugs at the heartstrings, whether the sentiment is between parent and child or between lovers.

But maybe the recipient of the request should take it another way, and that is truly to "be my Valentine," to be romantic and sympathetic and heroic. Sympathetic means to notice and acknowledge another's troubles and sacrifices: "Little things mean a lot," as singers have often crooned. Romantic is easy, that's the flowers and candy routine. And, in these troubled times, many of us are more heroic than we realize.

Countless little heroic acts make up a loving relationship. There is a song about a suburban hero whose heroism shows in acts like taking his children down to see the floats at the Thanksgiving Day Parade when he wants to say home and see the Minneapolis Colts.

Elizabeth Barrett Browning penned, "How do I love thee? Let me count the ways. I love thee to the depth and breadth and height my soul can reach."

To count some ways…

Cherishing a child's construction paper heart smeared with glue with clumsy letters as much — more! — than a dazzling number from a card shop.

Knowing the $5 bouquet from the grocery store holds as much love as the traditional dozen long-stems.

Remembering patience and gentle words are never out of season.

Sitting at the kitchen table and helping your three children laboriously address valentines to their class mates, making sure all names on the list get a card. (Let's do the math: three kids times cards for 22 classmates each equals… writer's cramp).

For a budget-conscious gift, a "ticket" tucked inside a card for something the recipient enjoys doing, like going for a wintry walk and enjoying coffee or hot chocolate afterwards or cooking a favorite meal.

For parents, a great gift from friends or relatives is to chip in for a dinner gift certificate with an offer to baby-sit.

Probably the best gift is that gift of spending time doing something fun.

We may never know all the facts behind the origin of St. Valentine's Day, and we don't need to. All we really need to know is that the celebration of love, sharing our love, should be every day, not just this Saturday.

There is a lot of meaning in those three simple words, "Be my Valentine."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Matos thanked for effort with schools

TO THE EDITOR:

In mid January, I received a letter from Cohasset Police Officer Lisa Matos. The letter informed me that she would no longer be able to serve as the Cohasset P.A.L.S. Officer (Police Assisting Local Schools). This cooperative program between the police department and the school's health education department was a unique initiative designed to bring police officers and teachers together to address some important issues. Lisa was trained in our various health education and prevention curricula along with several teachers. For many years thereafter, Lisa and Cohasset health educators and classroom teachers worked as a team providing instruction to elementary and middle school students in the areas of alcohol, drug abuse, and violence prevention, safety education, and child abuse prevention programs.

As the supervisor and evaluator of the program, I personally observed Lisa work with teachers presenting lesson plans to Cohasset youth. From the very beginning, Lisa's talent was obvious to me. She was a natural born teacher. There is no question in my mind that the hundreds, perhaps thousands of Cohasset students that she has worked with through the years have all benefited greatly from her. She will be dearly missed by the staff and the students.

I'd like to thank former Police Chief, Brian Noonan and present chief, Bob Jackson for their cooperation and for allowing us to benefit from Lisa's dedication and deep concern for Cohasset youth. Most of all, I want to thank Office Matos for a job well done.

Type of leadership is crux of the matter

TO THE EDITOR:

My friend Gabriel Gomez makes some good points in his letter, however, I think his conclusion is far reaching.

The original intent of the petition put forth by Lou Harvey was to get this matter out in the open. To have a hearing and let the chips fall where they may. It is clear that the selectmen, Haddad, and Jackson, mismanaged a personnel matter that was way beyond their capabilities.

I don't necessarily think that makes this a zero sum equation, i.e., ineptness on the part of those in charge does not equate to a ringing endorsement of the police in Cohasset. Gabe has used the words rigorous and proactive in his call to support the police and summarizes his letter by suggesting a new attitude "that enables a rigorous police force." Is the problem that culminated in a town hearing two weeks ago the result of a police force that was impeded from acting rigorously? I don't think that's such a clear conclusion. Is putting a charge to the police force to act rigorously necessary? Why can't they just act like policemen of a small, wealthy town that has little crime?

Why does providing some parental involvement in a teenage wrongdoing have to lead to criminals coming from out of town to ransack our homes? Would I expect the same kid to get chance after chance? No, I wouldn't, and there are always going to be parents who are unwilling to accept the fact that their child is in trouble through his own devices. Sooner or later, that parent realizes that their child is where he is because of the sum total of the choices he has made. A rigorous police force won't change that.

I don't believe we are at the crossroads of deciding between a "rigorous" police force and an accommodating police force. I don't see the two as mutually exclusive and think labeling them as such will lead to nothing but future problems for the people of this town. I would imagine, that given current events, the force is not high on morale. Rather than label them, let's focus on providing leadership that will instill in them the confidence they need to enforce the law while also using their discretion when appropriate.

Police policy is heart of issue

COMMENTARY

LOU HARVEY

Unfortunately, when both accommodation and rigor exist in the same police station, the result is a hostile environment.

The disinfecting sunshine on the discourse over Quigley/McLean has been enormously useful in crystallizing the core issue that has been in the background for years. Even though it has been in the background, this issue has produced hostility, conflict and resentment in police, Town government and citizens, with no debates to reach a resolution.

My careful examination of these matters for the last month, has led to the conclusion that the real issue is not whether Bill Quigley or Jim McLean are good cops or whether Bob Jackson is a good police chief or for that matter, whether Mark Haddad is a good Town Manager. These are the side debates of a more fundamental issue.

I have concluded that the core issue is the nature of police protection that the citizens of Cohasset desire. One choice is reflected by the approach of Chief Jackson and is an accommodating constabulary in which only severe crimes are prosecuted. The other choice is embodied in Sgt. Quigley and is a rigorous police force that applies modern methods to preempt severe crimes. Unfortunately, when both accommodation and rigor exist in the same police station, the result is a hostile environment.

Accommodating Constabulary

The policy of accommodation means that our police would be expected to await calls for intervention before taking action. Patrols, speed traps, stops and other preemptive measures are limited, while police wait at the station, ready to respond to 911 calls. There would be fewer arrests and fewer complaints about the treatment from police officers… Your kids are not arrested.

Rigorous Police

A policy of rigor would mean that our police are more proactive and attempt to anticipate and prevent anti-social or criminal behavior. Police would not wait in the station for citizens to report crimes but would be on the vigil to spot suspicious actions. With this policy there would be more arrests and consequently more complaints about the police… Your property is not trashed.

No Coexistence

With the recognition that the choice is between accommodation and rigor, it becomes abundantly clear why there is such difficulty in administering the Town's law enforcement. Chaos (as we have seen) is the only outcome when we expect our Town government to administer two conflicting policies. It is the proper duty and responsibility of the people of Cohasset to decide what policy to adopt.

Only after deciding what the policy of the Town should be, accommodation or rigor, can we expect our Board of Selectmen to administer it.

Let the debate begin.

Lou Harvey is the spokesperson for the citizens group that organized the petition to expose the evidence against three members of the Cohasset police department that were sanctioned on Oct. 20, 2003.

Cohasset Land Foundation formed

The Cohasset Land Foundation has been established to assist the Town in identifying, acquiring, and developing parcels of land of special interest in a manner consistent with the goals outlined in Cohasset's 2003 Master Plan. This foundation is based on the town of Lincoln's experiences on a similar program for meeting the challenges of protecting the environment, urban sprawl, and affordable housing.

The Foundation's objectives are to maintain the character of the town by providing Cohasset landowners with an environmentally sensitive and economically viable non-profit alternative to traditional development. The group will be focused on securing open space and 'developing what needs to be developed' in order to maintain open space by creatively matching funding and growth interests with the needs of the Town.

The Foundation hopes to acquire real estate at market rates and to build on it only as much as needed to recover costs. By eliminating the profit margin experienced in normal development, more open space can be preserved. Financing by mortgages on the real estate will be backed by a large number of personal notes signed by Cohasset residents (the same method used with great success in Lincoln).

The group will address the needs of Cohasset and its various constituents, including its land owners, Selectmen, the conservation commission, community preservation committee, open space committee, senior housing committee, housing partnership, as well as the Cohasset Conservation Trust.

Trustees of the Foundation represent a broad range of interests in Cohasset, and include: Richard Avery, Tom Callahan, Murray Campbell, Jack Keniley, Frank Neer, Chris Oddliefson, Glenn Pratt, Wayne Sawchuk, Donald Staszko, Rick Swanborg, Gary Vanderweil, David Weltman, and Michael Westcott.

The Foundation's objectives are to maintain the character of the town by providing Cohasset landowners with an environmentally sensitive and economically viable non-profit alternative to traditional development.

Principles

- The Cohasset Land Trust will succeed by adhering to these five principles (after Robert Lemire, Lincoln, Mass.)
- Broad recognition that the CLT must save what needs to be saved.
- Broad recognition that CLT must also build what needs to be built and that without integration of these two principles, it is often impossible to do either. Its values are needed to give shape to the built environment as well as protecting the character and resources of Cohasset.
- The need for full recognition of dollar value of landowners in their land. This recognition eliminates the otherwise inherent conflict between landowners and those who want to save or those who want to satisfy special development needs.
- The need for private sector as well as public sector participation in the land conversion process and to serve as a forum and watchdog in the community to make sure that open space plans, zoning, wetlands regulations, on-site sewage disposal enforcement and the like are fully up to date and implemented.
- The need for communities to reach out in both a public and private way to owners of land of special public interest instead of assuming a purely reactive public sector posture.

CLF activities

- To perform the traditional function of accepting gifts of land and other gifts that make possible the acquisition and proper management of special parcels.
- To perform the function of accepting and administering gifts and purchases of conservation restrictions.
- Work with planning, open space and conservation commission in the identification of land of conservation interest and its individual owners.
- Become a repository of information on the legal mechanisms that the community and planning approaches, and financial mechanisms that the community and landowners can apply in resolving land-use conflicts while serving their own financial and land-use interests.
- Provide a forum and resultant lobby for sound public sector land-use planning. A well-considered and shared position can exert considerable influence on the floor of town meetings.
- Develop an outreach program in concert with town committees so that owners of land of conservation interest are fully aware of their options, so that they know the community cares, and that the community has public sector and private sector resources to help them realize their dollar value in a responsible way.
- To develop the capability of land-banking special pieces coming on the market, so that adequate planning can be provided before such pieces are conventionally developed in ways that fail to save what needs to be saved, and so that, in special cases, needed development can be fostered.
- The CLF is actively seeking volunteers and members and can be reached by emailing: cohassetlf@earthlink.net. Or calling Richard Avery at: 383-6043.

Party girl gets birthday surprise

ON THE BRIGHT SIDE

JEANE DALY

I was invited to a surprise 50th birthday party for my friend Stephanie. Her two sons and daughter had been planning this party for months and wanted everything to be just perfect.

Her youngest son, Mark, was in charge of parking the guests' cars around the corner to insure the surprise factor. I've known Mark since he was a toddler and I must say I was a little reluctant to pass my car keys over to him, as I recalled all the skid marks he had left on the street outside my driveway.

Scott, her oldest son, had taken her out for a birthday dinner and when they arrived home, we all were to jump out and surprise her.

Everything went as planned and she was thrilled by the thoughtful gesture her kids had made on her behalf. Her daughter Kristin, who is quite a character, had something more in store than birthday cake and ice cream for her shy, sweet mother. She hired a male stripper to entertain.

About an hour into the festivities, the doorbell rang and the birthday girl answered the door. A huge man clad in hospital scrubs, mask, stethoscope, gloves, and all bounced into the room, carrying a blaring boom box. He sat the birthday girl down and began stripping to the pulsating rhythm of the loud music. The guests howled and hooted as he gyrated, swung, and grunted his way around the room. The birthday girl sat red-faced with her mouth hanging open, as her daughter doubled over with laughter.

The doc wiggled and pelvic tilted his remaining piece of outer wear to the floor and stood directly in front of Stephaney with a shiny, silver grape leaf draped over his . . . Stephaney, a nurse, has seen little bottoms and big bottoms, but this was too much! He squirmed, shimmied, dipped and bent, and did other remarkable movements with his muscular, tanned body.

The other gals, mostly 50-plus, myself, included, were cheering him on. The guest of honor sat with a bewildered glazed expression on her pale face, saying, "Oh, My God!"

I noticed the doctor smiled even more as he danced in front of the birthday girl, the reason being he was watching his own reflection in the mirror behind her chair. Great, he brought his own date to the party and it was obvious the two were madly in love.

Peeling off his silver leaf, he continued to bounce around the room, gyrating in front of all the hysterical ladies. They jammed bills down the remaining tiny gold fig leaf.

He wiggled back in front of Stephaney and shimmied up and down her shaking leg. I've never seen anyone look so miserable at their own party. I thought if this joker doesn't stop pretty soon, she's not going to make it to her 51st birthday.

She bent forward in her seat and in a kind, gentle voice said, "Does your mother know you do this, dear?" Everyone screamed with laughter. He told her he was a delivery driver for a national company in the daytime and his mother was proud of that. In a small voice, she replied, "Isn't that nice."

Now, every time I see one of those delivery drivers, I grin and wonder if his mom knows where he really is when he says he's working overtime.

HEALTH NOTES

School nutrition is a major priority

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

As a part of the Board's oversight of Town health matters, and considering the widespread epidemic of obesity in the U.S., the Cohasset Board of Health has decided to continue its initiative to provide better nutritional information to those responsible for our children's health. Accordingly, with the permission of Dr. Edward Malvey, the Superintendent of Schools, the first meeting of the Board's new Nutrition Advisory Committee for the Cohasset Public Schools was held at the High School on Tuesday Feb. 10at 9:30 a.m. in the middle-high school cafeteria.

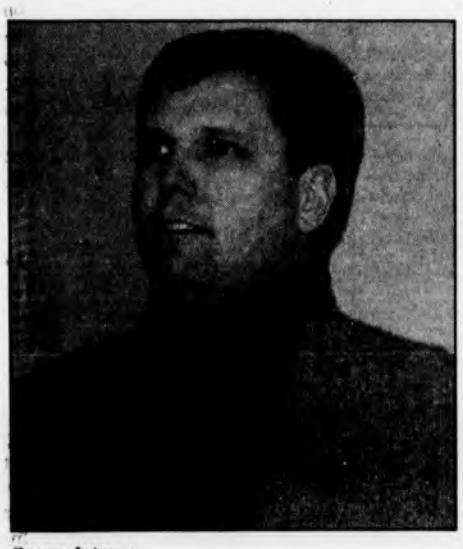
For this first meeting, we invited the following participants: Board of Health Chairman Stephen Bobo; Board of Health member Margaret Chapman, R.N.; Jackie Fitts, parent; Michael Gill, school health education coordinator; Health Agent Joseph Godzik; nutritionist Jane Lanzilotti; Bob Levy, school food services manager; nutritionist Paula Pozniak; and School Committee member Chartis Tebbetts.

We sent letters to others who may have an interest in this important issue, and request that anyone having a viewpoint or ideas relating to student nutrition or would like to share in this important work, to please contact the Board of Health or one of those listed in the above list.

Many conflicting viewpoints exist about the issue of student nutrition, especially since schools are hard pressed to provide good education in the face of continuing massive financial pressure. The fact remains that it is possible to provide nutritious choices without resorting to the use of junk foods to enhance revenue. This has recently been demonstrated in the high school cafeteria.

The fact remains that it is possible to provide nutritious choices without resorting to the use of junk foods to enhance revenue.

Every day, we see reports of new studies which show how important it is, early on, to develop good dietary habits. Students whose activities require the consumption of energy-supplying carbohydrates need to learn that when the activity level goes down, food consumption needs to be watched. Those who are careful about their weight need to guard against missing important food components necessary for health. These fundamental lessons must be learned and become habits. They are as necessary for later development as the other facets of their education.



And the food nutrition picture is changing. There is currently much discussion about appropriate diets and the emphasis of specific food groups such as carbohydrates. There is just too much changing information available for those supplying the day to day services of caring for our students to keep up with the latest, most accurate information. So, the Board of Health has assembled a group of individuals whose responsibilities will hopefully be to deal with the various aspects of student food nutrition. The panel is strictly advisory, and has no power to require changes in menus or what's being served. Its purpose will eventually be to periodically provide useful and complete guidelines for diets necessary for the various food service operations within the school system. These will be discussed with those responsible for managing the operations of the various food service activities who have the responsibility for providing acceptable and appropriate meals for the students in all of our schools.

Again, we would urge anyone who has an interest in the issue of student nutrition to contact the Board of Health or anyone on the above list. We need your opinions as well as any facts and information relative to this important subject. After all, we have all eaten at a school facility at one time in our life. Also, we all eat. Perhaps we should give more thought about the best way to do it.

In a future article, we will provide an up date of our discussions at the first meeting.

Steve Bobo is chairman of the Cohasset Board of Health.

CANDIDATES CORNER

Stuart Ivimey

Ivimey announces Planning Board bid

Stuart Ivimey announced today his candidacy for the one-year term recently vacated on the Planning Board. "The unprecedented and virtually unchallenged development of over 400 housing units that are planned for this town will, in the absence of effective new leadership, forever and detrimentally alter the character of Cohasset." The greatest challenges facing this town are the need to create affordable senior housing and the preservation of the town's historic character. These challenges will define the town's character for generations. "I am running for the Planning Board to ensure that we meet our most important housing needs (those seniors with low and moderate incomes) as quickly as possible and do so in a manner that provides the greatest good for the largest number of these citizens. In addition, we must protect the town's character; respect the rights of our citizens who abut new construction; and protect the environment."

For the past three years Stuart has led the Community Preservation Committee as its chairman. These efforts resulted in the acquisition of the "Barnes Property", which added 35 acres to Wheelwright Park – at no cost to the town; created senior low income apartments in the old Paul Pratt Memorial Library (the only actual creation of senior housing that Cohasset has seen in decades); and helped fund the preservation of antique buildings including the former Pratt Library.

Despite the draft Master Plan's emphasis on creating affordable senior housing and the preservation of town character, our elected officials have turned a blind eye to urban sprawl that does not serve the needs of our low and moderate income senior neighbors, and which will destroy our town's character. Indeed, Town Hall has encouraged the development of these misguided projects. "The attitude of 'development at all costs' also erodes town character, ignores the rights of abutters, overburdens the tax base and sacrifices the environment.

Cohasset now has the opportunity to travel in a new and enlightened direction – one that provides housing for our seniors who lack the means to remain our neighbors due to one that benefits from proactive leadership to encourage smart growth, which respects the town's character and environment; and one that respects the rights of all its citizens. The town needs new and creative ideas. "The stakes are simply too high for a 'business as usual' attitude at Town Hall. If changes aren't made, we all stand to lose the beauty of this town without solving its most pressing housing needs." We in Cohasset simply do not want or need the 400 units of housing, the likes of which are planned today.

Fogarty's campaign goes full speed ahead

The Fogarty campaign was marked by two successful events last week. On Tuesday over 60 enthusiastic supporters of Janet Fogarty, candidate for Republican State Committeewoman, attended a reception at the Hearth n' Kettle in Weymouth. Supporters applauded Fogarty's detailed plan for increasing Republican success in the District. "Janet's name and support is spreading like wildfire!" said Mary Ellen MacInnis of Weymouth.

On Thursday Fogarty took time out of her own campaign to host a successful fundraiser for Scott Brown, running for the State Senate seat vacated by Cheryl Jacques in the March 2 special election. The successful event was attended by local leaders such as Senator Bob Hedlund and Representative Daniel Webster.

"This was our most successful fundraiser outside of the district," stated Brown's Finance Director and former Mass GOP Political Director Vincent Errichetti. "Kudos to Janet and her leadership on this!"

For more information or to join Fogarty's campaign, contact Constituent Relations Director Elizabeth Rech at 781-740-4746.

Hilbert says state GOP missed opportunities

Abraham Lincoln, the first Republican President, observed, "a house divided against itself cannot stand."

Neither can a political party. Lincoln's simple lesson appears lost in some Republican circles. This party has had many opportunities to capitalize and build. For example, the Republicans could have recruited the Reagan Democrats in the 80s, but let the opportunity go by.

In the early 90s, the State Committee also did nothing to recruit disenfranchised Unenrolled and Democrats at the end of the Dukakis administration. On March 2, you will be voting for a state Committeewoman and man. This choice will either cause the demise of the party, or create the awesome task of rebuilding. One thing I will promise is that I will not play the game of divide and conquer. I will not get in the way of a Republican primary election against two or more Republicans. That is for the voters to decide.

Anne Hilbert, Candidate for Republican State Committee, 781-337-3743.

Logan called 'favorite Republican anywhere'

Calling Polly Logan "our favorite Republican, anywhere," Congressman Amo Houghton — R,NY and Cohasset summer resident — is appearing for the incumbent state committeewoman throughout the Norfolk- Plymouth district.

"Polly Logan has helped elect Republicans from conservatives to moderates — her selfless efforts have no false ideological boundaries that others may pursue," Houghton stated.

Logan was also acknowledged by Governor Romney's Secretary for Environmental Affairs, Ellen Roy Hertzfelder of Cohasset. Hertzfelder thanked Logan "for being an inspiration and for taking time and effort to guide my career."

Logan, trailblazer among women in politics, has a fund in her name at UMass, Boston providing scholarships for those pursuing government and public service.

"The reason the South Shore rallies around Polly," stated Kim Reynolds and Shawni Littlehale — current and previous chairs of the Norwell Republican Town Committee, "is that she never stops giving and she never stops fighting — for two-party government and for young people to get active."

The right kind of police force

TO THE EDITOR:

Lou Harvey writes today about a choice facing the town of Cohasset between a rigorous police force that proactively protects our citizens and an accommodating one that focuses on reacting to citizen complaints. Yet I would suggest that that choice has already been made. From parents' letters to the editor suggesting that their children's hangouts should not be patrolled to individuals' efforts to prevent police intervention, we have seen Cohasset residents stand up to thwart active policing methods. From police officers' own responses, we know that they feel this pressure acutely, not only from the citizenry but also from the senior levels of town government.

The policy of accommodating policing sends two strong messages, both of which threaten the well-being of Cohasset citizens. First and foremost, this policy tells our children that their actions are not being monitored. Although we trust that we have taught them so well at home that they would not violate the law, we know realistically that police presence can be a strong deterrent for young people who experience peer pressure to act up, damage property or put themselves at risk by using drugs or alcohol. An environment of accommodating policing gives our children a false sense of infallibility and puts them at risk when they leave our community. If they learn in Cohasset that they can do as they like and get away with it, they are due for a rude awakening; police elsewhere, especially in college cities, won't be nearly so understanding or gentle.

And let's not think that criminals won't also notice Cohasset's policy of accommodating policing. If our police are discouraged from investigating suspicious situations, how will they be able to stop criminal activity? If criminals know that law enforcement in Cohasset is relaxed, won't they head here instead of going to a nearby town where vigilance is greater?

The question we now face is whether we really are prepared to live with these consequences? Granted, we are a village — and many of us have chosen to make our homes in Cohasset because we want our children to have the informal security and room to make mistakes as they grow up that our small town should afford. However, the reality is that we live in a larger world — our children will need to learn how to live in this world and face the consequences when they break the law. Equally importantly, we all need the protection that our police can provide against criminals who might threaten our town.

To change from this policy of accommodation and instead enable our police to proactively protect our town, where do we look? The first place would, of course, be within ourselves as citizens providing support to our law enforcement professionals. But the policy of discouraging police intervention and thwarting proactive policing methods is well entrenched. Our police officers have spoken out against it, citing their frustration that efforts to protect and to serve are not fully appreciated. All indications are that the policy of "leaving well enough alone" is coming from the top. If this is so, then this is a conversation that concerned citizens need to have with Chief Jackson. Or perhaps this is a big enough issue to discuss with Chief Jackson's boss, Mark Haddad, who exerts absolute control over police matters. Yet ultimately the buck stops with the Selectmen and they must be the party to which we look for this kind of high-level town guidance. Whether or not it is appropriate for the Town Manager to exert absolute control over the police force is a debate for the future — and one worth addressing — but not one that absolves the Selectmen of responsibility in this matter.

I applaud Lou Harvey for raising the question of what kind of police force we want for Cohasset, and take it a step further to suggest that we've effectively already chosen. The debate now must center on whether or not we're willing to face the consequences of this choice. If not, it is our responsibility as citizens to work together with our town officials and town government to reverse this decision.

It strikes me that the solution is a new attitude for Cohasset, one that enables a rigorous police force. This would start with all of us as citizens embracing the security afforded by this police force and end with our elected and appointed officials committed to enforcing this policy at every level of town government and law enforcement.

Scout dance help is much appreciated

TO THE EDITOR:

A special thank you goes out to Joanie Meade and Principal Keith Gauley for the use of the Deer Hill gymnasium for our annual Girl Scout dance.

In addition, custodian Paul Bransfield went beyond the call of duty in helping us unlock doors, sand walkways, move tables, and dispose of debris at an event attended by more than 200 people. (We don't know how he maintained such a happy demeanor after having been on the job since 6 a.m.!)

We also appreciate the kind donation of three gallons of coffee by Starbucks of Cohasset: just the thing to keep our dancers full of energy on a cold Friday night!

Money for hearings could be better spent

TO THE EDITOR:

I am Sergeant William Quigley's brother-in-law. Bill is the uncle of my four children, one of which is a teenager. I also know Officer Jim McLean and several other officers from the Cohasset Police Department. Recently, I attended Sergeant Quigley's disciplinary hearing. I listened intently to every word of each witness and one question came to mind — are the town officials joking?

Presumably the Chief of Police, over the past four months, has picked the most horrific violations to persecute. These violations are the worst of the worst, the ones that are the most shocking to the public's conscience. Again, are they kidding? These charges, which are the subject of the hearings, are related to closed cases — the defendants have pled out in a real court of law. The charges amount to semantics and paperwork snafus.

What I took away from the hearings is that there are no rules or standard operating procedures (S.O.P.s) in place to tell an officer or sergeant what report to file or when they should file it. There are absolutely no rules or S.O.P.s for handling evidence as demonstrated by the Chief's admission to storing blood evidence in the employee refrigerator. The Police Chief needs to get out from behind his desk a little more often and brush up on his search and seizure procedures.

The town's chief law enforcement officer explanations of his understanding of doctrines of law do not match the officer's or the court's interpretations of those same doctrines of law. The irony of this whole mess is that in one way or another, every police officer and every town

Conley Ford focuses on future of state GOP

Republicans and those unenrolled, who pick a GOP ballot March 2, have an important choice about the future of the Republican Party in Massachusetts.

"I have the drive and determination to make a difference," says Conley Ford, candidate for Republican State Committeeman. "I will start March 3 on my plan to recruit 300 new GOP voters in every town in our district. I'll challenge the other 39 state senatorial districts to do the same.

"My goal is 100,000 new Republicans by Nov. 1."

Ford, a veteran and longtime Scituate resident, is proud to reside in one of the oldest states.

"There are critical issues before us that will determine the future of our great state. As Republicans we must be part of the debate. We must have a strong voice on Beacon Hill."

"I ask you to help me lead the second Revolution – the Republican revolution, vote for Ford on March 2." Call Ford at 781-545-0054, cfordcon@comcast.net.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local senators' votes on six roll calls from the week of February 2-6. There were no roll calls in the House last week.

CHECK CASHING PRIVACY (S 63)

Senate 37-0, gave initial approval to a bill prohibiting banks and credit unions from requiring check-cashing customers to provide the institution with a credit card or any other personal identification information other than a name, address, telephone number and driver's license number or state identification card number. The measure allows the institution to verify the name, signature and expiration date on a credit card but does not allow it to record that information on the check without the customer's consent. Supporters said the bill would protect customers' privacy and prevent them from being required to provide unnecessary personal information while cashing a check. They noted that current law already offers these protections to consumers who are paying a bill by check and noted that this legislation simply extends that protection to them while cashing a check. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill).

HELMETS FOR SKIERS (S 1376)

Senate 36-1, gave near final approval to and sent to the House a bill requiring ski area operators to post a one square foot sign with the following exact words: "A helmet— it's a smart idea. For educational information on helmets, inquire at ticket office." The sign would have to be posted at the point of purchase for lift tickets. The measure requires the operators to make educational information on helmets available to skiers. It also mandates that skiers review the information, educate themselves on ski helmet use and make informed choices on the use of ski helmets for themselves and their children. Supporters said the intent of the bill is to encourage rather than mandate that both adults and children wear helmets. They pointed to tragic skiing accidents involving children and argued that the bill would save lives and prevent injuries. Opponents offered no arguments. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against the bill).

$5 MILLION FOR TECHNOLOGY DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION (H 4328)

Senate 31-6, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of $5 million for the Massachusetts Technology Development Corporation (MTDC). Override supporters said it is important to fund this state-owned venture capital firm that invests in Massachusetts-based technology companies by providing grants for their start-up and expansion. They argued that these companies help the state's economic growth by creating jobs and generating tax revenue. Override opponents said the MTDC already has sufficient funding and argued that the state should not use taxpayers' money to fund risky ventures and compete with the private venture capital industry. They argued that the money should either be saved to help close the gap in a potential $2 billion deficit in the fiscal 2005 budget or spent on restoring cuts in local aid and human service programs. (A "Yea" vote is for the $5 million. A "Nay" vote is against the $5 million).

REIMBURSEMENT FOR KOSHER FOOD IN NURSING HOMES (H 4330)

Senate 36-1, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of a section increasing by up to $5 per patient per day the Medicaid reimbursement paid to nursing homes that provide kosher food for their patients. Override supporters said that maintaining a kosher kitchen is expensive and noted that some cash-starved private nursing homes have indicated that they would stop providing kosher meals unless they receive this increase. They argued that without the funding, Jewish seniors who keep kosher would face the choice of eating non-kosher meals or kosher TV dinners of questionable quality. They said that federal law requires the state to provide these types of specialty needs for Medicaid patients living in nursing homes, prisoners and military personnel. Override opponents said the state cannot afford this increased reimbursement when it is facing a potential $2 billion deficit in the fiscal 2005 budget. They argued that the funding is unfair because it is too narrowly focused and does not include vegetarians or other people with dietary restrictions. (A "Yea" vote is for the increase of up to $5 per patient per day. A "Nay" vote is against the increase).

$600,000 FOR KOSHER FOOD IN NURSING HOMES (H 4330)

Senate 35-2, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of $600,000 in funding for MassHealth Senior Care Plans. Override supporters said that the federal government would reimburse the state $300,000 of this $600,000 that would be used to fund the increased reimbursement of up to $5 per patient per day to nursing homes that provide kosher food to their patients. Override opponents said the state cannot afford $300,000 and repeated their arguments that the increased reimbursement is narrow and unfair because it does not include vegetarians or other people with dietary restrictions. (A "Yea" vote is for the $600,000. A "Nay" vote is against the $600,000)

HELP AMERICA VOTE ACT (H 4330)

Senate 33-4, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of $1.727 million for a reserve fund to leverage a Help America Vote Act (HAVA) federal grant to Massachusetts for implementation of HAVA requirements including improving voting systems and machines, election administration, voter education and registration and accessibility for disabled voters. Override supporters said that HAVA was approved following the 2000 presidential election debacle and noted that the state is required to spend some of its own money in order to access $11 million in federal funds for these projects. They noted that it is irresponsible for the state not to leverage the federal funds because it is required to implement the changes even if it does not receive any federal dollars. Override opponents said this is only one of many opportunities the state has to leverage federal money for various programs. They argued that leveraging federal money still costs the state money and noted that perhaps cities and towns should follow the lead of communities like Springfield that have already made these improvements without the grant money. (A "Yea" vote is for the $1.727 million. A "Nay" vote is against the $1.727 million).ENERGY EFFICIENT PRODUCTS (H 1270)- The Energy Committee has recommended passage of a bill prohibiting many products from being sold in Massachusetts after January 1, 2006 unless they meet certain minimum energy efficiency standards. The products include commercial refrigerators, freezers and clothes washers, ceiling fans, torchiere lamps, portable air conditioners, traffic-signal devices and illuminated exit signs.

LISTEN To Life

by John Klefeker, BC-HIS
Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

FINDING THEMSELVES AT A LOSS

By some estimates, hearing loss affects up to 40 percent of adults aged 65 and older, but only a relatively small percentage of the cases of hearing loss are actually diagnosed. Part of the blame for this oversight is that primary care physicians may regard hearing loss among the elderly as an inevitable part of aging. As a result, the problem is often ignored. This is quite unfortunate because the most common kind of hearing loss among the elderly (sensorineural, or "nerve deafness") can be substantially improved with the use of a hearing instrument. Otherwise, the inability to properly decipher high-frequency information can significantly interfere with word comprehension. This leads to miscommunication and all the frustration that can bring.

When an uncorrected hearing loss causes the loss of special moments in life, it's time to rediscover the benefits of healthy hearing and the marvelous wonders now available in hearing instruments. Begin with a FREE hearing test here at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER and a consultation with a Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist to determine how to best meet your needs. If you've tried a hearing aid in the past but weren't happy with it, we'd be happy to consult with you about finding a better match for you. We're located at 534 Main Street (Rte. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth. PH: 781-337-1144.

P.S. Hearing loss among the elderly has been linked to depression and decreased quality of life.

official in that hearing room thinks they are doing what is best for the town. I have heard the Chief is a decent man, who has served his country, state and town. However, in my opinion the Chief has allowed family business to interfere with town business.

After calculating some approximate numbers I came up with these figures: 4 police officers on overtime waiting to testify x 2 days = $2,000; 2 police officers on paid leave at $2,200 per week x 4 months = $35,200; 1 private investigator billed $17,000 thus far and $100 per hour thereafter = $18,000; Town Counsel (2 lawyers now) = $30,000.

The town has already paid about $85,200 for this chaos. Not to mention the fees for the stenographer ($75 per hour and $2.30 per page), medical exams, psychological exams, lawsuits and the pending appeal. Cohasset should use the money it will spend on the defense portion of this case to purchase and outfit all of the police cruisers with video cameras (now about $1,200 each). The installation of cameras in the police cruisers will provide certainty and replace any gray areas. Just pop the tape in and the answers will be there.

When the town rests its case next week, a brave Town Manager would accept a motion for a summary judgment and enter a finding of "dismissed" on all counts.

Pierson opinion fails to see the big picture

TO THE EDITOR:

Wigmore Pierson's eloquent exposition of the right and responsibility of "the people" to oversee government behavior (Commentary, The Mariner Feb. 5 2004) is indisputably correct in principle. However, a government elected freely has the responsibility to safeguard the public interest, and has the authority by virtue of its election to take the action it sees necessary to safeguard that public interest. Our system provides safeguards to rights that are more equitable in the long term than hashing it out in the village square.

In the police matter, the hearings are open to public scrutiny, and in addition there is an equally open process of appeal available to the officers if they are dissatisfied with whatever disciplinary action results. (If they were not under civil service, but employees of a private business, they could be dismissed at the whim of the employer, with recourse available only as afforded by statutes against racial, age or religious etc. discrimination). The officers are fortunate (or may be dismayed, depending on what is revealed) that the results of investigation and the resulting action are openly displayed for all to see. It's a painful and costly process, and it's hard to see why taxpayers should spend still more money to have an "independent investigator" develop his own description of the process already so starkly revealed for all to see. Stirring the brew again with a superimposed investigation isn't exactly the best way to "hasten to bring an end to this sad chapter …and begin the healing"!

Police officers, like anyone in positions of authority (customs officers, planning boards, receptionists, etc.) are subject to the occupational hazard of coming to enjoy that authority, and hence tempted to abuse it. It must be countered either by self-discipline and self-awareness, and/or by sophisticated supervision. Perhaps the officers are guilty of no more than having succumbed to that occupational hazard, or perhaps not even that, and perhaps the matter could have been dealt with in a less public manner. Nevertheless, if their superiors had the slightest reason to suspect wrong-doing, they would be remiss in their responsibility to the public they represent not to investigate and then lay such charges as seem warranted. Fortunately for the officers and the public, the matter is aired, with counsel representing both sides. Some among us seem to be incensed that the findings of the investigation were not dribbled to the public as they were developed, incensed that the selectmen made a statement explaining the issue only to the degree prudent at the time, and they are touched by the officers' claims that they didn't know why they were put on paid leave (the normal procedure in such cases). It's hard to believe that anyone could think the charges are because the chief suckered the selectmen and the town manager into a baseless investigation simply to further a feud related to the chief's family.

So what is Mr. Pierson complaining about? If the hearing isn't revealing enough, will an investigation of the investigators do more? Should the investigators have publicized their findings as they developed? Will the discussion at Town Meeting, prompted by the warrant article asking for money for an independent investigation of the town's behavior, be such as to honor the rights of all parties? Will that discussion "begin the process of healing and reuniting our beloved town"? Whatever the outcome of this matter, in future should our local government ignore allegations against town employees, or if not ignored, should the allegations and the findings of the investigations be distributed to the public as they are developed? When the issue seems too serious to be dealt with in private by administrative means, should the process be formal hearings supplemented by the availability of an appeals process, or should it be taken to the village square, or town meeting, or judged by whatever news and comment is published in the media?

Oh, by the way, it was P.T. Barnum, not Abraham Lincoln, that made the famous remark about not being able to fool all the people all the time.

Cohasset character at heart of proposed zoning changes

Articles at the head of the pack

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Residents at the March 27 annual Town Meeting will have five zoning articles to vote on, and this time around, zoning items will be located toward the beginning of the Warrant, to ensure a there will be a good turnout when it comes time to make a final decision.

Currently, out of the 30 total articles, numbers nine, 10, 11, 13 and 14 all relate to zoning, three of which were discussed in depth at the Feb. 3 Board of Selectmen's meeting. Zoning articles include a large house site plan review, earth removal, non conforming uses, political signs, and an amendment to the senior multi-family residence overlay district.

The large house site plan review was modeled after a program adopted by the town of Weston. It will ensure any proposals for construction of residential buildings greater than 3,500 square feet or 10 percent of the lot area up to 6,000 square feet, will be subject to a site plan review process by the Planning Board. The intention of the bylaw is to insure abutters are notified if a "large house," is going to be built in a given neighborhood, and that houses are built in a manner consistent with the surrounding properties.

Selectmen Tom Callahan, who also sits on the Growth and Development Committee and has been heavily involved in the Master Plan, said the article was drafted as a response to the overwhelming concern that the town's character needs to be preserved, which is a main goal of the Master Plan. Some refer to the large houses being built as a "mansionization" of the town, and this bylaw would set up guidelines for regulation.

"These are guidelines the board can consider with every project, and they're waivable. They won't apply to every project," said Callahan.

Guidelines include:

- Consideration being given to abutting properties, protecting their privacy, access to sun and light, screening utilities and objectionable features, and preserving the integrity of existing vegetation that abuts or overhangs property boundaries.
- Use of building design and massing, building materials, and architectural techniques that place the building in harmony with the prevailing character and scale of buildings in the neighborhood.
- Selection of a location on the lot, including the use of setbacks greater than the minimum required, integration into the existing terrain and surrounding landscape, and building orientation, in such a way to avoid or mitigate any differences in architectural scale from that prevailing in the neighborhood.
- Avoidance of prominent on-lot automobile impact through location and orientation of garage entrances, curved driveway alignment and narrow width of driveways as they approach the street, and other means.

Selectmen Michael Sullivan said he did not think the bylaw was a good idea because "it becomes very subjective." He added that some of the most beautiful homes in Cohasset are "mansions" and it's not fair to subject homeowners to a lengthy set of regulations, just because their homes are larger.

"I don't think this bylaw by itself is causing any extra hassles to homeowners," said Callahan.

Earth removal

The article regarding earth removal, land clearing, and land alteration is based on bylaws from the towns of Andover and Plymouth. Its purpose is to protect the town of Cohasset by:

- Regulating clearing, grading, and earth removal activities associated with land development, and preserving as much as practicable existing trees, vegetation, and land forms.
- Preventing erosion and sedimentation of inland and coastal wetlands, ponds and other water bodies.
- Controlling storm-water runoff, minimizing fragmentation of wildlife habitat and loss of vegetation.
- Regulating alteration of natural topography
- Protecting drinking water supply.

It is also intended to protect specimen trees and forest communities from damage or removal during site development, encourage the use of best management practices which prevent and reduce non-point sources of pollution, and promote land development and site planning practices that are responsive to the town's scenic character without preventing the reasonable development of land.

"Earth removal and ledge removal aren't the only issues the town is seeing," said Callahan, which is why the bylaw needs to be changed. Because there have been cases of builders bringing in loads of fill in order to build a house higher up on a lot, for a better view without exceeding the 35 foot height requirement under the zoning bylaw, a standard needs to be set which restricts changing the grade of the land.

Non-conforming use

The Non Conforming Uses bylaw was written as a direct result of 3 Jerusalem Lane saga. Phil and Mary Anne Ayer bought the property and chose to raze the small ranch which existed, and began building a much larger home in its place. Building Inspector Bob Egan issued the building permit for the new home because it met all height and setback requirements. However, the Zoning Board then found the Ayers' home should not have been issued a building permit because it was on a nonconforming, or undersized, lot. The board said Egan's longstanding interpretation of the bylaws was incorrect and the Ayers must apply for a special permit to complete the home according to original plans, and construction was stopped, although 80 percent complete.

The new bylaw has been rewritten to clarify any uncertainties, and states, "Any expansion/extension/enlargement, reconstruction, or replacement of a nonconforming lot which results in a building or structure that exceeds the cubic area of the previous existing structure by more than 150 percent shall be presumed to be substantially more detrimental, and more injurious, dangerous, and hazardous. Such presumption shall be irrebuttable in the Residence A district and rebuttable in the Residence B and C districts."

Copies of the drafted Warrant are available at the library, Town Clerk's office, Planning Board office, and the Selectmen's office. The Planning Board will hold a public hearing to discuss the zoning articles in depth on Wed. Feb. 18 at 7:30 p.m. in the basement meeting room at Town Hall. The meeting will be televised.

Senior Overlay Bylaw helps town build 'friendly' projects

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The words "Chapter 40B" have taken on a life of their own in Cohasset, as many shudder to hear them due to what they have come to represent.

Under 40B, developers can come into a town and build senior housing complexes which skirt around local zoning regulations, and the state ultimately has the final say on what is built. In its defense, Cohasset drafted the Senior Multi-family Residence Overlay District bylaw, allowing the town to build its own "friendly 40B" developments, putting the control back into the hands of the local boards.

The Senior Overlay bylaw was passed by voters at the November 2002 special Fall Town Meeting, after AvalonBay came to town with plans for its 200-unit senior housing development, filed under Chapter 40B.

Chapter 40B was enacted in 1969 to encourage communities to build more affordable housing and to comply, a community needs to have at least 10 percent of its permanent housing affordable to low- and moderate-income families. To help achieve that goal, the law authorizes comprehensive permits to be issued with some exemptions from local zoning regulations, provided one-fourth of the developed units are affordable.

For projects built under the Senior Overlay bylaw, that same 25 percent affordability requirement stands firm. Affordability regulations are written so that those residents earning less than 50 percent of the area median household income qualify as low income, those earning between 50 and 80 percent qualify as moderate income, and those earning between 80 percent and 120 percent qualify as median income. In Boston, the area median household income is $50,100 for a family of two. Affordable units must remain affordable for a minimum of 30 years.

Every developer who files under the Senior Multi-Family Residence Overlay District bylaw must submit plans in accordance with its guidelines before being granted a special permit by the Planning Board. This is an extensive approval process which begins when preliminary applications and plans are submitted, and are then reviewed by the Planning Board for approval or denial. If approved, the plans move on to the public hearing phase, during which abutters are legally notified of the hearings.

At the end of the public hearings, developers either leave with a comprehensive permit, or are denied and can choose to begin the process all over again, provided they want to go back to the beginning and file a preliminary set of plans and a new application.

If a special permit is granted, that still does not mean a project has been given the green light to move forward. Plans still must gain the approval of other boards as the details are worked out, and the Planning Board must grant the final approval for any changes made.

Plans for senior housing filed under the bylaw must be prepared by a professional architect, engineer, and landscape architect, and must include proposed location, bulk, and height of all proposed buildings. Applicants must include various site information as well — including an analysis of the site which maps wetlands, slopes, soil conditions, areas within the 100 year floodplain, trees over eight inches in diameter, and other natural features the Planning Board may request.

In addition, a summary of environmental concerns must be included as well as sufficient information including either plans for an on-site system for the disposal of septic waste, or written confirmation from the Sewer Commission detailing an agreement for a sewer connection. Any on-site systems must be in accordance with the rules and regulations of the Cohasset Board of Health, as well as applicable state Department of Environmental Protection regulations.

Projects filed under the Senior Overlay District must be built on parcels of land of at least 10 acres. However, as an incentive to create new housing for seniors 55 and older, developers are allowed to build more densely than the town would normally allow under its zoning regulations. The total number of units in a development is limited to 10 units per acre.

Housing must be planned and developed to fit in with any existing or proposed development in the area around the site. All buildings in the plans must have convenient access to and from adjacent uses and roadways. Walking and biking paths must be provided within the site and as a means of connection to adjacent conservation lands and neighboring streets and sidewalks when possible.

Developments built under the bylaw must have a 50-foot perimeter buffer between it and abutting properties. Access roads and pedestrian paths may cross the buffers at the discretion of the Planning Board. The board may reduce the width of the buffer to no less than 30 feet at appropriate locations. The perimeter buffer shall remain in a natural state to preserve the visual character of the parcel being developed.

The bylaw states before acting on the application, the plans should be submitted to the Board of Health, Sewer Commission, Water Commission, Conservation Commission, Design Review Board, Police Department, Fire Department, and other boards and departments the Planning Board deems appropriate. Any board or agency may submit recommendations to the Planning Board on the project.

Changes to the bylaw

When the Senior Multi-family Residence Overlay District bylaw was written, it was assumed that "multi-family" meant buildings housing two or more dwelling units. However, since then it has been determined the state says the definition of multi-family includes only those buildings housing three or more dwelling units. When the bylaw was originally passed, a condition was written which would allow it to "sunset" once 20 percent of the town's total housing stock was deemed multi-family, which would prevent further development. However, with the change in definition, many two-family dwellings which were previously thought to "count", did not, and the number of units the town would be able to approve increased.

Therefore, the Planning Board has drafted another article to be included on the Warrant at the annual Town Meeting to be held March 27, which will allow the bylaw to sunset, once it reaches 15 percent multi-family housing in town instead of the 20 percent as currently written.

Deputy Assessor Mary Quill said Cohasset now has 250 multi-family units. With the bylaw as it is currently written, with a cap of 20 percent, that 250 only represents 8.6 percent of Cohasset's total 2,891 dwelling units.

Boys take first of three "must wins" to remain in postseason contention

By Mark Goodman
CORRESPONDENT

One down, two to go.

The Cohasset boys basketball team needs a three-game sweep of its homestand this week to get to 10 wins and earn a spot in the state tournament. They got number one on Monday night with a 48-36 win over Harwich.

The Skippers needed a win last night against Hull and tonight against Mashpee to complete what would be a great season-ending run into the postseason.

It took a while for Cohasset to get off the ground against a game Harwich squad on Monday. Both teams were sloppy in the first half, Harwich with turnovers and Cohasset with missed shots and free throws.

The result was an unusually low-scoring first half. Fortunately, the Skippers were able to end it with some momentum.

With the score 18-16 in favor of Harwich with five seconds to go, Cohasset called a timeout to set up a final play. A perfect inbound pass from Jeff Brown went to Chris Bilodeau, who drove down the court, drew a couple defenders, and found a wide open Trevor Brady in the

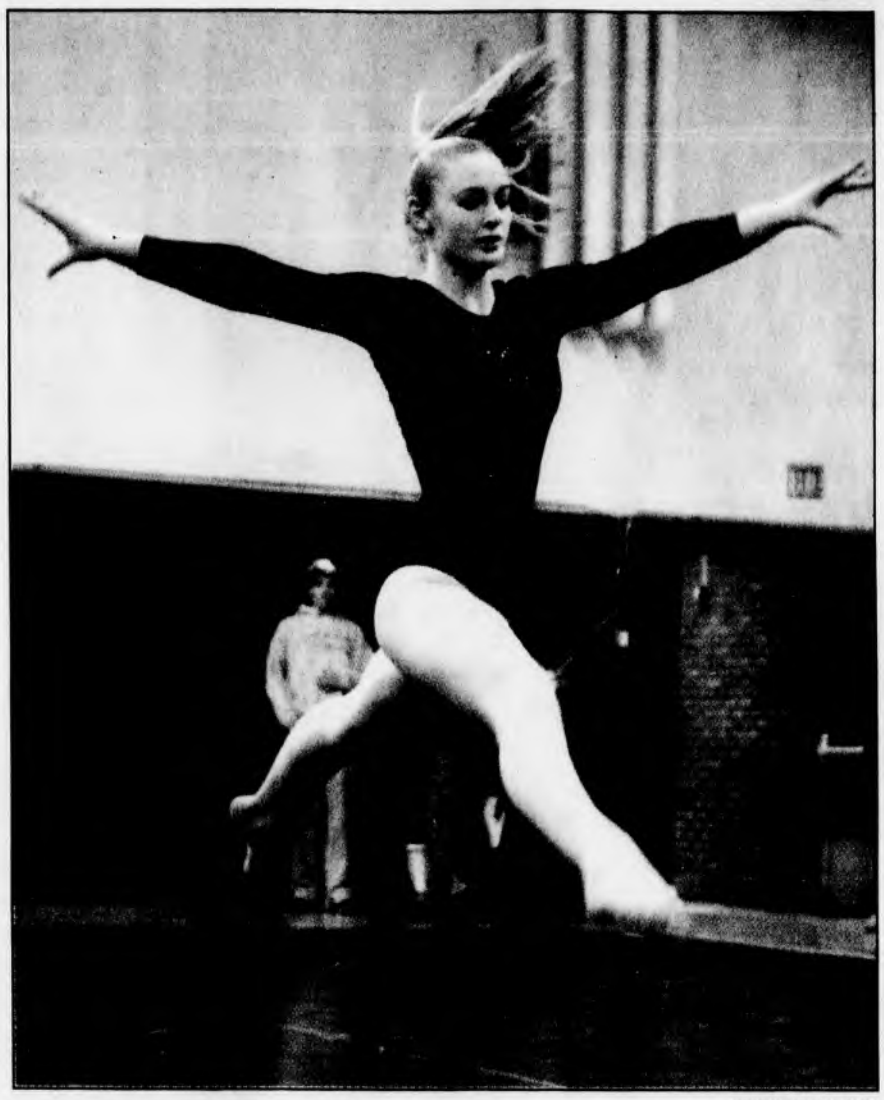
Lady hoopsters prep for playoffs

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT



With a spot in the state tourney sewn up, a 12-6 record and the leader in points per game, the Cohasset High girls varsity basketball team is revving up its engines for postseason play.

After clinching a tournament spot with a home victory over Fenway, the Lady Skippers rode the bus down to Abington last Tuesday. Little did they know they were about to step into the hottest game of the season. In their prior showdown with the Green Wave, Cohasset lost by an overwhelming 26 points. This time the Lady Skippers came out with all cylinders moving. Towards the end of the game both teams swapped baskets and neither team showed any sign of letting up.

With only 30 seconds remaining on the clock and the score tied at 45, senior Danielle Pinkus tied up an Abington player and got possession of a jump ball. After moving the ball around the perimeter to wind down the clock, the Skippers found their shot. With only 1.5

Gymnastics squad puts final touch on unbeaten season

By Mike Spellman

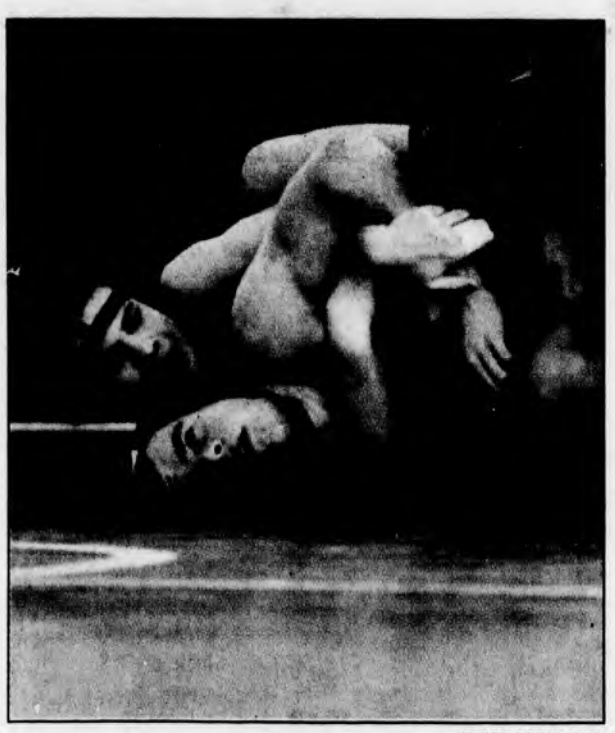
The Norwell-Cohasset gymnasts wrapped up a perfect season on Thursday and then snared 11 medals at Saturday's annual South Shore League meet to pound home the point that they reign supreme in the SSL.

"It was a great couple of days," said coach Kara Connerty. "There was a lot of pressure on the girls, but they came though."

Now, as SSL champs, the Nor-Coh squad is setting its sites on Monday's South Sectionals at Foxboro High. The seedings for this event were expected to be released yesterday by the MIAA.



The 126.8-114.6 win over the joint Hingham-Scituate team on Thursday at the Hanover Middle School wrapped up a perfect 10-0 season for the locals.

Cohasset junior Nancy Durkin took first in the all-around competition with a score of 32.5 and teammate Samantha Rosen, a Norwell junior, was second with a 32.1.

Durkin took first place for her performances on uneven bars (7.7) and floor exercise (8.7).

Rosen won beam (8.2) and fellow NHS junior classmate

Grappling for success

CHS wrestlers hope to advance several from Sectionals this weekend

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset High wrestling team closed out the regular season this weekend by taking two of three matches at a quad meet at New Bedford High School to finish with a record of 17-5, one win short of tying last year's program best 18 wins.

The Skippers topped Marshfield, 60-18, and Norwood, 46-28, but were handled by the host Whalers, 40-19, a perennially powerful Div. 1 program.

The Skippers head into this weekend's Div. 3 South Sectionals at Foxboro High one of five teams with a realistic shot of vying for second place. The host Foxboro squad, with eight or nine number one or two seeds, is once again seen as the favorite. The two day event will kick off at 3 p.m. Friday, with most of the action to take place during a long day of wrestling on Saturday (10 a.m. start).

"It would be great if we could come out of here with seven, eight or even nine guys who get to wrestle at States in front of their hometown fans next week."
CHS wrestling coach Torin Sweeney

"I'd like to say we have a shot at first place, but I'm trying to be realistic," said CHS veteran coach Torin Sweeney, who directed his team to a second place finish behind Foxboro last year. "Foxboro is just loaded. But it should be a dogfight for spots two through six, with us right in the middle of it."

Sweeney figures Rockland, Carver, Duxbury and Mansfield—four teams the Skippers saw during the regular season—will give his team a run for its money.

The veteran coach figures he has three top one or two seeds who have a good shot at reaching finals in senior captain Phil Strazzulla (145 pounds), junior Joe Kehoe (140) and junior Matt Baroudi (215).

Kehoe lost a couple of tough matches to state top 10 ranked wrestlers over the past week. He fell 11-9 in overtime to Scituate's Steve Barry (the ninth ranked 135) in last Wednesday's 34-20 win for the Skippers, and then fell by one point to New Bedford's number two ranked 135, Jason Marsh, at Saturday's quad.

"Those were a couple of tough decisions for Joey that could have gone either way," noted Sweeney. "He's fading a little bit at the end of matches right now. That's something he's got to look at. I think he'll do very well at Sectionals, though."

Where Cohasset finishes in the top six will likely be determined by how high senior Matt Casey (160), sophomore Dave McKenna (135), junior Jon Littauer (130) and junior Kevin Dinsmore (125) place. Sweeney figures all four of these grapplers have an excellent shot at placing top six in the 23 team

CHS icemen set standard of excellence in 9-5 win over Mashpee

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

There is no going back. The standard has been set.

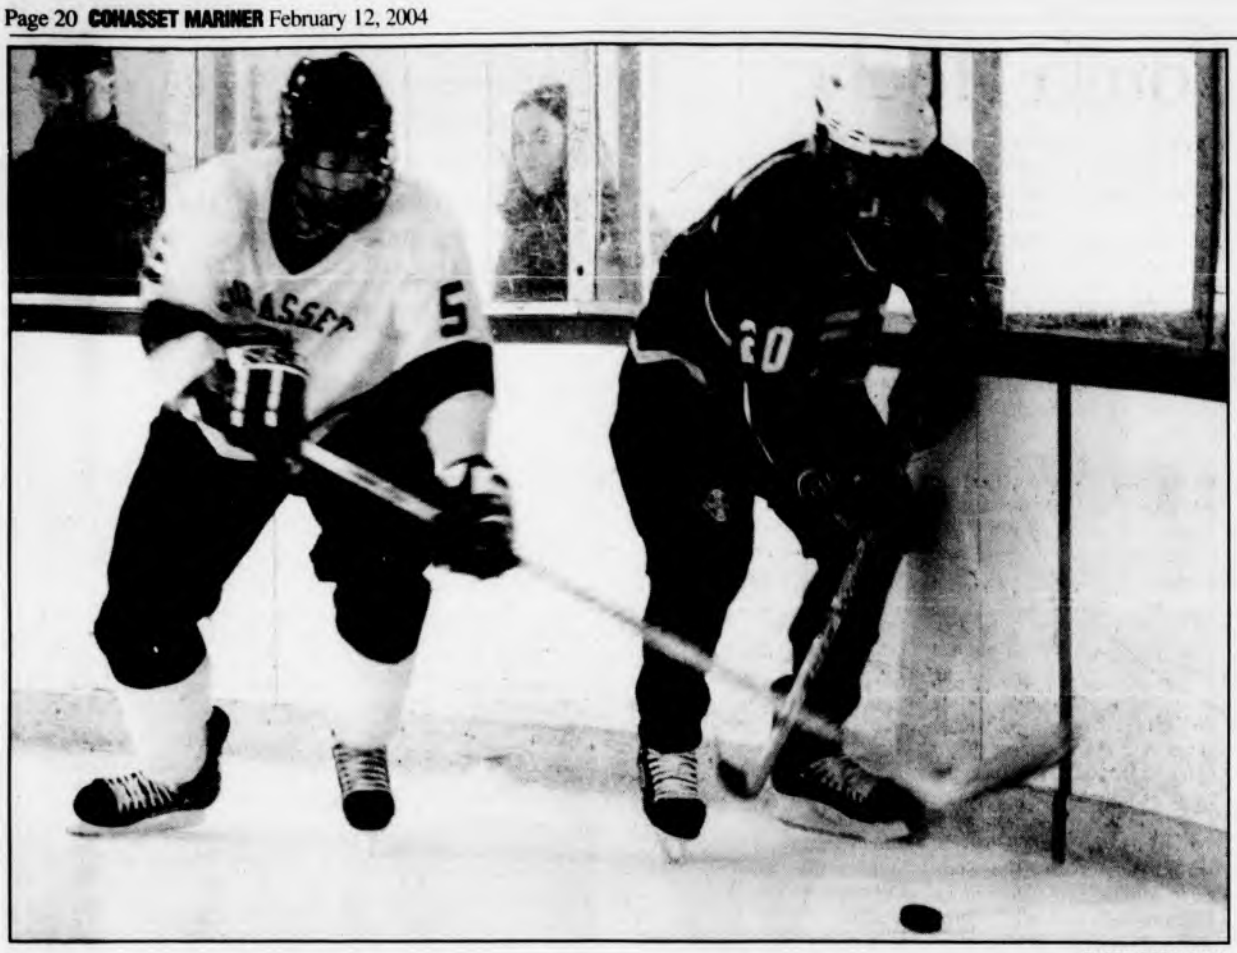
The Cohasset High hockey team turned in its best performance of the season by far, Sunday night, with a decisive 9-5 win over South Shore League rival Mashpee at the Falmouth Ice Arena.

"This is the first time this season I can say we played good, hard hockey for 45 minutes," said first year Skippers coach Ben Virga, his team moving back over the all-important .500 mark (6-5-3) with six games remaining. "If we can sustain what we showed tonight, I have no doubt we can beat any team in our league. That's up to the kids, though.

"We have three games remaining this week, and they're all league games. 2-0-1 gets us into the tourney. We do that, and we can concentrate on getting ready for the tourney in the last three."

The Skippers were slated to host Harwich last night at Pilgrim Arena, a team they tied down in Orleans on Jan. 17, and will take on Mashpee for the second time in five days tomorrow night (6:50 p.m. at Pilgrim). Cohasset will close out the week on Saturday afternoon (3:50 p.m. start) versus SSL rival Carver at the Bridgewater Ice. The Skippers topped Carver the first time around by a 5-4 score.

"We're playing much better hockey right now than we were the first time around against those teams," continued Virga . "If the guys come to play in those games like they did (Sunday), I really like our chances."



Sunday's game was not even as close as the score might indicate, as was witnessed by Cohasset's advantage of 50-19 in shots on goal. The Skippers ran off eight unanswered goals to take a 9-2 advantage into the late stages of the game. Mashpee star Trevor Fronius (three goals, assist) set up three scores against Cohasset deep reserves inside the final three minutes, scoring two himself and setting up the third with a beautiful forecheck steal and feed from in back of the Cohasset net.

The top Cohasset forward line of Rob Carpenter, Ted Straughn and Joe Durkin absolutely dominated play anytime they were on the ice in the early going, but simply could not convert on at least a half dozen legitimate chances in the opening frame.

This opened the door slightly for the host Falcons. After Cohasset sophomore Mark Bouchard finished on a beautiful centering feed from linemate Matt O'Connell 1:58 in, Mashpee's Nick Wagner answered it 41 seconds later with an unassisted tally.

The near unthinkable (based on the level of domination everyone was observing on the ice) happened at 4:58 of the opening period. With two Cohasset skaters in the penalty box, Fronius was able to prevent a weak clearing attempt just inside the Skippers blue line and swoop into the slot to beat Skippers sophomore goalie Stefan Parnell with a wrister high to his glove side.

O'Connell would get that back for the Skippers, though, tipping home a Mark Donovan slapper from the right point with the Skippers shorthanded. This equalizer featured some great hustle from both of these Cohasset players. O'Connell stayed aggressive on the forecheck after a Skippers clear, managing to collect the puck near the left corner and fire it around the boards toward the right point, where Donovan was able to race to it just ahead of a Mashpee player and fire off a slapper toward goal. By this point, O'Connell, who'd never stopped moving on the play, was cutting across toward the edge of the right circle and managed to just get a piece of Donovan's slapper and deflect it far side past Mashpee goalie Chris Kennedy.

"Thank God for Matty O'Connell in that first period," said Virga. "He was the central guy in both of our goals. We'd done a lot of good things up to that point, but Matt let us go into the first break tied. It would have been kind of depressing after outplaying them like we did to go in at the end of one down a goal or two."

It was all Skippers from there…at least in the part of the game that mattered.

Senior tri-captain Mike Rasmussen gave the Skippers the lead for good 1:21 into the second when an attempted dump around the backboards by a Mashpee defender took a funny bounce out toward the front of the net, where Rasmussen was able to tuck it away inside the left post past the surprised Kennedy.

Carpenter, the most dynamic player on the ice all night, set up Rasmussen for his second goal of the game on the power play with 4:45 remaining in the second, making it a 4-2 game. The senior centerman collected his own deflected slapper from the high slot in the right circle, quickly got around a Mashpee defender and took his time as he skated out from the backboards, waiting for Rasmussen to get in position by the far post before feathering the pass perfectly to set up a one-timer past the powerless Kennedy.

The Skippers would light the lamp five more times in the first 11 minutes of the third period to put the game way, WAY away. Junior Joe Durkin scored twice inside the first four minutes, with captain Straughn (two assists) and Carpenter notching assists. The third team captain, senior Mike Devine (goal, assist), would score on a pretty wrap-around move with 5:38 gone to make it a 7-2 game and officially kick off extended audition time for the Cohasset deep reserves.

Three freshmen teamed on the eighth Cohasset tally. Colin Smith scored his first high school goal with 8:30 to play by getting in the right place by the weakside post and poking home the rebound of a Conor Holway shot. Austen Lanzillotti put this play in motion with some nice digging in the right corners and a pretty centering feed to Holway.

Donovan completed the scoring for Cohasset with four minutes to play, finishing by the left post on a nifty behind-the-net feed from Lanzillotti.

Skippers 8, Hull 5

The Skippers appeared to be cruising in this one as well on Wednesday at Pilgrim Arena before allowing the host Pirates to cut the lead to 5-4 early in the third period with three unanswered goals against the deep reserves.

Fortunately, Bouchard and Carpenter put the game away with a late goals. It was the second tally of the game for both players. Straughn and Rasmussen also had two goals in the game.

Scit-Coh swimmers edged by Spellman

Seven team records, many personal bests highlight near win

By Becky Keys
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Scituate-Cohasset high school swimmers had their closet meet of the season against Cardinal Spellman, on Friday.

The Sci-Cohs swam hard, they swam fast, but it wasn't enough to walk away with the victory. The score was quite tight in the first half of the meet; the opportunity for a win was theirs. Unfortunately, it was not to be.

The team did walk away with the pride in seven records broken, however, and many swimmers accomplishing their personal best times.

Referring to Justin Damaso and Alyssa Rogers, head coach Jami Kearney boasted "two athletes really showed their stuff today."

Justin broke the record in the 200 freestyle and swam an extremely impressive race in the difficult 200 Individual Medley. "He really put in the extra effort today." Noted Kearney.

Alyssa's technique was likewise outstanding. She broke records in the 200 IM, the grueling 100 butterfly and was a part of the record breaking 200 free relay. The other members of that record breaking relay team were Maura Whalen, Liz Tierney and Becky Keys. Liz also broke the record for the 50 freestyle.

The diving event was especially exciting. Becky scored over the sectional qualifying total of 165 points at the meet. She needs to score over 165 one more time to sew up a spot at Sectionals.

"All of our driving down to Sandwich paid off today," said Scit-Coh Diving Coach Terry Duggan. "Becky was focused. She had great form and dove without a splash."

The team has a couple of meets left this week before the league championship on Saturday.

Coastal Stars Youth Hockey

Mite C3

The Coastal Stars Mites C-3 team continued their winning ways with a 10-3 decision over the Eagles 3 Mites team. The win extends the teams overall season record to a perfect 17-0-0. While the score of the game appears lopsided the game actually featured two periods of tight skating by both clubs and some great saves by Stars net minder Sam Topham as well as the Eagles goaltender. The score of the game stood at 5-2 Stars at the end of the second period when the team exploded for five goals in the third period. The Stars goal scoring was again spread through all three forward lines. Center James Daley opened the scoring midway through the first period and finished the game with a "hat trick" netting a goal in each period. Multiple goal efforts were turned in by wingers Mark McGoldrick and Robert Gargano who each beat the Eagles goaltender twice. Rounding out the scoring were single tallies from center Ryan Davis and wingers Max Hemingway and Matt Tautkus. Forwards Curtis Golden, Jake Denton and Garrett Leahy all played solid "two way" hockey assisting the defensemen while creating pressure in the offensive zone allowing their line mates to shoot the puck in the Eagles net. Strong continued positional play by the Stars defensemen at both ends of the ice served to break up offensive rushes by the opposing team while creating offensive plays with accurate "break out" passes. Stars defensemen Declan Leahy, Jeffrey Powers, Hugh Healy and Ryan Melia controlled the flow of the action taking the "steam" out of many Eagles attempted scoring opportunities. Defensemen Bryan Bowman and Andrew Tautkus each played solid defense while contributing offensive assists with passes from the blue line to waiting forwards positioned in near the goaltender. Another great team effort with all mates contributing.

Mite A

Frank Lemieux scored a hat trick, Terrence Doonan added two goals, and Colin Whelan was nearly invincible in net as the Mite A Coastal Stars earned an 8-1 win against Milton. Doonan started the scoring at 11:31 of the first period when he lifted a Kevin McDougall feed out front halfway up in the right side of the net. Colin Whelan and the Stars defense was tested several times, but Jared McCrystal continued his strong positional play, and blocked a shot out front. Whelan stood tall and took a flurry of shots off the chest. And Jeremy Duchini showed some offensive flash on a rush that was saved. Lemieux put the Stars up by two with 3:10 left in the period on a blast from the left circle to the top right corner. About a half minute later, Andrew Geddes tucked the rebound of a Jonathan Spitz shot into the right side for a 3-0 lead at the break. The teams traded rushes during most of the second period. Chris Cohen made a nice block in front of his net and forechecked ferociously in the corners. Tommy Dixon won a face-off outside the Milton blue line, skated the puck to the right circle, and fired it to the right corner for a 4-0 lead with 4:54 left. Lemieux struck again a few moments later on a wrister from the left circle that found the five-hole. The Stars incurred a penalty with 1:52 left in the period, but Terrence Doonan, Will Golden, Brian Smith, and Ken Parnell successfully killed the penalty. Golden was robbed on a breakaway during the kill. Lemieux got the hat trick when he slammed the rebound of Dixon's shot from the right side home at 17:45 of the third period. Two minutes later, Kevin McDougall deftly rushed end-to-end, put a beautiful fake on the goaltender, and posited the puck in the left side for the 7-0 lead. After a sensational save by Whelan, Jeremy Duchini passed to Will DeCoste in the neutral zone. Decoste broke through center ice on net for a shot that hit the post. Terrence Doonan completed the Stars' scoring when he rebounded a Will Golden shot with 4:45 left in the game.

Squirt A

The Stars Squirt A hockey team has gone won two and lost one in their last 3 games. The loss came against a very strong Plymouth team 8-1 in which there were not too many highlights for the Stars. The loan goal came from Travers Craven assisted by Ryan Donovan in the third period that spoiled the shut out for Plymouth. The Stars were without two defenseman, Matt Entwistle and Will Schorle, and fell behind 4-0 quickly. Defense has been a strength all year and the Stars were certainly outmaned in this one.

The first of the two Stars victories was against Milton 5-3 in a game that featured many highlights for the Stars. Alex Evans looked like his Dad at the kitchen table as he cleaned up leftovers three times to record a hat trick. All of his goals came on rebounds as Alex drove to the net hard with his stick on the ice the entire game. Kevin Kelly was impressive in net and got great support from the defensive four of Pat Cull, Matt Entwistle, Brian Scott and Will Schorle. This past weekend the Stars beat Taunton 3-2. Ryan Donovan played perhaps his best two way game of the season as he was a force at both ends of the ice. He figured in on all 3 goals, 2 goals and an assist, and nearly completed the hat trick with the Taunton goalie pulled late in the game. Kevin Kelly was sharp again in net and was very happy to have all of his defenseman in the line up. Connor McLean scored the other goal doing a nice job of getting open in the slot while Travers Craven and Ryan Donovan cycled behind the net giving McLean time to get open. Jeff Durkin, John Collins, John Meehan and Tyler Martina were tenacious in the neutral zone especially in the third period with the Stars up by two goals. With the goaltender pulled and a power play Taunton narrowed the lead to one, but with just two seconds remaining the Stars were in control.

PeeWee C1

The Coastal Stars Pee-Wee C1 team dominated against the Norwood Nuggets on Sunday and came away with an impressive 10-2 victory. Mike O'Halloran debuted in net for the Stars for the first time this season and played very well - turning back a number of quality scoring opportunities. Every other member of the Stars' team earned at least one point during the outing. Justin Yeager scored four points including a hat trick. Chris Fazzina and Phil Murphy each collected a goal and two assists. Andrew Bell, Connor Ofsthun and Gordy Smith each had a goal and an assist. Mike Caira and Kevin O'Connell each scored goals while Brian Meehan, John Carrigg and Geoff Evans each earned assists. The Stars were clicking on all cylinders and controlled every aspect of the game. Highlights of the game included excellent fore-checking and hard body checking by the Stars.

Girls travel basketball report

The Cohasset sixth, seventh, and eighth grade girls basketball travel teams made their long trek to Rockland Sunday a worthwhile one, as all of the teams turned in stellar performances to come home with hard-fought victories.

The Super Sixers got the Blue & White victory train started with a 29-13 win over their Rockland hosts. Cohasset dominated the court at both ends with a tough man-to-man defense, strong rebounding, and a potent offense to grab a commanding 15-4 lead at the half. Although Rockland turned to an outside shooting game to try to offset the Cohasset strength underneath, it still proved no match for the Blue & White, which walked off the floor with a 29-14 triumph.

Cohasset benefitted from a cohesive team effort on offense which generated a well balanced scoring attack. Lindsay Allard led the Blue & White with five points, followed by Isabelle Franklin, Meredith Kelly, Tori Lehr, Erin Fontaine, and Mimi Mahoney with four points each. Lucy Noble and Olivia Sullivan also chipped in with a basket apiece. Amy Meikleham, Allard, and Franklin were immense under the boards, while backcourt mates Chelsea Sylvia, Samantha Crough, and Fontaine disrupted the Rockland offense with their ball-hawking defense.

The win kept the Super Sixers' unbeaten record intact at 7-0.

The seventh graders similarly remained unbeaten in Old Colony League play with a 30-20 victory over their Rockland counterparts. Maura Barnes was a force on offense, hitting for double figures to lead the Seventh Wonders in the scoring department with 11 points. Madeline Leahy and Grace Clougherty also were cited for their superb efforts.

The eighth grade squad had two tough acts to follow, but they turned in a masterpiece of their own with a 25-13 triumph. Meg Anderson, Gabriella Flibotte, and Sally Meehan each accounted for eight points as the Effervescent Eights improved to 4-3 on the year.

The fifth grade team (6-1 on the season) had the week off, courtesy of a forfeit because Rockland does not have a fifth grade girls team in the Old Colony League.

All of the girls teams have the next two weeks off during the holiday weekends. However, they will return to action with games on Saturday, February 28 (at Abington) and on Sunday, February 29 (home vs. Hanover). The home games start at 1:00 p.m. at Cohasset High – the games are fast-paced and fun to watch – so come on up to the CHS gym to root on your hometown favorites.

field and advancing to next week's Div. 3 state championships, which will be hosted at Cohasset. If one or two make it to the semi-finals, though, that could be the difference between three or four team placement spots.

Sweeney also figures he's got a few darkhorses in there who could challenge for a spot in the top six of their respective weight classes.

"It would be great if we could come out of here with seven, eight or even nine guys who get to wrestle at States in front of their hometown fans next week," said Sweeney.

The Div. 3 South Sectionals are scheduled for Feb 13 and 14 at Foxboro High.

Cohasset High will host the state divisional championships the following weekend, Feb. 20 and 21, something their brand new wrestling facilities have made possible. There are 57 Div. 3 teams in the state and there will be 240 wrestlers eligible to wrestle at CHS on the 20th.

"We're still working out the logistics and making deals with hotels," reported Sweeney. "It's a lot of work, but it should be a great time."

If any alumni are interested in volunteering their time to help out at the Divisional championships, they should call coach Sweeney at Cohasset High (781-383-6103). Also, any business or individual interested in making donations to help the effort should contact coach Sweeney.

Lady hoopsters prep for playoffs seconds remaining, Captain Jen Buckley sank a risky three-pointer giving Cohasset a very sweet victory.

"We attribute this win to our exceptional zone defense and tough rebounding," said junior Casey Anderson, who had 17 points in the game to go along with double-digit rebounds.

The league leader in points per game went on: "The teams were so evenly matched. We gave it our all and it paid off for us".

Two days later, the Nantucket Whalers cruised over to the Skippers home turf. Through their dependable defense, Cohasset managed to overpower Nantucket and put up a final score of 42-29.

Reflecting on the game, Coach John Levangie said, "Yes, we won, but the girls recognized their offense wasn't at its peak. Luckily, our tenacious 3-2 defense made up for our lack of shooting."

Unfortunately, the Skippers cold shooting carried over into Saturday night's showdown with Carver. Cohasset managed to contain the game to a close 43-37 final score. The 11-for-27 foul shooting proved too much for the Lady Skippers to overcome in this tight contest.

The win allowed Carver to move into a tie for second place in the South Shore League with the Lady Skippers behind league leading Harwich.

"Our well-built defense caused Carver a lot of trouble," offered senior Danielle Pinkus. "Yet, they sank some very painful outside shots."

Unlike the rest of the team, Pinkus played a masterful offensive game, getting most of her points on put backs.

"Our entire team played a solid defensive game," reported coach Levangie. "Our shots just didn't fall through the hoop. What a tough way to lose."

Nor-Coh's reign

Jen Guiney was tops on vault (8.3).

Hingham-Scituate, which also fell to host Hanover (117.9 points), wrapped up the season with a 7-3 record.

Hingham's Katie Donovan was third on vault.

The SSL league meet at Carver High on Saturday also featured a bundle of Nor-Coh highlights. Gymnasts were allowed to compete in only two of the five events at that meet, with the all-around counting as one event.

Durkin, still recovering from a sprained ankle, finished fourth in the all-around with a score of 33.2.

Rosen won on both vault (8.1) and floor (8.9), and Erin Kelly was tops on beam (8.4).

Guiney was second on vault (8.0) and bars (7.9). Cohasset's Kate Carpenter was third on beam (8.0) and Kiersten Shontz was sixth on vault (7.5).

This was the final tune-up for the South Sectionals. Only eight teams qualify for this event, and that includes league champions from the OCL, Pilgrim Conference, Hockomock League and Eastern Athletic Conference. The remaining teams will be selected based on the average of their top four scores.

Norwell High gymnast Samantha Rosen prepares for her dismount during the Nor-Coh's South Shore League clinching win last Thursday night over Hingham-Scituate at Hanover Middle School.

The Nor-Cohs have a top four score average of 129.5, which will likely put them right in the middle of the seedings pack.

Only two of the eight teams will automatically advance from Sectionals to the All-State championships, though there will be two more "wild card" teams chosen based on best score from the three Sectionals- - South, North and Central-East.

Staying alive

corner for three. The shot was nothing but net, and the Skippers sideline was clearly pumped as they went into the locker room with a one-point lead.

Head coach Ron Ford said the play was executed to perfection.

"They ran the play exactly how we drew it up," he said. "That's the play of the game right there."

Senior point guard John Andrade agreed.

"That play was huge," he said. "It was a big momentum booster. But Trevor has been doing that all year."

Andrade started the scoring in the second half with a trey, starting a 7-0 run. It was Cohasset's game at that point, as the Rough Riders got no closer than six points the rest of the way.

The Skippers got another strong effort from guard Chris Bilodeau, who scored 26 points on 10-for-14 shooting.

The senior had sprained his ankle last Thursday in a win over Carver, and was on crutches as recently as Saturday during the team's loss at Archbishop Williams.

Ford praised trainer Jim Levenson for doing all he could to have his leading scorer ready for action. The coach also had plenty of praise for Bilodeau's effort.

"Chris was barely walking [before the game]," Ford said. "He's one of the toughest kids I've ever coached."

Defense carried the way for the Skippers against Harwich. The Rough Riders have some good shooters, and they were able to jump out to a 9-2 lead on three three-pointers. In the first six minutes, their perimeter passing seemed to be one step ahead of Cohasset's defense.

After a timeout at the 10:16 mark, however, that changed, as Cohasset put the long ball on lockdown. Harwich shot just 2-for-10 on threes for the rest of the game.

Should Cohasset pull it off and make the tournament, the team will have an advantage that their record otherwise may not indicate, said senior co-captain Sean Connolly.

"We started our tournament after the loss at Archies," said Connolly, who had six points and nine rebounds against Harwich. "We can't lose any more games. If we get in, we'll have that edge over other teams."

Hull, who is already in the tournament, has beaten Cohasset twice already this year. The last one came on the Pirates' home floor, as the Skippers could not overcome an early 20-5 deficit and lost, 63-58.

Ford was clearly looking forward to last night after the Harwich win.

"We're still alive for the tournament, and it's a game against our biggest rivals," he said. "You can't ask for anything more than that."

If you want to get to know a rug, rub its back.
DOES IT FEEL TOO SMOOTH, TOO STIFF? IT'S PROBABLY A MACHINE-MADE RUG.
SOME EXQUISITE RUGS HAVE AS MANY AS 800 KNOTS PER INCH.
MOST RUGS ARE MADE OF WOOL. MORE ELABORATE DESIGNS ARE OFTEN WOVEN FROM SILK. WE HAVE SOME THAT COMBINE WOOL AND SILK.
WE HAVE THE WIDEST SELECTION AND BEST VALUE OF ANYONE IN NEW ENGLAND, LIKE THIS RUG FROM THE MAHAL COLLECTION BY SAMAD (M-101 RED/RED).
If it feels a little too smooth, if you can't feel the knots, if it feels a little stiff, then it's probably a machine-made rug. There's nothing wrong with a rug made by a machine as long as you aren't paying like it was a rug made by hand. The same design executed by a machine should cost a third of what a hand-made costs. Hand-knotted rugs are guaranteed to out-live you. A machine-made rug has the life expectancy of five to ten years. Many people buy hand-made rugs for a living room, dining room, or entrance hall. They put the hand-mades where there's a lot of traffic. They put the machine-mades where there's less traffic. That's pretty much the rule.
If you're really serious, measure an inch (the tip of your index finger in length) and count the number of knots. More knots per inch are another measure of quality. There are some amazingly elaborate works of art that have as many as 800 knots per inch. (We have some in our store.)
A simpler design might have around 80 knots per inch. The knottier rugs are often made of silk. The simpler ones are generally made of wool. We have some outstanding rugs that are a combination of wool and silk, basically the best of both worlds. At our store, Dover Rug, we can show you everything from an investment grade rug to a beautiful broadloom carpet. We have the widest selection and the best value of anyone in New England. Plus, on our hand-made rugs, we offer a lifetime (That's lifetime) exchange policy.
So, another way to make sure you're getting what you paid when you buy a rug is to turn the corner and look for our label.

Common.

"I didn't know I had won until I got there," she said, and was pleasantly surprised to her the news.

Shan Shan said in much of her artwork, she tries to build a bridge between the two cultures she has come to know. She tries to convey messages with her art and takes the time to make sure what she is trying to say comes through in her pieces. She said some of her writing has also been about trying to help people see the world from a different point of view. "I want to try to help people see a different culture and I want to see more of this culture," she said.

Shan Shan also volunteers for different organizations, and has been giving tours at the State House for the past two years, which was very challenging at the beginning because of the language barrier. In addition, she has been completing an internship at the Coalition for Asian Pacific American Youth, in Chinatown, where she has been putting her design skills to work. She is currently working on a brochure which she is translating into both Chinese and English.

The plethora of experience Shan Shan has gained is sure to be helpful in her college application process. "I want to go to college in America. There are lots of opportunities, and the ability to interact with people from all over," she said, adding as a senior, she is currently looking at schools in New England, and is interested in the Ivy Leagues. With the course load she has been carrying, any school could easily see she is a hard worker and very dedicated.

This semester, Shan Shan is taking mostly advanced placement classes, including AP Calculus, AP English, AP European History, and AP Chemistry. However, this is also her second year of classes as a senior, because she chose to voluntarily stay back last year. While she acknowledges many students her age would "think I was crazy" for wanting to stay an extra year in high school, she is glad she made the choice to stay.

"I think it's good to be prepared. In the long term, I'll have more experience and will be more mature to face any challenges. I'll be able to learn more and improve in my English. There is still some potential in me in terms of my language," she said.

Shan Shan Nie, who is one of 50 METCO students in Cohasset, shares her story with the Mariner.

But Shan Shan said none of her accomplishments would be possible without the support of her family, especially her mother, Shan Zhuo Chen, and her stepfather John Belcher. "I have had lots of help and support from my parents," she said. But she has also had support from her Cohasset host family, the Genello's, who live on Pond Street, who have provided her with a home away from home if she ever needs to stay in Cohasset overnight.

For fun, Shan Shan said she enjoys hanging out with her friends. She said sometimes they will stay over her house and they will go into Boston and go shopping, or just watch movies and hang out. She said since the first day she came to Cohasset, everyone has been really friendly to her and she has made some great friends. She has really enjoyed becoming involved in Cohasset's community, and will continue to do so until June when she graduates.

"Cohasset has given me a lot both through the community and the school, so I'm trying to give back as much as I can," she said.

Full-day kindergarten next fall at Conservatory

South Shore Conservatory announces the introduction of a full-day arts-principled kindergarten program, which begins fall of 2004.

Similar to the Conservatory's popular preschool program, the new kindergarten program combines traditional components of kindergarten, such as learning readiness and letter/number recognition, with considerable performing arts exposure.

"Providing a South Shore Conservatory arts-principled kindergarten program is a vision we have held for many years," says Conservatory Director Jim Simpson. "We are very grateful that the new addition to our campus affords us the space and facilities necessary to fulfill this dream."

The kindergarten program has openings for 18 students, with a teacher and assistant teacher in the room full time, and a music specialist in the room part time. Students who turn five before Aug. 31 may register for South Shore Conservatory's kindergarten program, while students who turn five between Sept. 1 and Dec. 31 may also register for the program to use it as a Pre-K readiness experience.

Specific goals of the program are to provide children the tools with which they can achieve age-appropriate academic competencies, acquire the focus and discipline necessary for task completion, and instill accountability and responsibility for their own learning. The kindergarten will serve as a nurturing outlet for creative expression, and as an extended outlet of the preschool. Arts components include vocal and instrumental music, dance, drama and expressive arts, all presented by South Shore Conservatory faculty members. Visual arts will be presented by outside artists.

In addition, children will learn respect for self and others, social skills, independent thinking, communication skills, and will gain confidence in learning and increase their self-esteem.

The proposed school day will run from 8:30 am to 2:30 p.m.

The $3.5 million addition to the Hingham campus, which allows space for the kindergarten program, is being funded by the current Building the Future campaign. This extra space allows for three new large classrooms, nine teaching studios and two gallery spaces. With this addition, South Shore Conservatory will be able to offer José Mateo's Ballet Theatre Young Dancers Program in the fall, a Music Therapy program, and extended summer offerings.

South Shore Conservatory has started accepting kindergarten registrations for next fall. Please call Kate Manchester at 781-749-7565, ext. 10 for more information.

Eaton it up

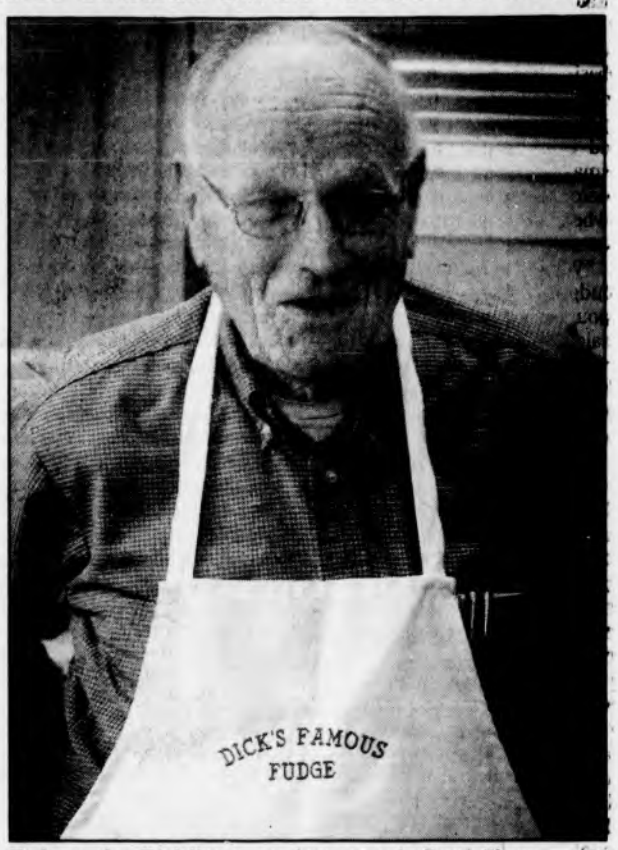
Local fudge maker shares sweet success story

By Seth Jacobson
SJACOBSO@CNC.COM

With Valentine's Day at our doorstep, South Shore Natural Science Center volunteer Dick Eaton is sure to be a busy man.

Eaton, 80, of Hanover, has been making fudge since he was a young boy. In fact, his fudge is famous around the South Shore among certain circles who know about it.

Eaton recently found time to demonstrate a couple of his classic fudge recipes to an audience at the Science Center.



The first thing he told attendees was that he never sells his fudge for profit, but rather, donates it to causes around the South Shore he deems worthy.

"I donate loads of fudge to charities," he said.

Eaton described his way of making fudge as "fool-proof," using four main ingredients — sugar, butter or margarine, canned milk, and marshmallow fluff.

It's not just chocolate fudge Eaton enjoys making. He said he makes all kinds including penuche (fudge which uses white-chocolate chips), a chocolate and orange layered fudge, mint fudge, peanut butter and chocolate fudge, among

"People's number-one interest is the chocolate fudge," Eaton said.

During the Science Center event, Eaton demonstrated a basic chocolate fudge but also showed attendees how to make penuche. He carefully illustrated every step in the facility's small kitchen, as curious onlookers wandered over to see where the delicious smell was coming from.

"When I'm really into making fudge, I'll make about 40 pounds of it in one shot," Eaton said. "I just turned 80 and I want to stay as active as I can. I've always found it amazing how much people love homemade things."

Eaton said he never saw the value in having his own fudge business. He said he would always rather donate his fudge to charity. He explained some people he donates fudge to do sell it for profit and he advises them that each box costs around $6.

"I just started doing it for fun when I was a kid," Eaton said. "I got into it in high school. I always just fiddled around at that age and I always did a lot of baking. It got to the point where I had a deal with my mom. I'd cook things if she'd clean up after me."

Growing up in Raynham, Eaton said he was voted the number-one fudge-maker in town by the local women's club when he was about 16 years old.

Eaton said he went into the service from 1943-1946 and didn't make too much fudge during that time. He said he didn't do much cooking while he was in college, either.

But in 1954, he moved to Hanover and got back into it.

"I rediscovered my passion for making fudge during the 1950s," he said. "People around here got to like it. They started counting on it."

Soon, Eaton found himself donating most of the fudge he made to local organizations and discovered he loved doing that. And today, his principles remain the same as they were back then.

On Saturday (Feb. 7), Eaton attended a wine-tasting festival in Hull sponsored by Why Me Inc., an organization he described as "similar to the Ronald McDonald House." He said the organization is a charity that aims at helping sick children. He brought five different kinds of fudge to that event, and noted other vendors brought their own culinary specialties.

Every year, Eaton says he brings his fudge to various events. He brings it to the corn festival and the maple festival at the Science Center. He said when he can, he also donates fudge to the Main Spring homeless shelter in Brockton. He also frequently donates fudge to the Hanover Council on Aging.

Eaton said he has been doing volunteer work for a long time, serving as a volunteer at the Science Center for 31 years and at the Hanover Public Library for 18 years.

But of all the things he's known for, it's his knack for making the best fudge in town.

"I think mine is unique because it's a nice, creamy fudge," Eaton said. "The secret is not overcooking it and not undercooking it.

"People sometimes tell me, 'My fudge never comes out, why should I bother?,'" Eaton said. "But I have a fool-proof recipe which I've been using for a long time."

Need the recipe? Eaton said he's not listed in the phone book but noted people can find him at the Science Center volunteering at the front desk every Wednesday.

"People think I want to keep the recipe a secret," Eaton said. "But there's no secret. Just take out a piece of paper and a pen and I'll tell you."

Eaton said making fudge is definitely one of his favorite things to do, despite the fact that he doesn't make any money doing it.

"At least I'll die happy," he said. "Like I said, people love getting the gift of something homemade."

Fr. Maheras elected VP

At its Jan. 21, Annual Meeting in Sudbury, the Massachusetts Council of Churches elected Rev. Father John Maheras of Scituate to serve as vice-president of its 40 member board of directors. In the process of nominating Father Maheras, Professor Priscilla Kelso of Newtonville cited his breadth of national and international experience in the ecumenical movement. Father Maheras serves as priest to Nativity-Assumption of the Virgin Mary Greek Orthodox Church in Cohasset and is also Ecumenical Officer for the Greek Orthodox Metropolis of Boston.

Now in its 102 year, the MA Council is an ecumenical partnership of 16 Orthodox and Protestant denominations in the state, including the Greek Orthodox Metropolis of Boston. This year's meeting was hosted by Sudbury United Methodist Church.

Maheras is a graduate of Holy Cross Theological School, the Ecumenical Institute-Bossey in Switzerland and the Patriarchal Theological School of Istanbul, Turkey and holds other advanced degrees. In the mid 60's, he created the Youth Department for the Greek Orthodox Archdiocese while simultaneously heading the Ecumenical Office. He worked closely with the National Council of Churches, and especially Church World Service, in relocating groups of displaced Greek Orthodox persons to New England. Father Maheras has represented the Greek Orthodox Archdiocese at various World Council of Churches conferences and other ecumenical gatherings. He was appointed to the Massachusetts Council of Churches by His Eminence Metropolitan Methodios and guided the entrance of the Greek Orthodox Metropolis into the MCC.

Maheras has written extensively in various fields, including developing the Guidebook for Orthodox Church Choirs, which is published annually, and authoring the Youth planbook for more than 20 years.

Maheras and his wife Susan live in Scituate. They have four grown daughters and three grandchildren.

Other offices elected for 2004 are: the Rev. John Stendahl, President (New England Synod, Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, Newton Centre); Ms. Anne Nickerson, Secretary (United Church of Christ, Worcester); and Mr. Robert Sarly, Treasurer (Unitarian Universalist, Wellesley).

Remembering Nicholas Lyons

Family, friends grieve for teenager

By Carol Britton Meyer and Seth Jacobson
STAFF WRITERS

There's no doubt Nicholas Lyons was loved and will be missed.

Following an automobile accident in Hingham last Monday (Feb. 2) that claimed the life of the Norwell teenager, friends gathered Thursday night to express their love — and grief — for Nicholas, who was 19.

A memorial was set up on a telephone pole at the accident scene on Rockland Street across from the Weir Street extension. Flowers and a can of Pringles were placed around the base, and touching photographs and equally moving notes of affection were tacked to the pole. One read, "Nick, You were a wonderful friend and a beautiful person. I wish I could tell you how much you will be missed. We'll meet again someday. Save me a place, bro. Your friend forever, Rob."

"Nick, You were a great person and will be forever missed. I owe you everything for taking care of my best friend and keeping her happy. We all love you. CU later. Love always and forever, 'Fat Al' and Alice," another friend wrote.

Other messages to their friend were written on the sidewalk – "RIP, Nick" and "We miss you, Nick." On a nearby log were painted the words, "Captain Nick."

Nicholas, who enjoyed snowboarding and spending time with his friends, also worked at Cohasset Golf Club for four years.

Nicholas, a former resident of Hingham and Hull, graduated from Hull High School last year. He had just started working as a shipper for the Zildjian Company of Norwell, which makes cymbals. Nicholas, who enjoyed snowboarding and spending time with his friends, also worked at Cohasset Golf Club for four years.

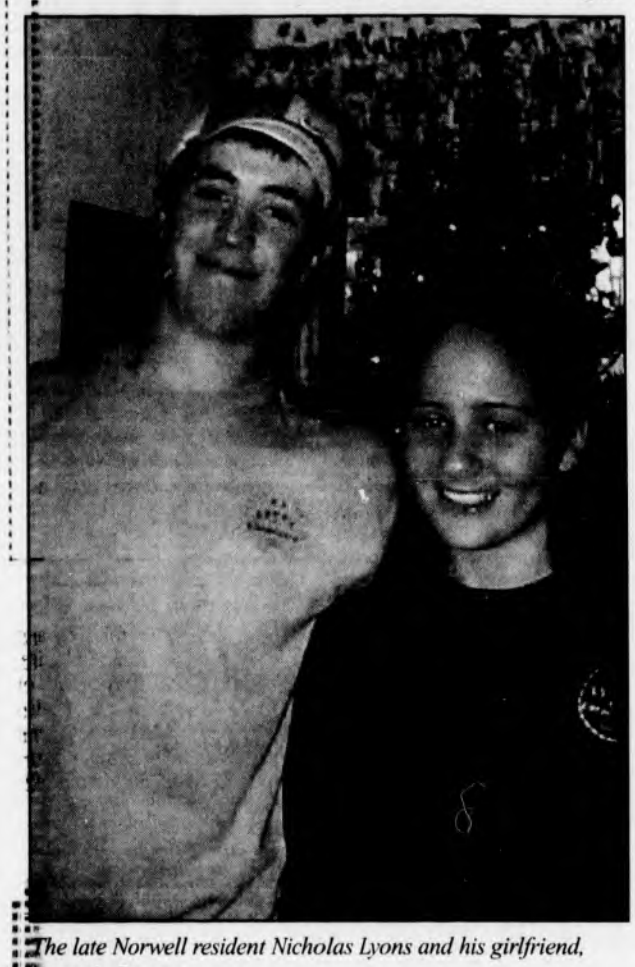
Nicholas had been living with his grandparents, Elliott and Karen Lyons, in Norwell before he died. He had moved there to be closer to work.

Elliott Lyons said he has been so grateful with the outpouring of support from people around the area who knew his grandson.

"What I found through this tragedy was that (Nicholas) was so well liked," he said. "The funeral was Saturday and so many of his friends showed up. It just blew me away."

Elliott recalled what kind of man his grandson was.

"He was such a great kid," he said. "He would always help people out. He was very close with us and with the rest of the family. We're a very tight-knit family. There's a lot of personal memories I'll never forget."



One thing Elliott recalled was how close Nicholas was with his two young cousins.

"My other children had two young kids and Nicholas always adored seeing them," he said. "And they lit up when they saw him. He was very close to them, even though there was 18 years difference in age. These are the things you appreciate. He was just a loving, caring person."

Elliott added he always confided in his grandparents and loved being with his girlfriend, Amanda Bergen.

"He always loved being around his family," Elliott said. "Like I said, we're very tight-knit. You don't always see that in this day and age. In times like this, that was always great to have and Nick was a big part of that."

The accident, which was reported at 4:45 a.m. on Feb. 2, is under investigation by the Hingham Police Department and the State Police Accident Reconstruction Unit.

A roadside memorial pays tribute to Nicholas Lyons. The fatal accident occurred on Rockland Street across from the Weir Street extension.

Preliminary reports indicated the 1997 Pontiac Grand Prix Nicholas was driving was traveling northerly on Rockland Street from the area of West Corner toward the Hingham Rotary when it went out of control, hitting a stone wall and a utility pole.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

Getting the Most out of a Camp Fair
Snow is on the ground and icicles are hanging from the roof...so that means that
CAMP FAIR SEASON HAS ARRIVED!

It's hard to believe, as you cope with the below zero blues, that summer is coming and summer camp enrollments are filling up, but the American Camping Association of New England (ACANE) assures us that it's true. And Camp Fairs are a great way to get the ball rolling towards finding your child a camp that will be a good fit and a rewarding experience.

If camp is in your family's plan for Summer 2004, it's time to secure a spot at a camp for your child. Some camps are already full! If you haven't identified a camp yet, consider attending one of the many camp fairs taking place this season throughout New England to jump-start your search.

A Camp Fair is an excellent tool for parents to use to help reach the goal of finding the best camp for your child. These fairs exist so parents and prospective campers can explore several camp options at once. Look upon them as one-stop shopping! Attending one or two can be a real time saver, particularly if you approach the fair with an open mind and a willingness to do your homework. Assembling so many camps and prospective campers and their families in the same place at the same time is a real service to campers and families, and is a great opportunity to get to know the diversity that exists within the camp world.

Whether you are at the very beginning of a camp search (identifying your options and exploring what's offered) or you are deliberating among a few finalists, attending a camp fair can help. At a camp fair you have access to camp directors and other key administrators and the opportunity to ask any questions you may have. This sort of informal meeting is the next best thing to visiting the camp.

Every camp at a Camp Fair wants to show you as much as possible. No such thing as too much information! Many offer photos and slides of the camp, testimonials from campers, in-depth brochures, take-home videos, references…you name it. The information-gathering phase of a camp search can take weeks if not longer. Even with the ease of downloading camp information from the Internet, it's oftentimes necessary to wait for certain camp materials and forms to arrive in the mail. So, being able to pick up brochures and applications at a camp fair display can save a great deal of time! Look at each camp's display and you'll have an opportunity to collect information and see visuals that might not be available on the Web or elsewhere.

American Camping Association of New England's
TIPS FOR MAKING THE MOST OF A CAMP FAIR:

Make a list of what's important in your search.
- Day or overnight camp? Think about travel time.
- How many weeks?
- What are your goals?
- What are your child's goals?
- General program or specialty program?
- What is your budget?

Get a directory of camps represented at the fair (then you can still contact them if you miss their booth)
- Be strategic! Mark the camps that might fulfill your criteria.
- Set out to visit those camps' booths.

Keep your eyes open
- If a camp booth catches your eye or your child's, stop and check it out!
- Look carefully at display materials. Examine photographs, watch videos, slides and/or DVDs

Keep your ears open
- Take the chance to interview camp directors and other administrators.
- Listen to camp representatives talking with your child.
- Listen to conversations camp representatives have with other children and adults.

Save a tree!
- Only take printed material for camps that are real possibilities for your children. Arriving home with a big pile of brochures can be overwhelming (especially when you will end up recycling or throwing away most of them)!
- If you have a camp fair directory, you will have the contact information for all camps represented. You can visit their Web sites or request material at a later time if you want it.

Matos resigns as PALS officer

Officer Lisa Matos recently resigned as the PALS officer in Cohasset Schools, a post she has held for many years.

"I am disappointed that I can no longer be the schools PALS officer but because of some recent issues that have come to my attention I had to resign," said Matos, who did not elaborate. "I am confident that Mike Gill and Judy Wilson will continue to have a comprehensive health and safety program that addresses the risk factors of children using drugs and the physical and legal consequences of such dangerous behavior."

Gill wrote a letter to the editor that appears in this week's Mariner praising Matos' work with the schools.

Smokey Joe's Cafe serves up great music

With two separate productions of Smokey Joe's Cafe now being presented in Norwell and Quincy, it may seem to the casual observer that a new chain of restaurants has opened on the South Shore.

Indeed, the Quincy Dinner Theater offering even comes with a meal, it is great music, however, that is on the menu of both local productions of the long-running Broadway revue. Featuring the words and music of the legendary song-writing team of Jerry Leiber and Mike Stoller, the musical is a high-energy celebration of two of the songwriters who helped define 1950s and '60s rock 'n roll, doo wop and blues with memorable hits like "Jailhouse Rock," "Poison Ivy," and "Stand By Me."

The Quincy Dinner Theatre is presenting "Smokey Joe's Cafe" Feb 14-15 and 21-22 at 1170 Hancock Street in Quincy. For tickets and information, call 781-843-5862 or visit www.quincydinnertheater.com. The show is also being staged by The Company Theatre, 30 Accord Park Drive, Norwell, Feb. 13-22. For tickets and information, call 781/871-2787 or visit www.companytheatre.com.

Police hearing takes aim at Legion arrests

Defense expected to begin March 1

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Had Keith Jackson not made a wisecrack to Officer Frank Yannizzi, as the patrol officer tried to squeeze past him on the handicapped ramp outside the American Legion Post on a Saturday night last October, would we be here today?

Testimony at last week's "Day Three" of the ongoing disciplinary hearing involving Sgt. William Quigley whose police report states he responded to the Legion at about 10:30 p.m., Oct. 11 after a passing motorist said "fight, fight!" begged that question.

The verbal exchange between Keith Jackson, 25, and backup Officer Yannizzi — whose utility belt apparently brushed Jackson — was described as "sarcastic." Keith Jackson said something to the effect of "most people say excuse me" triggering Yannizzi to respond. The verbal clash apparently prompted Quigley to arrest Keith Jackson, who is the police chief's son, and two other men, Jerry Cogill, 25, and Adam Thibault, 22, that night.

The arrest of the chief's son has fueled speculation in town that it was the reason for Quigley's ouster by Town Manager Mark Haddad — who placed the sergeant and Officer James McLean on paid administrative leave 10 days later on Oct. 20 — pending the outcome of an investigation. In the weeks that followed, Haddad categorically denied the arrest of Keith Jackson had anything to do with his placing Quigley on leave.

But the "Legion arrests" took center stage last Thursday, as Day Three of the ongoing police disciplinary hearings got underway.

After responding to the Legion and followed there by Officer Shellee Peters and Yannizzi, Quigley apparently made the decision to arrest the three men, who had been wrestling on the ground and were all exhibiting the effects of alcohol, after hearing the verbal altercation between Keith Jackson and Yannizzi, according to testimony.

The arrests that included the felony charge of malicious destruction of property over $250 (broken handicapped railing) and two misdemeanors,

Schools seek tax increase

Make case for $400K override

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The School Committee is doing what it is elected to do — lobby for the schools.

To the end, the school board took its case for a $400,000 override to the Board of Selectmen and Advisory Committee last week and made it clear the tax hike is sorely needed to close a gap in the school department's fiscal year 2005 budget.

If passed, the Prop. 2-1/2 override would add 23 cents per $1,000 to the tax rate. The owner of a $600,000 home has a property tax bill of about $7,134 this year. If the override passes, that bill would increase about $294 to $7,428 — $138 of which would be attributed to the override.

Another way of looking at the tax numbers is: the current tax rate is $11.89 per $1,000 of assessed valuation and the town is allowed to increase that rate next year by 26 cents under Prop. 2-1/2, the state law that caps the amount a municipality can raise its tax levy from year to year. If the override passes, another 23 cents would be added to the tax rate for a total of $12.38, according to Town Finance Director Michael Buckley.

Harvey and Dormitzer join selectmen's race

Two other contests also highlight ballot

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Voters will have a lot to think about come Election Day, April 3.

At literally the 11th hour, Ralph Dormitzer of Atlantic Avenue and Lou Harvey of King Street entered the Selectmen's race, creating another contest. There are also races for the School Committee and the Planning Board. The men pulled papers on Thursday, Feb. 12 – the last day they were available – and returned them Tuesday before the 5 p.m. deadline.

Harvey and Dormitzer are also running as a team, which is adding a new dimension to the race. In other words, they are going to ask voters to mark their ballots for both and if not, then for neither of them. The men are competing in a four-way race for two seats. Incumbent Merle Brown of Beechwood Street is seeking reelection and Rob Spofford of Heather Drive, who is chairman of the School Building Committee, is hoping to fill Tom Callahan's seat. Callahan is not seeking a third term.

"It's obvious the Selectmen are in need of help," says Harvey, who runs a multinational research company, DALBAR. "They are not up to the big issues. Ralph and I know how to deal with the big city lawyers, unions and can manage headstrong employees."

"Ralph and I know how to deal with the big city lawyers, unions and can manage headstrong employees."
— Lou Harvey, candidate

Harvey, as a member of the Committee on Town History, worked with the schools to tie Cohasset's history into the curriculum. He's lived in town 13 years and also participated in the acquisition of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library building for the historical society.

Dormitzer, who moved to town in 1967, served on the School Committee back in the 1970s. He is currently co-chairman of the Community Advisory Committee representing Cohasset and 28 other towns before Massport and the Federal Aviation Administration in an aircraft noise abatement study.

Dormitzer, a retired business executive, said he, along with Harvey, want to bring better leadership, communication and fiscal responsibility to Cohasset.

"Arguably, the town's greatest weakness, fiscal management, is the Harvey-Dormitzer team's greatest strength," says Dormitzer, adding other concerns include loss of open space, invasion of large multi-unit dwellings and a lack of civility in town government.

Spofford says he welcomes the competition.

Water Department floats six articles

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Water Commission will have six articles on the Warrant this March, and members came before Selectmen last week to give an overview of what each entails. From land acquisition, to closing a right of way, to completing ongoing water related projects in town, it seems the commission has covered it all.

• Article 23 is a standard funding article, which asks for $2.5 million to carry out various water system improvement projects including improvements to the Lily Pond Water Treatment Plant, cleaning and lining water pipes, replacing water pipes, and capital maintenance. It will also fund other improvements to wells, storage tanks, and the water distribution system, including taking measures to acquire property to protect the town's drinking water supply.

Funding will also be used for current high priority projects, including improving insufficient fire flows on North Main Street, Gammons Road, Jerusalem Road Drive, and Haystack Lane, by replacing undersized water mains.

• Article 24 would authorize the borrowing of $20,880,000 at 2 percent interest under the State Revolving Fund, or SRF. The money would be used to rehabilitate roughly 10 miles of the water distribution system, to upgrade the Lily Pond Treatment Plant, and reactivate both the Ellms Meadow and Sohier Street Wellfields. It would also allow the town to borrow an additional $479,000 in 2 percent low interest SRF loans to implement non-point source pollution controls to reduce contamination of Lily Pond and the Aaron River Reservoir.

"I think it's a great idea," said Town Manager Mark Haddad, adding he thinks the plan is a smart way to borrow the money, because it will not affect rates for the Water Department's customers.

• Article 25 would allow the Water Department to acquire parcels of land in the watershed of Lily Pond and the Aaron River Reservoir, to prevent development in that area which could harm the town's drinking water supply. Water Commissioner Glenn Pratt said the land would comprise approximately 78 acres. By obtaining the parcels, it would help achieve the commission's overall goal to reduce nutrient loading into the town's drinking water supply.

• Article 26 would allow the town to accept a donation of land which would also help protect Lily Pond. Four acres have been donated by the Dustin Wheelwright family, for a parcel near the Aaron River.

"We're very happy to be receiving it as a gift," said Chairman of the Water Commission John McNabb.

• Article 27 would allow the area known as "Old Road," which was used as a public way in the 1670s when Cohasset was first settled, to be discontinued as a public way to help prevent possible development on the site. Pratt said currently on site, there is nothing there to indicate the land was every used historically, and by discontinuing it as a public way, there would be no chance of an old deed surfacing, and someone looking to build on it. "It's just there on paper, there's nothing discernable there," he said.

• Article 28 would allow the Water Commission to sell water to Hingham for 40 years. As of right now, contracts have been signed to sell up to 306,000 gallons of water per day to the Linden Ponds development in Hingham for the next 20 years.

"It makes it easier for them and it makes it easier for us," said Vice Chairman of the Water Commission Robert Kasameyer, because the development will need to be supplied with water for more than 20 years, and would like to sign a contract for 40. Because Cohasset has access to roughly seven times the amount of water the town uses, the Water Commission feels the contract can be signed at a low risk, which will provide Cohasset with needed funding, without affecting the Water Department's ability to provide a quality product to its customers.

Other land acquisitions on the docket

The Open Space Committee has also included an article on the Warrant which would authorize the town to acquire land to protect the town's water supply and preserve open space.

Debbie Cook of the Open Space Committee and Community Preservation Committee presented Selectmen with a summary of the proposed article, which would give the OK to purchase 11 parcels, totaling 70 acres of open land. The parcels are located to the west of King Street, and are bounded by Trustees of Reservations land, Wompatuck State Park, and Water Department land.

"This is a very rich biological area. It is on the state's bio map," said Cook, which means it has been recognized as a good sized parcel of land with a model wildlife habitat. She added it is probably developable, and could potentially accommodate roughly 50 homes, but the environmental ramifications would be devastating for the surrounding area, not to mention the loss of an environmentally abundant open space. The fertilizer from lawns alone in a development in that area would have a very harmful effect on Lily Pond, without taking into account stormwater runoff and wastewater.

While a deal will have to made with the various owners of the land as far as purchasing is concerned, the article would give the Open Space Committee permission from the town to take the next steps to acquire the land. The Community Preservation Committee also has an article on the Warrant which will include donating funding for the costs associated with the acquisition of the parcels. It is possible the wording of the article could be changed to include a condition that the land is never built on. Cook said the Trustees have already said they would be glad to hold the parcel of land to ensure it is kept as is, and would be willing to create trails on site.

Copies of the drafted Warrant are available at the library, the Town Clerk's office, Planning Board office and Selectmen's office.

Opening burning season has started

Cohasset residents may obtain permits on a daily basis through May 1 for open burning. Permits may be obtained by calling the Fire Department Dispatch Center at 781-383-6047 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Permits are valid for one day only.

Burning may be conducted during periods of good atmospheric ventilation and must not cause a nuisance. Adverse weather conditions (wind and drought) will impact permit issuance. Nutrition advisory panel takes seat at the lunch table

Holds its first meeting at CMHS

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Childhood obesity is running rampant across the country and is a topic the Cohasset Board of Health has become very concerned with. In light of that, the board has formed a Nutrition Advisory Committee, which has its first meeting last week at the middle-high school. The committee will share information with the schools, to help ensure students are given the healthiest lunch menu options possible.

Since the beginning of the school year, the board has been trying to form a committee to address the problem, and there has been communication with the schools to see if changes to both the vending machines and the everyday lunch menu can be made. The board had suggested the schools try having one "junk free" day at the schools as week, with no burgers, pizza, pasta, or fries.

Those present at the meeting included Health Education Coordinator Michael Gill, Food Services Director Robert Levy, Supt. Edward Malvey, School Committee Vice Chairman Chartis Tebbetts, Health Agent Joseph Godzik, Board of Health Chairman Steve Bobo, Board of Health member Peggy Chapman, and nutritionist Paula Pozniak who has children in the school system. At this preliminary stage, the meeting was meant to help set up the purview of the committee and a possible agenda for the future.

"We will always look for ways to cooperate with other boards," said Supt. Edward Malvey, but added because of the various state and federal regulations the schools have to abide by, he wanted to make sure the committee understood they are only to serve on an advisory basis.

Godzik said the board truly does look at the committee as being advisory, but added if the schools were doing something which was not in line with its standards, "We still have the power to impose some sort of nutritional standard."

However, Tebbetts said while it's not that she doesn't agree with whether the board should have that jurisdiction, "I'd like to see where it says that," she said.

Bobo said as the first step in working together, the committee should start by taking a look at the regulations set forth by the state in order to "see what you're faced with now." While the board would like to see changes made, members made it clear they are aware there are already restrictions in place.

However, Malvey did not seem comfortable with where the meeting was headed and said, "Our understanding is, this is an advisory committee. We're participating in this process for the good of the issue, and we have regulations we have to abide by."

He added while the board is providing a service to the schools by sharing information, which is appreciated, if its intention is to become involved in order to get a better idea of how food service works to then impose more regulations, that is not how he had envisioned the committee.

Godzik assured Malvey the board was only there to work together, and its members would provide information in a cooperative fashion.

"Information sharing is going to be a very important part of this committee," Godzik said.

Gill said once discussion begins, it is possible there could be much agreement on the different health issues at the schools. He suggested the effort become all-encompassing to carry the message back to the homes of students. Tebbetts agreed and said in her view, there are three different perspectives, all of which are equally important, that need to be considered when addressing the problem of nutrition in the schools, which includes the school district, Board of Health, and citizens of the town. "The citizens are the ones who pay the bills and elect us," she said, adding it is important to listen to what the people have to say, and she is glad the board took the initiative to start the committee.

Since school began, there have already been changes made to the school lunch program, which were under Levy's direction. He said the schools no longer offer ice cream for dessert and frozen yogurt and fat free popscicles have been put in its place. Water, 100 percent fruit juices, and milk are the only beverages available, and while snacks are still offered, the number of choices have been limited.

"We can't have nothing or the kids wouldn't eat anything or they'll bring it from home," Levy said.

In addition, Levy said every meal offered at the school has a fruit and vegetable component, and the schools now offer oven baked fries every day. Levy also said deli sales have gone way up, which is a much healthier alternative than burgers which the board was very pleased to hear.

The Nutrition Advisory Committee has scheduled a second meeting for Tuesday, April 6 at 9:30 a.m. The Committee will continue to work on formulating an agenda, and the Board of Health will provide updates. It is expected the committee will formally meet three times during the school year, once it is established.

Developers line up for chance at Cook Estate project

Four finalists in the running

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Plans to develop the Cook Estate off Sohier Street into a mixed-income senior housing community took a big step forward last week when five developers submitted Request for Proposals, dubbed RFPs, that either met or exceeded the town's minimum price of $5.25 million.

Now over the next three weeks, a new citizen committee — appointed by Selectmen — will represent the community in advising the Board of Selectmen during the developer selection process, according to Town Manager Mark Haddad. The goal is to select a developer by March 8 and the town hopes to close on the property by the end of October.

Last fall's Special Town Meeting set the stage for the town to package an adjacent 9-acre town-owned parcel behind Stop & Shop with the 22-acre Cook Estate to build senior housing that would include affordable units.

The town will conduct simultaneous closings, so no town money will be spent on the Cook Estate valued at $4.5 million. In fact depending on which developer is selected, the town stands to make from $100,000 to $750,000 on the sale of the town-owned land.

A three-acre parcel across Sohier Street (between the Mobil Station and Fair Oaks Lane), which is part of the Cook Estate, will be retained by the town and kept as open space.

The RFPs that include detailed proposals — about everything from architectural renderings of the buildings themselves to break downs of type, style and location of units — range from a low of $5.25 million to a high of $6 million. Four of proposals include plans for 95 housing units, the maximum allowed in the bid proposal. One bidder proposed 87 units.

The project is the second proposed under the town's new Senior Overlay District Bylaw that permits higher density housing than would otherwise be allowed and requires a percentage of the units be affordable. Cedarmere, a 105-unit senior housing community off Beechwood Street, has also filed under the new bylaw.

RFPs were submitted by the following developers:

- Deer Hill Partners LLC of Braintree (in association with Coler & Colantonio, Inc., Ross Assoc. Architects, and Stockard, Engler & Brigham), $5.25 million
- Cohasset Residential LLC (c/o Black Rock Development of Hingham), $5.25 million
- Abbott Real Estate Development LLC of Boston, $5.35 million
- Northland Residential Corp. of Newton, $5.425 million.
- Baran-Keen (Baran Companies of Boston and Keen Development Corp. of Cambridge), $6 million

Steve Bobo, a member of the RFP review committee, said the group met Tuesday and eliminated Deer Hill Partners because the company didn't provide a specific price and proposed 24 units of affordable housing, four less than the 28 required.

The committee will meet from 7-9:30 p.m., tonight (Feb. 19) at Town Hall to go over the four finalists and come up with questions for bidder presentations slated to begin next Wednesday.

"There are some very innovative proposals," Bobo said. "There is great diversity in the options before us. We have a lot to choose from. Anyone of the four proposals, we'd be fortunate to have."

Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris who also sits on the RFP Committee said she met with the Senior Housing Committee yesterday and the group was very happy about the proposals.

"They were really excited," McMorris said. "We've talked for years about something like this." She described the four proposals as "really good" and wanted the Senior Housing Committee to participate in the presentations by the developers.

McMorris said the RFP Committee that is made up of eight residents would likely present the advantages and disadvantages of each proposal to the Selectmen, rather than making a specific recommendation.

The town estimates property taxes from the site, once developed, would generate upwards of $375,000 a year. The project, which is for the 55-plus set, is not expected to add children to the schools.

The town released 75 RFPs for the project starting Nov. 25, 2003.

Jane Bancroft Cook, who passed away in 2002, was a great benefactor to Cohasset in her lifetime and her heirs continued that legacy by working with the town to provide it with this opportunity, selectmen said.

Haddad, who has explained the Cook site would likely be developed if the town hadn't stepped forward and perhaps in a less desirable way from the town's perspective, has said by combining the parcels, the town can reduce development impacts than if the two sites were developed separately. This plan also allows the town to take advantage of private sector creativity and expertise, he said.

Police Disciplinary Hearings

Officer Rick Grassie is cross-examined by Attorney Doug Louison during last week's hearing about what happened at Quincy District Court the morning of Oct. 14, 2003.

affray and disorderly conduct, set in motion a series of "machinations," according to the officers' attorney Doug Louison, that resulted in the District Attorney's office removing then Police Prosecutor Rick Grassie from the court.

The town is charging Quigley with illegally arresting the three men at the Legion post, that he filed a false police report to cover up the improper arrests and later told the Grassie to "get rid of the charges before arraignment," said Peter Berry, who is prosecuting the town's case along with Susan Henderson, who joined the town's legal team following the first two days of hearings Jan. 28 and 29.

But Louison described Quigley as an officer who makes arrests based on the laws that are on the books.

"These are lawful arrests," Louison said about the Legion and two other Quigley arrests being questioned by the town. "This officer rather than being dragged through the mud should be applauded for protecting the town and the law-abiding people in Cohasset."

The prosecution (town) essentially rested its case last Thursday. The officers are expected to begin presenting their side when the hearing is scheduled to resume March 1.

Over the course of three full-day hearings, the town presented testimony in three arrests and one booking procedure by Sgt. Quigley and one arrest by Officer James McLean.

The officers are charged with a pattern of abuse of police power, according to Berry, that includes illegal searches and seizures, violation of civil rights and in Quigley's case improper booking of a prisoner and filing of evidence. Both officers are accused of conduct unbecoming an officer for drinking on duty following weapons certification at the Scituate Rod & Gun Club last May 22.

Day Three last Thursday began with a heated verbal exchange between Berry and Louison.

Berry, who said the public was confused about the charges against the officers and the town's evidence to support those charges, asked to be able to provide a summary over the objections of Louison. The hearings have been covered in the newspaper and are shown live on cable-TV.

Berry explained the hearings were preliminary and informal to let the officers know the substance of the charges and give them the opportunity to respond. He said he wanted to "inform the public, whom the officers asked to review the proceedings, exactly why we're here."

But Louison argued Haddad, the hearing officer, is the only audience that matters statutorily. "While clarity in the public's mind is nice – it is not what is at issue. Doing a performance midway through the town's presentation of evidence is odd, procedurally incorrect and prejudicial," he said.

Haddad allowed Berry to continue with the summary that included evidence that the town had presented thus far through its witnesses.

But when Berry accused Louison of having threatened a witness to the Rod & Gun Club incident, Louison did not remain silent and rose out of his chair.

"I'm not going to stand here and listen to Mr. Berry say I'm threatening witnesses, that is baloney and he knows it," Louison shouted. "If you've got a case put it on, don't start talking about me threatening witnesses — that is inappropriate and you know it."

Berry, who was also standing, raised his voice and said, "this is the same type of brutish behavior the town is here for this morning to try and protect the citizens from, by these officers."

Haddad regained control of the hearing and Henderson, who is also representing the town and prepared Thursday's witnesses, called Officer Peters to the stand.

Routine patrol

Peters said she was on routine patrol the night of Oct. 11 when she received a radio transmission to meet Sgt. Quigley at the overflow parking lot across from the Cohasset Harbor Inn (formerly Kimball's), which is a few doors away from the Legion. [According to Quigley's police report, he planned to order Peters to stay on and work the midnight-8a.m. shift that night.]

Peters pulled into the parking lot, where Quigley was sitting in his cruiser facing the street, so the two cruisers were driver's side door to driver's side door. In other words, Peters was facing in toward the parking lot and Quigley was facing out toward the street.

Peters said Quigley asked if she'd heard "fight, fight" while turning his head in both directions. She said the conversation lasted about five seconds. She testified she had not seen or heard the passing motorist whom Quigley said alerted him to the incident. Under cross examination, Peters said it was chilly that night and she had her window rolled up as she was driving to the parking lot. She testified Quigley could not see the Legion from where he was parked. She said he pulled out toward the Legion in haste and she did a U-turn in the parking lot and followed him there, arriving about 20 seconds after he did.

Louison said something obviously alerted Quigley to the incident at the Legion.

"Quigley didn't have a crystal ball attached to his dashboard that night?" Louison asked Peters. "Something caused his attention to be drawn to the Legion where three individuals were horse-playing and a railing was broken, right?"

Peters said at the Legion she saw two men at the top of the handicapped ramp who were tilting their heads toward each other as if to hide a third person.

Peters said all the men were exhibiting the effects of alcohol although no one was sweaty, bleeding or had to be taken to the hospital from the wrestling match.

She said she heard Quigley mention getting a cab ride for the men. She said Quigley told her to get names and information from people so she went to her cruiser to get a notebook.

"As I did Officer Yannizzi came to the scene and he immediately passed by me and my cruiser and ran up the ramp," she said. Peters said she walked up behind Yannizzi and immediately started taking information from Thibault.

Then Peters said, "I heard a commotion that 'alright you're under arrest', so I said, 'do you want me to arrest this one too, Sarg'?'"

Peters said Quigley asked her to stand by while he took a photograph of the handicapped railing, in which one spindle was bent out and broken, and two or three other spindles were missing.

Then she transported Thibault, whom she described as polite and cooperative, to headquarters. She said Thibault, who admitted to having backed into the railing, said the men were just horsing around. He was very apologetic and said he would pay for any damage, she said.

Under cross examination, Peters agreed that those arrested often deny culpability in a crime.

"Most don't say, 'oh you got me again,'" Louison said. "They say, 'what did you arrest me for?'"

Louison said Peters did not know what Quigley, who had shone a spotlight on the three men, had initially observed at the Legion because she didn't arrive when he did.

"You don't know what he saw when he hit that light or what the individuals did in response to having the light put on them," he said. "You don't know if they were fighting or brawling."

Peters was apparently far enough behind Quigley not to see him make a U-turn in front of the Legion in his cruiser. When she arrived Quigley's cruiser was facing the opposite direction, Louison pointed out. Also at one point, Peters went inside the Legion to ask the bartender Donald McCormack to come outside.

When Henderson, one of the town's lawyers, asked Peters, who has worked on the 4 p.m. to midnight shift with Quigley for 1-1/2 years, if working with Quigley pleased her – Louison vigorously objected. Henderson suggested Quigley's actions had lowered morale at the police department.

"There are no charges saying Sgt. Quigley has lowered morale at the department," Louison said. "The morale is the responsibility of Chief Jackson. I suggest questions about morale be directed to him."

He described questioning as to whether a subordinate officer's pleasure or displeasure as to who her boss is as a "fishing expedition."

But Peters said she would resign if Quigley came back because she didn't like the way Quigley handled the public and the people around him inside the department.

Louison suggested she might have an ulterior motive. "Is that because you've now been a witness against him and if he comes back, he'll be your supervisor?" he asked.

Louison also suggested Peters, who had taken the sergeant's exam, might be waiting for an opening. That comment prompted a strong objection from Henderson, who said Louison was casting aspersions on the credibility of the witness.

But Louison pressed the issue, saying he should be allowed to probe exactly why Peters would resign if Quigley came back.

"I want to ask if there is some other animus this witness has toward her supervisor, such as (performance) warnings and discipline Quigley has given her in the past."

Under cross-examination, Peters agreed with Louison when he described Quigley as a strict supervisor that made sure officers were out patrolling and not watching TV while on shift.

"That wasn't a popular supervisory act by Quigley, correct?" Louison asked. Peters responded, "I guess not."

Louison asked Peters several questions about verbal warnings from Quigley on "certain performance deficiencies" one of which involved her not making an arrest on a domestic when Quigley thought she should have.

"The way I see it, if someone has a conversation with me and doesn't tell me it's a verbal warning then I take it as conversation," she said. "Many times Sgt. Quigley and I had conversations but in no way was I ever notified I was under any verbal warning."

But Louison pointed out that Quigley was her supervisor, who gave her orders. "Talking to you was not a discussion among equals, he was talking to you as your supervisor about your performance," he said.

Legion bartender

Donald McCormack, a Weymouth resident, was working at the Legion as the Saturday night bartender on Oct. 11. There were a total of about seven people left in the establishment when McCormack, who was standing in the kitchen, saw three men run out the back door. He knew Keith Jackson, who is a member of the Legion, but he did not know Thibault and Cogill, whom he described as the "sausage kid" because of the plate of sausages and sub rolls he brought that night. He described the three as playing "grab ass."

"Obviously, I went in hot pursuit," he recalled. When he got outside, he saw two men wrestling on the ground, laughing and giggling. He saw Keith Jackson pull Thibault up against the wall and say, "You can't be doing this here."

"At this point it was sufficiently ended in my mind and I went back inside," said McCormack, adding the next time he knew anything was going on was about five minutes later when Officer Peters came into the kitchen to ask him to come outside.

McCormack, who recalled saying he could call for a cab to take the men home, said when he went back outside Quigley had Cogill by the arm. McCormack remembered Quigley telling him there had been a telephone complaint about a fight at the Legion. He said Quigley asked him about how much the men had been drinking and then recalled something distracted the sergeant's attention to the end of the handicapped ramp.

McCormack said he heard Quigley say he's a "smart mouth and if he opens his mouth again arrest him." At about that time, Quigley shone his flashlight over the side of the railing to look for the missing spindles.

"I looked over myself and they were not there," said McCormack, adding the spindles had been missing for months and hadn't been replaced because the Legion planned to bring the ramp up to code.

McCormack said he could not definitely say whether the broken spindle was damaged that night.

"At that point, he (Quigley) took everyone away and I went back inside, closed the establishment and felt it necessary to write a statement which I did that evening," he said.

When asked why he decided to write a report, McCormack said he did so the Legion would not get a "bad rap." "I wanted to document the facts as I saw them," he said.

Under cross-examination, McCormack agreed that wrestling was not permitted at the Legion but said the incident had not elevated to the level where he needed to call the police.

However, Louison pointed out McCormack did not know what was going on outside during the five minutes between the time he said Keith Jackson broke up the fight to the time Officer Peters arrived in the kitchen and asked McCormack to come outside.

'Swing up here'

Officer Frank Yannizzi said he was at KoKo Island when he received a radio transmission from Quigley asking him to "swing up here." Yannizzi, who thought he had missed a radio call because he had stepped outside his cruiser, said he called dispatch and learned there was a fight at the Legion.

Yannizzi said he turned on the blue lights and drove to the Legion at a high rate of speed, having to swerve to avoid hitting a family that was crossing the street.

Once at the Legion, Yannizzi recalled Quigley motioning him to come up to the sergeant's location. Yannizzi said there wasn't enough room to fit through the male parties on the ramp and his utility belt rubbed up against one of the men, later determined to be Keith Jackson. Yannizzi recalled Jackson as saying "most people say excuse me" to which Yannizzi, who denied it was a hostile exchange, said he replied "most people get out of the way." Then Quigley advised Yannizzi that all the men were under arrest and Yannizzi handcuffed Jackson and escorted him to his cruiser.

Under cross-examination, Yannizzi said he liked working with Quigley who had always treated him fairly. He said when he arrived at the scene it didn't seem like a typical bar fight because "no one else cared and you usually can't keep people out of it." But he admitted he didn't know whether the bar was packed or empty at the time.

Yannizzi said the three men all smelled of a strong odor of alcohol. He said his exchange with Keith Jackson could be described as sarcastic in tone.

At the station, Yannizzi recalled Keith Jackson as saying "roger that, roger that" to questioning by Quigley and also heard him say, "call my father, he's on your speed dial." Yannizzi also said he had to hit the Plexiglas to tell Keith Jackson, who had crawled under the bed in the cell, to get out from under there because it was dirty.

Later that night Yannizzi said he met Officer Peters at the Town Hall parking lot to discuss the arrests. He asked her if she'd seen a fight and she said she hadn't. He also said he told her how upset he was about having almost hit a man and woman carrying two children on his way to the Legion.

Non-arraignment day

On Oct. 14, the day after the Columbus Day holiday, Officer Rick Grassie, who was the police prosecutor, said Sgt. Quigley with arrest folders in hand greeted him by the rear door of the station at about 7:45 a.m..

He said they had a short conversation and then went into the sergeant's office where Grassie recalled Quigley saying, "You're going to love this," as he handed him three arrest folders. "I had to arrest Keith Jackson, Jerry Cogill and a kid named Adam Thibault who is Kaitlyn Jackson's boyfriend at the Legion over the weekend." Grassie said Quigley then told him "I need you to do me a favor – I need you to get rid of these complaints prior to the arraignment."

Grassie said the request troubled

him because Sgt. Quigley had never before asked for him to get rid of any cases prior to an arraignment. Grassie asked Quigley, "wait a minute you arrested three people, charged them with three counts each, bailed these three people and now you just want this thing to go away prior to arraignment? and he said 'yeah Rick that's what I want.'"

[But according to Quigley's case notes that are part of the court file, Quigley stated he brought Grassie into the sergeant's office and said he had no problem with him disposing of the case that day and noted it was a routine practice for police prosecutors to clear minor cases at arraignment.]

Under questioning by Louison, Grassie said he understood cases are often dismissed after arraignment with the payment of court costs and that doesn't mean the arrests were unconstitutional. Grassie agreed an arraignment is the first presentation to the court of the defendant and the charges.

"And that very first step has to take place only after the application for complaint is signed and submitted to the court," Louison said. "In fact dismissals often take place but they occur after the application is filed."

Louison said it was illogical that Quigley would want his own arrests to go away. He asked Grassie if he'd asked Quigley "if you wanted these things to go away – why did you arrest them in the first place?"

Grassie recalled, "I just asked him if something was wrong with the arrests."

Louison suggested Quigley told Grassie he had to arrest the chief's son because "he was presented with something and he had to make an arrest. And he probably wasn't happy he had to arrest the chief son, right?"

Grassie said before going to court he went home to type up a few paragraphs about the meeting so he'd be covered if anything came out of the arrests.

Sometime after arriving at court, Grassie said Keith Jackson's defense attorney Ron Rice presented him with a letter on Legion letterhead from Post Commander Steve Wigmore stating that the damage to handicapped railing was preexisting.

Grassie said Rice cautioned him he might be exposing the town and himself to a frivolous lawsuit by signing the arrest complaint. Grassie said he then discussed the matter with Clerk Magistrate John Dalton, whom Grassie said also warned him about the potential of a "frivolous lawsuit" if he signed the complaint and had questions about the arrests. Grassie recalled that Dalton told him to talk to other police prosecutors at the court who had years of experience. "That's exactly what I did," said Grassie, who said the consensus was for him not to sign the complaint and have Quigley sign it because it was his arrest.

Grassie said he informed the clerk's office he was not going to sign the complaints and took the folders. He didn't recall if he made any comments to Quigley about what happened in court that morning.

Several weeks later, on the morning of Nov. 10. Grassie said he met with an assistant district attorney and Arthur Tobin, head clerk magistrate, at Quincy District Court. Grassie said Tobin told him that Judge Mark Coven was having a probable cause hearing with First Assistant District Attorney Dennis Mahoney that afternoon about the three Legion arrest cases because Grassie had refused to sign the complaint. At that meeting Grassie said he was told that Mahoney intended to fire him if he didn't sign the complaints.

"Later on we went into Judge Coven's courtroom for a session, they had the hearing and what was said was said, and what was done was done," Grassie said. [Coven found probable cause to issue the complaint of malicious destruction of property but dismissed the charges of affray and disorderly conduct.]

Several days later (Nov. 13), a Massachusetts State Trooper served Grassie with a notice that he had been terminated as court prosecutor for the town, said Grassie.

But Louison pointed out differences between Grassie's written report and Dalton's sworn affidavit in which Dalton said he was never presented with an arrest report or specific complaint.

"You wrote 'I requested he read an arrest report,'" Louison said. "He wrote 'I was never presented with among other things a statement for the reasons for arrest." Grassie responded, "he's wrong."

Louison also said it was irregular that Grassie would accept an "unsworn to, to-whom-it-may-concern letter" from a defense attorney."

"Did you understand that was out of the ordinary having the defense attorney give you evidence even before the case was presented to court before the initial arraignment?" Louison asked.

Overheard

Bill English, who replaced Grassie as police prosecutor, said he was in the conference room watching TV when he heard Quigley talk to Grassie in the hallway about the Legion arrests the morning of Oct. 14 before the men went into the sergeant's office and closed the door.

"I heard Quigley tell Grassie that Chief Jackson's kid got arrested and you have to do something with this," English recalled. He said the conversation seemed odd to him because it "wasn't Sgt. Quigley's 'MO' so to speak."

English said the conversation he heard was about dismissing the case at arraignment or prior to arraignment. "It was my understanding Sgt. Quigley didn't want to see the case go any further," he said.

But Louison noted that English had no way of knowing what Quigley felt.

"You don't know what his thought processes were," he said. "You had no way of knowing what his reasons were to make statements to Grassie." Under further questioning by Louison, English agreed it would not be an enviable position to be involved in the arrest or the prosecution of the chief's son.

English said Sgt. John Conte directed him to write a report on Nov. 12 that was due Nov. 14 about what he had overheard. Chief Robert Jackson sent English a letter dated Nov. 14 notifying him of his appointment as police prosecutor effective Nov. 17.

Henderson, the town's attorney, asked if English had made the arrests would he have sought to have them dismissed before arraignment. English replied he would not have. "You'd almost be setting yourself up – I'd leave it to the DA's office, wash my hands of it . . . and if called to testify, testify."

Louison said that is exactly what is now happening.

"Once it finally got to the DA's hands, it's going forward to trial or some other disposition," he said. "But the police prosecutor has to sign the complaint or it won't get to that process."

What happens next:

The hearings, which Officer James McLean and Sgt. William Quigley requested be held in public, are scheduled to continue at 9 a.m. Monday, March 1, in the Selectmen's office. At that time, it is expected the officers, who are represented by Attorney Doug Louison, will begin to present their defense.

The prosecution (or town) has presented its evidence in two charges against Officer McLean and Sgt. Quigley concerning drinking at the Rod & Gun Club and arrests at Tedeschi's. McLean is facing no other charges.

The town has also argued three more charges against Quigley regarding a juvenile he placed in protective custody, his handling of evidence in a booking procedure, and the Oct. 11, 2003 arrests at the Legion.

A hearing in Dedham Superior Court before Judge Isaac Borenstein is scheduled Feb. 25 to determine if part of the hearing that involves a juvenile (a person under the age of 17) will be conducted behind closed doors. The juvenile's name and address were inadvertently revealed during testimony of the town's case and the child's parents are seeking an injunction to close that part of the hearing. If that occurs, the officers' evidence about what happened in that incident would be closed to the public. The Mariner plans to seek to intervene to keep the hearing open.

Town Manager Mark Haddad, who is the hearing officer, will decide what punishment including possible termination of employment he will mete out to the officers. They have a right to appeal his decision to Civil Service.

Question of the Week

Races for Selectmen, the Planning Board and School Committee promise to perk up the April 3 Town Election.

Rob Spofford, Lou Harvey, Ralph Dormitzer and incumbent Merle Brown are competing for two seats on the Board of Selectmen.

Stuart Ivimey and Joe Nedrow have thrown their hats into the ring for the one-year unexpired term on the Planning Board.

And Jaime Williams, Adrienne MacCarthy, Scott O'Grady and incumbent Pat Martin are in a four-way contest for two seats on the School Committee.

As in keeping with our tradition, we will pose a Question of the Week to local candidates in contested races.

All candidates opposed or unopposed, who have not already done so, are invited to submit photographs and formal statements announcing their candidacies.

Starting next week, we will feature candidates' answers to the Question of the Week. Responses should be brief — no more than 300 words — and must be received by 5 p.m., Monday. Candidates are asked to be specific and make every word count. Submissions will be cut if they exceed the word limit. (We use the word-count feature on the computer to determine the number of words.)

The following is the first Question of the Week for the School Committee and Selectmen candidates:

• Where do you stand on the need for a Prop. 2-1/2 override to help balance the fiscal year 2005 budget?

For the Planning Board candidates:

• Is the Senior Overlay District Bylaw more than the town bargained for?

Candidates may reply by e-mail at mford@cnc.com; by fax at 781-741-2931, or by dropping off their responses at the Cohasset Mariner office in the Hingham Journal Building, 73 South St., Hingham Square. Items may also be dropped off at Cohasset News on Brook Street. However they choose to deliver their answers, candidates should adhere to the 5 p.m. Monday deadline.

We will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (about 150 words), from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fundraisers and the like.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

If you have questions, or would like to suggest a Question of the Week, call Mary Ford at 781-741-2933 or contact her by e-mail at mford@cnc.com.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Two host families

TO THE EDITOR:

I am grateful for the opportunity to have been featured in the Thursday, Feb. 12 edition of the Cohasset Mariner. I feel fortunate that I was able to talk about my experiences traveling the "long road from China to Cohasset" and the support that I have received from the METCO program and the Cohasset community.

There is one oversight that I would like to call attention to. The article mentioned my host family, the Genellos and the home away from home they have provided. Actually, I have been blessed to have two host families. The Afshars opened their home and hearts to me and made me feel like I was a part of their family.

Thank you again for the wonderful article.

Selectmen's efforts praised in police matter

TO THE EDITOR:

With reference to letters published last week from Messrs. Allen, Gomez and Harvey, I think all police departments have to cope with people who exercise the muscle of influence or of lawyers, and officers must struggle to minimize departure from ideal law enforcement and crime deterrence. This dilemma not the PD's fault, any compromises are just a realistic response to an imperfect world.

Of course, this burden shouldn't be countered by excessive zeal in dealing with those lacking influence or lawyers, nor on the other hand by lapsing into undue leniency across the board. In the last several years it seems to me that our Police Department has achieved a reasonable balance between ideal law enforcement and countervailing influences. Of course, that balance should be uniform, not differ from officer to officer. The current disciplinary hearings, though not initiated for that reason, seem to be revealing undesirable departures.

We letter writers aren't going to change the culture of the Town, nor influence how our police department responds to it. In any case, we should be grateful, rather than critical, of the Selectmen's attempt to preserve the quality of balanced behavior of the PD. Admittedly, the less-than-sparkling performance of the Town's counsel makes the attempt look weak, nevertheless the public interest would have been ill-served if the Selectmen had shirked their responsibility and failed to investigate and initiate corrective action.

A sad day for the South Shore

TO THE EDITOR:

The recent decision by our court system to allow the new runway to go forward is very sad for the South Shore. Once again we are being dumped on to solve all of our regions problems. Massport has slowly diverted more and more jet noise over our area so that now every runway configuration sends air traffic over our homes. No other area around greater Boston has received this wonderful gift from Massport. One famous Massport spokesman actually tries to convince us that with the new runway in place we will hear less noise as planes will no longer have to circle over our houses waiting to land. He probably should have checked with the tower chief to know that none of the existing noise over our area is caused by planes circling waiting to land. This is just a made up Massport PR line to support the runway. It is amazing to listen to the consultants and professionals supporting the residents and towns on this issue list item after item of false

Getting to know Sgt. Bill Quigley

COMMENTARY

JIM HAMILTON

Have you ever approached an accident scene and driven on by with eyes straight-ahead thinking this is not my problem? There's a mess unfolding at Town Hall and you can make the choice to disregard it and pretend it's not happening or you can take a long hard look. Three days into the police hearings, Town attorney Peter Berry presses on today with charges that two of our cops have acted improperly according to their boss Chief Bob Jackson and their boss' boss Town Manager Mark Haddad— who, incidentally, is sitting as the hearing officer on the case.

Anybody who watched the previous three days of hearings or read the papers, could see clearly that Peter Berry and Susan Henderson, so far, have not proven the Town's case against Bill Quigley and Jim McLean. But outside of the hearings around Town there's an undercurrent from people whose opinions we respect that goes like this: "I agree the Town has proven no case with their charges, but Quigley is a bad cop and he really should go". What makes for a bad cop? "Everybody knows he goes out of his way to arrest kids, he hangs around outside the Legion waiting for trouble. He wears night vision goggles looking for kids in the woods!"

Have you ever seen Sergeant Bill Quigley? He's big, really big. At a time where physical appearance means a lot — and slim is what people strive for — you wonder if anybody so big could be an effective officer in a little town. The impression is that anybody that big must be kind of dumb too.

Talk to the students that have gone through the school social studies curriculum that features a segment called Police Academy taught by Bill. He comes to the school and makes policing understandable; he talks to them in their language; he takes them to the station to show what happens during booking procedures. Ask teacher Jack Buckley who wrote a letter well before the hearings commending the work Bill does with these kids. Talk to people who know Bill, who respect his intelligence, his record keeping and the incredible dedication he brings to his job.

He didn't grow up in Cohasset but is not a stranger to our ways. He comes from South Boston and was bused to Hingham for his schooling. In 1987 — 17 years ago — he took the part-time job of Cohasset animal control officer and also worked in Boston as a security police officer. For his first five years in Cohasset, he got to know our town and then accepted a patrolman's job. He became a sergeant on the force a couple of years ago. Stripes aren't just given out in Cohasset or any police force, they're earned. He generally works the 4 p.m. to midnight shift, long after the Chief's gone home, when being sergeant on the desk puts him in charge of the department when there are higher incidences of unsupervised youths cruising around town with the likelihood of getting into trouble.

There are officers in Cohasset who would single Bill our as the one fellow officer they would trust implicitly in any situation that requires back up and quick decision making. Its because this big, smart cop not only knows how to handle a potentially ugly situation, but he knows cold the rules of arrest, search and seizure which protects him and the Town from potential lawsuits. Has there been any litigation involving Bill Quigley or the Town in his nine years on the force? Never. Have any of his arrests been overturned in Quincy District Court, any complaints filed by those arrested, any wrongful procedures cited by the district attorney's office? Nope. Nope. Nope.

If the Town gets through these hearings, can pick itself up from the damage done by unsubstantiated accusations and it has learned anything from this mess, it's don't believe everything you hear. Then don't pass on what you hear unless you have researched the facts and are dead certain of the sources. What you hear and pass on can only get uglier especially when it all bounces back to expose those who leveled the charges.

When it's over and Bill Quigley is still around Cohasset, take a minute to talk with him. You'll like what you hear. You'll like Bill.

Jim Hamilton lives at 298 King St.

HEALTH NOTES

Caucus to help students join forces in the South Shore pollution fight

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

At the last meeting of the Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR), it was pointed out that, in spite of having had a very successful summer supporting the Center's projects with more than 70 individuals participating in its various programs, in addition to five or so artists using the various studios upstairs, sponsored by the South Shore Art Center which pays the center rent for the space, the Hagerty building is underutilized in wintertime. The building could be even better used in spring and fall. Hence another of President Jack Buckley's ideas: the South Coastal Watershed Student Coastal Caucus.

According to Jack, "For those not familiar, CSCR plans to host a 'caucus' to give students involved (or those seeking to become involved) in water quality monitoring and research projects a chance to get in the same room together to meet each other and see that they are part of a bigger picture— make friends, perhaps, across school and town boundaries.

"The role of adults is to facilitate this gathering in determining how best to harness these efforts to produce collaborative efforts that are mutually beneficial to kids and programs, agencies and institutions, organizations, etc invested in environmental education, monitoring, etc."

As you may know the Board of Health uses Jack's students to gather water quality data for pollution monitoring purposes and a number of other related tasks as a part of the High School's public service program. We use the water quality data to make decisions in Town about growth, waste and storm water, and other planning critical to the Town.

We support the Center for Student Coastal Research(CSCR) in part because of its ability to interact with other assessment activities which give us a better picture of our environmental situation. The CSCR has a unique facility and state-of-the-art equipment to conduct environmental assessment tasks in the South Shore. The vision that Jack is offering is the ability for anyone in the watershed to use this resource for future environmentalists to do work in their areas of most concern and then coordinate their findings and data with others in the watershed who are doing similar work. Other work uses the Center's links with fishermen, research vessels, offshore research, and its bio- and chemical state of the art equipment, etc.

Pollution

But of more immediate interest is the fact that student's data disclosed a particularly disturbing reality which I fear will be with us for some time: evidence that pollution is increasing substantially in the Gulf River. Many know that Bassings Beach and Cohasset Cove were closed to swimming for most of last summer. Data from the students confirmed that bacteria levels were elevated in many locations, but were particularly high in the Gulf. Scituate is working on several initiatives to remediate pollution in some of its water bodies by considering sewering in North Scituate and nutrient flushing in Musquashicut Pond.

The CSCR is investigating grant opportunities to support Scituate in its remediation effort. Currently the Five-Star Restoration Grant application is open (with a due date of March 1).

According to Jason Burtner of the State's Coastal Zone Management Department: "Considering the program eligibility of the grant solicitation, it would seem as though the goals of the CSCR and the Student Coastal Caucus would be directly applicable" to the Grant Objectives. The CSCR is preparing a grant request for this program. It hopes to receive letters of support from the Gulf Association, the Towns of Scituate, Hull, and the Army Corps and others working on Musquashicut Pond remediation.

If the grant is received, the CSCR will be able to host students from other towns at the Hagerty building and provide more effective environmental oversight for Cohasset as well as many other communities in the South Shore. In this way, the Hagerty building will serve an even wider purpose

Steve Bobo is chairman of the Cohasset Board of Health.

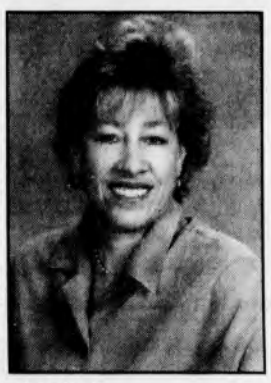
Adrienne MacCarthy

Adrienne MacCarthy is announcing her candidacy for School Committee. Adrienne and her husband John reside at 85 Doane St. with their three sons, who all attend the Cohasset Public Schools.

MacCarthy is not new to the campaign trail, you may recall her bid for a seat on the School Committee in 2001 when she lost by just two votes. Since then, she has remained steadfast in her commitment to serve Cohasset through its schools.

MacCarthy brings a proven record of experience, accomplishment and commitment to the race. For the past eight years, MacCarthy has served on the School Facility/Building Committee. During this time, MacCarthy has been involved in overseeing two of the largest school projects ever undertaken by the town-the 10 million/Osgood School and the current $42 million Deer Hill/Middle High School project. MacCarthy is proud of the commitment made by the Building Committee to bring these projects in "on time and on budget."

MacCarthy has also served the school community through her involvement in the PSO. She is currently serving as President of the Executive Board. It is through her various PSO experiences that she has gained an insight to the needs and issues of concern facing our schools on a daily basis.



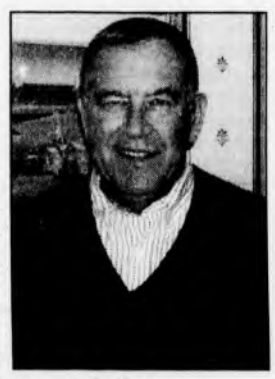
MacCarthy is also about accomplishments. Seeing a need and setting a goal, she spearheaded a grassroots committee called "The Friends of the Cohasset Public School Playgrounds." This committee fundraised, purchased and installed the playgrounds at the new Osgood school and at the Deer Hill School.

MacCarthy feels that it is her experience and her demonstrated commitment to improve the schools that are the essential assets she will bring to the School Committee. If elected, MacCarthy would like to work with the school Committee and the new Superintendent to refine and update its goals, to develop a strategic plan which will guide the schools in utilizing and maintaining our new facilities, and to encourage the Administration and Staff to seek out creative funding mechanisms such as grant writing and after-school/summer enrichment programs, to name just a few.

MacCarthy welcomes any questions or comments via e-mail: maccarthy5@aol.com.

Martin seeks reelection to the School Committee

Two term Cohasset School Committee Member Pat Martin has announced her intention to seek re-election. Having served in a tenure which has maintained a school system state recognized for excellence in education while guiding the district building reconstruction and the creation of a new administration team, she believes her experience will be valuable as the district once again moves forward to the challenges of indoctrinating a new superintendent and implemented grade reconfiguration while responding to increasing enrollment demands.



Pat Martin

According to Martin, "Cohasset is in need of continued guidance from an experienced leader who has demonstrated their ability to handle the challenges of managing a small school district while responding to the community's expectation for high academic achievement and student success." I feel it is important that we continue on the path that has led us to be recognized throughout the commonwealth for outstanding MCAS scores and college acceptance, small class sizes and specialized attention to all types of learners. As the school committee moves ahead into this new era it is important to know from where we have come as to keep the process moving forward toward further improvement. Our soon to be completed strategic plan of the past six years illustrates the many accomplishments I have successfully guided. I would like to bring this record of accomplishment and success ahead as the committee embarks on the creation of a new strategic planning process with the hiring of our new school chief. Successfully orientating the new superintendent next year while negotiating the new teachers contract will take seasoned skill and expertise in order to achieve what is desired by the town and required for our children."

Martin believes she has demonstrated her desire to focus on the needs of Cohasset's children while being sensitive to financial restraints of the town. "Providing a high quality education for our children is not an inexpensive endeavor. I have, however, been committed to the ideal that it is an investment in our children and in their future while providing a significant return to the community and its citizens. Ask anyone why they moved to Cohasset in the past six years and they will tell you; the schools."

Martin hold a BA degree from the University of Rhode Island and a Master Degree in Administration Policy and Planning from Rutgers University. A former educator herself she has three children within each of the Cohasset schools. Martin, her husband, Dan an assistant department head at MIT, and their three children have lived in Cohasset for seven years. Apart from the many committees Pat has served on within the schools, she serves as a Sunday School teacher at the Second Congregational Church and girls softball coach for CYSBA. She is currently employed part time as the Director of the Domestic Violence Intervention Program at Wellspring MultiService Center in Hull.

Nedrow announces Planning Board bid

Joseph R. Nedrow

Joseph R. Nedrow has joined the race for the one year seat on the Planning Board. This unique opportunity is the result of a currant member resigning from the board with one year remaining in his term. The election on April 3 is to fill this unexpired term.

Nedrow feels his educational background, work experience, and love of Cohasset will add a different and hopefully productive dimension to the boards deliberations and decisions.

A former White House executive during the Ford administration, Nedrow recently retired from General Motors Corporation after spending 30 plus years in a wide variety of executive assignments. For most of those years he was a registered lobbyist for the Corporation and responsible for articulating the company's position on a wide range of legislative and regulatory issues at both the state and federal level.

His education includes a bachelors, two masters and a doctorate degree. He has participated in numerous college forums and has taught at the college level as an adjunct professor. He was a founding member of the Massachusetts Business Roundtable, an active member of the New England Council, the Associated Industries of Massachusetts and the Harvard Club of Boston.

Nedrow's Cohasset endeavors include two terms on the School Committee (when their three children were in school), and most recently an active member of the Senior Housing Committee. Additionally he has served as a member of the executive committee at the Cohasset Golf Club and just recently became a proud member of Cohasset's "Old Goats." A veteran, he served a tour in Korea during the Cuban missile crisis, with the US Army, CID.

He and his wife Ruth, have been married 43 years and have three children who have graduated from Cohasset High School. Their son, Michael, lives in Texas, but both daughters, Jill and Margo own homes in Cohasset with their families.

Many decisions made by the Planning Board are not popular. Most of these decisions are dictated by state laws and local regulations. If elected Nedrow promises to devote whatever time is necessary to understand the issues, and encourage decisions to cause Cohasset to have the same appeal as a place to live for his grandchildren (there are seven) that there was for him and his children. It says a lot about a community when the children who grew-up here want to come back to raise their children. It's the challenge of every elected official in Cohasset to try and make that happen.

TIMELINES
SMALL STEPS INTO YOUR FAMILY HISTORY

JACK MURRAY

Fred Timelines is on the road bringing his experiences and careful explanations of how he pieced together the story of his family. This has been prompted by the unusual number on inquiries received from the January column titled "Learning how to Join Them." Perhaps stating the statistics of the millions of Americans who are interested in finding out about their families and don't know how to start the process; as compared with a lesser number who are actively doing family research, has struck a cord with a surprising number of readers. More surprising were the libraries and other organizations who inquired about sponsoring an in-person program.

Timelines will 'go on the road' presenting a tailored seminar series condensed and extracted from the Spring and Fall curriculum that I teach at the Gerontology Institute at the University of Massachusetts Campus in Boston; and as an extension of the theme of the monthly column published in the community newspapers in many towns in Massachusetts.

In the event that you may nor be aware, Fred Timelines, who is portrayed in many of the "Timelines" writing, is a real person who has assumed the Non De Guerre of the Timelines family name to protect the privacy of his family. You may be assured that all of his experiences and events taking place in the Timelines story of his life are true.

The "Timelines-small steps into your family history" that is based primarily upon Fred's search for the history of his family, is as close as you could get to demonstrate the principals of Genealogy.

Genealogy is more than just family history, it is a matching up of historical events that are linked to us and to the lives of our ancestors, these are the small steps that I call Timelines when you connect them you will have developed a meaningful portrait of your family.

These principal, when applied to the Timelines approach to family history were related by Fred Timelines in our first interview when I asked him to tell me what he now knows about his family. His recollection formed the base for his research-it went something like this-(Please note that each element of this conversation is an important step along the way):

"Most of what I know about my family history has come from stories told to me by my parents and friends of the family, but let me start with what I know about myself and the events in my life. I was born in Newark, New Jersey on Feb. 17, 1892, the youngest of three children: Maude, Nell and then myself. Our home was on High Street, which was on a hill above the Commercial Park of the city with its' shops and other stores. I could see beyond the city to a manufacturing area called the Iron Bound section where my father worked in my grandfathers' tannery, it was a family business called "Timelines Brothers." The city was a hub of activity where people from the surrounding towns would come by horse and buggy or by trolleys to work and do their shopping.

I attended local schools and attended the Methodist Church where my grandfather Dickinson was the pastor, when I was very young my father was working for an insurance company in downtown Newark. It was about that time when we moved to Convent Station, a small town near Morristown in New Jersey.

I can remember how my father commuted each day on the Lackawanna steam train to Newark. On rare occasions, he would drive to Newark, but that was a long rip over roads that were not too well maintained.

My youngest sister, Ruth was born at the hospital in Morristown. We have many pictures of the reception in our home when my sister Maud married Ralph Chase and all my fathers brothers and their families were there for the big occasion."

This sample conversation with Fred brought out so many verifiable facts that went into the family group records, with dates and events that he was witness to. Now he has established links to search back through his family and started writing the family history.

If you take the time to collect all that you now know about your family and sign up for a seminar in the library or club when it is scheduled in your town, you will have the advantage of asking questions, getting answers, and you will learn how to find your family history.

The first of the two sessions "On the Road Series of Seminars" is scheduled for March 8 and 15, at the Ventress Memorial Library in Marshfield. Since class size is limited, it is necessary to call the library for reservations.

and downright lies regarding Massport's documents on the new runway proposal and then have a Judge dismiss the issue as "meritless". I really doubt that the documents submitted by the South Shore were even reviewed before this decision was made. It is far from meritless. I guess the truth is not important. I guess it does not matter in the review process.

Residents of the South Shore, you cannot just sit back and hope others will take care of things. You need to get involved and find out what is really happening that affects your homes and quality of life everyday. It happens slowly, while we are all rushing around with our everyday lives. The people who do try to "take care of things", get burned out, discouraged, because they know what is happening, it is a long process, and they cant do it alone. This just helps Massport, who has endless supplies of cash and lawyers to defend them. The towns and residents have very limited resources, especially these days. It seems unfair that the State does not defend towns when they are faced with these huge issues. Something is not right here.

Maybe you might be lucky enough to not be affected by the noise as much as other residents in your town, but you still need to get involved. You may not be as lucky when the new runway creates double the traffic and two continuous rows of planes over our towns. Did you know that Massport has made a decision to send all overnight flights, every night, 365 days of the year over our towns. Did we ever get invited to have any input on this decision? This decision was made without even telling our towns. This seems fair? Did you know that residents to the west of the new runway have an agreement that no flights would arrive or depart on their side of the runway. What does this mean? We get both arrivals and departures from this new runway. Who is protecting us? There is no way the "meritless" comment from a Judge would be made if the documents were truly reviewed. I really doubt if everyone took the time, even for one day that these things would just slip by. People complain about issues all the time but when you ask, what have you done about it, the main response is, "Oh I am too busy right now." I hope people start to see all of these issues our towns are facing, especially what Massport is doing to our area with no control or thought for our towns at all and start taking the tim> to do something. Get involved, call our representatives, tell them to step up to these issues and protect our communities.

Gay marriage debate puts Legislature in national spotlight

STATEHOUSE ROUNDUP

CRAIG SANDLER

A recap and analysis of the week in state government.

Impressions from one of the most momentous weeks of the past several decades at the State House:

For and Against: On the surface, the issue is straightforward and by now, familiar. The Supreme Judicial Court said the current Constitution requires the state to issue marriage licenses to gay and lesbian couples. An amendment to define marriage as between one man and one woman was debated in Constitutional Convention. A rejected modification of that amendment would have written "civil union" recognition of gay couples into the Constitution. Another disapproved amendment would have stipulated that while banning gay marriage, the Legislature intended to pass a civil union statute in the future. Ultimately, the quest to reconcile antithetical points of view failed a predictable outcome when two sides both believe compromise is not just unacceptable, but immoral.

Give and Take: Underneath the surface lay stratum upon stratum of struggle and complexity. Both House Speaker Thomas Finneran and Senate President Robert Travaglini were attempting to prove themselves masters of their own branches and they did, but the two chambers cancelled each other out. The governor was appealing both to party loyalty and conscience, and those two imperatives don't correlate predictably in cases like this. In all the party politics, intra- and inter-chamber politics, and personal lobbying, the governor and leaders of the Democratic Party were aware the whole country was watching them. Gay marriage has seemingly become the most important social issue of the presidential election, not to mention the many races in which the governor is trying to depose members of the House and Senate this fall. The White House was in regular contact this week with the Corner Office, leaving no doubt the GOP knows what use it can make of this issue against John Kerry. And it is to be remembered that the Legislature elected this fall must take the issue up all over again before 2006, so the lawmakers were carving out a litmus test issue that could cost some of them their jobs before all is said and done. Combined with the thousands of citizens who clashed and clamored in and out of the building all week, the political stakes and national attention ratcheted the pressure on and off stage to a level unparalleled in the experience of anyone involved.

Pushing and Shoving: The State House literally became the stage of a morality play, subject to absolutely polarized interpretations. And the two ends of the spectrum were in full view; as in physics, collisions between the antithetical parts produced explosive results. "My Pedophile Priest Supports Traditional Marriage" was a typical sign, so to speak, of the level of some of the citizen debate. So was the little girl who cried, "Burn in hell!" at gay activists. Invective flew. Fingers were thrust in faces. State troopers rushed to make sure scuffling did not devolve into something more. More than one person was reportedly spat upon. Yet there was a small, hopeful counter theme. One could hear little quips or see quick smiles exchanged between members of the opposing camps gathered to express their contradictory convictions about love and ethics. Such courtesies amidst the disrespect made an unforgettable sight.

House and Senate: Finneran and Travaglini were not only at odds with one another, but each other's membership. Both sought support for their individual points of view; both were denied that support, not so much by their own members as by a preponderance of the other branch. Travaglini's proposal, written with Senate Minority Leader Brian Lees, would write civil unions into the Constitution but make heterosexual marriage the only constitutionally-protected form of the institution.

Finneran offered an amendment saying gay marriage was banned, but that the Legislature promised to take up civil unions at some point in the future. The lack of advance notice of that amendment, and the sense among many lawmakers that it was a ploy to evade facing the civil unions issue at all, underscored Finneran's credibility gap among a minority in his own chamber and a considerable number in the Senate. The open dispute between the president and speaker was high-toned; it remains to be seen if it takes any toll on inter-branch relations, which took a dramatic turn for the better in 2003.

Leadership and Membership: For a long time it was said that Finneran was the most powerful person in state government. That status came into question when Romney took office; it is still a matter of interpretation. But whoever now is the most powerful, even with their strength combined, they could not get a majority of the Legislature to go along. The governor sent the speaker a personal note of appreciation for his amendment extraordinary for two leaders so committed to defeating one another in other arenas but still, Romney's Republicans and Finneran's Democrats were outnumbered, barely. Finneran's amendment lost 98-100. Likewise, the leader of the Senate put his influence together with the Republican leader in his chamber, and they came up short, 94-104. No one was more powerful than the democratic system. Just as the throngs outside were free to express their passion, the members inside were free to defeat their leaders after open debate in the torturous effort to find the path that best reconciled all points of view. For that and many other reasons this week the relative lack of physical violence, the high tone of most debate, the absence of ad hominem argument - amidst the rancor and frustration, believers in open debate had reason for cheer. Yet given the way the debate ended, and as the next long month of disagreement and maneuvering on the question began, the public can legitimately ask: is this the best democracy can do?

Other stories got short shrift last week:

• Sprague will keep her vow to stay just three terms — Bucking an unfortunate trend among modern politicians, Sen. Jo Anne Sprague, R-Walpole, said she was actually going to keep her promise to step down after a few terms. Sprague has served three, and told the Globe: "My word is important to me, and it has always been a bond between me and the people I serve." Democrats will be eyeing the vacancy in Sprague's seat; Republicans will be in defense mode.

• Economy won't boom, but will at least start growing, economists agree — Experts from Mass Development and Mass Insight agreed at a briefing that while jobs aren't being created at the clip most would like, the hardest economic times of this downturn are past and the signs continually point to a period of modest growth one that's already begun. That consensus was voiced the same week Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan delivered a similar mildly upbeat message to Congress in his semi-annual briefing.

• Boston State Hospital will become affordable housing — The flip side of robust home sales is short supply and high prices. State and city leaders Thursday announced plans to address that problem. After many years of controversy about how to redevelop the old Boston State Hospital site in Mattapan, about 500 units of housing and $150 million worth of other development will occur on 35 acres of the 55-acre site; the other 20 acres is already planned out. The new development will add to other investments on the grounds, including a 60-acre nature center, construction of new biologics laboratories on 20 acres, and 100 units of housing already under construction on 18 acres of the site.

• 2003 was record year for home sales — Home sales in Massachusetts were up 15.8 percent in 2003, with the average single family home selling for $372,316, or 8.9 percent more than in the fourth quarter of 2002. That capped off a year the Massachusetts Association of Realtors declared the "best ever."

• Case against "State House 18" dismissed in Boston court — A Boston judge dismissed charges against the so-called "State House 18" on Wednesday, after the activists spent two days arguing the "necessity" defense before Boston Municipal Court Judge Thomas C. Horgan. The activists, who include Boston City Councilor Chuck Turner, were arrested at the State House June 30 for protesting budget cuts. The group argued that their actions were necessary to prevent further "harm to students, seniors and citizens of the Commonwealth" that would be the result of budget cuts.

• Romney proposes T-bond to continue $400M a year for local road projects — Saying the Big Dig has created a "giant sucking sound" (metaphorically) as it drains dollars away from needed improvements in other parts of the state, Gov. Romney unveiled a $1.15 billion transportation bond bill Tuesday that the administration billed as the next phase in the state's transportation development after so many years dominated by the Central Artery project. Reforms to state construction and bidding laws are proposed to save money and encourage development. The bond proposal comes as the administration works on a 25-year transportation strategy. Critics said the plan is short on vision.

QUESTIONS

BHRC is sponsored and underwritten by Fleet Bank as a public service for readers of the Mariner. It is written by Bob Katzen who has covered the legislature for more than 25 years and has been providing this feature to newspapers since 1975.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local representatives' and local senators' votes on three roll calls from the week of February 9-13.

All three roll calls are on versions of proposed constitutional amendments banning same-sex marriages in Massachusetts. All three versions were rejected and the constitutional convention adjourned until March 11. In order to become part of the constitution, any proposed amendment must be approved by this year's Legislature and then by the members of the 2005-2006 Legislature. The measure would then go on the ballot for voter consideration in November 2006.

BAN SAME-SEX MARRIAGES/CIVIL UNIONS OPTION (H 3190)

Constitutional Convention 98-100, rejected a proposed constitutional amendment banning same-sex marriages but allowing the Legislature to enact laws establishing civil unions as may be defined by the Legislature from time to time. Some supporters said that the Legislature must protect the tradition of marriage that has been the custom and tradition of every nation and society in recorded history and argued it is inappropriate and outrageous that the Supreme Judicial Court (SJC) has tried to impose laws from the bench. Others said that the Legislature should approve the proposal in order to get it placed on the ballot so that voters can approve or reject it. Some noted that this proposal also ensures that the Legislature has the right to enact civil union laws to protect gays and lesbians. Some opponents said the state's constitution should not be amended to allow discrimination against one group of persons and argued that all citizens should be equal under the constitution. They noted that the SJC decision was right and just and would ensure that all citizens are afforded equal rights including the more than 1000 benefits afforded married couples. Others said that the section allowing the Legislature to enact civil union laws is meaningless and does not guarantee the enactment of these laws. They noted that the Legislature has had many years to enact narrow, less controversial domestic partnership bills and has never even done that. (A "Yea" vote is for the proposed constitutional amendment banning same sex marriages but allowing the Legislature to enact laws establishing civil unions. A "Nay" vote is against the proposal).

The exact language of the above amendment reads: "It being the public policy of the Commonwealth to protect the unique relationship of marriage, only the union of one man and one woman shall be valid or recognized as a marriage in Massachusetts. This article is self-executing, but the General Court may enact laws not inconsistent with anything herein contained to carry out the purpose of the article, including but not limited to, the enactment of laws establishing civil unions as may be defined by the General Court from time to time."

BAN SAME-SEX MARRIAGES/NEUTRAL ON CIVIL UNIONS (H 3190)

Constitutional Convention 94-103, rejected a proposed constitutional amendment banning same-sex marriages and providing that nothing in the amendment shall require or prohibit civil unions in Massachusetts. Supporters repeated their arguments that this proposal would protect the tradition of marriage and give voters the right to vote on this amendment while allowing the Legislature to separately enact civil union laws. Opponents repeated their arguments that discrimination should not be inserted into the state constitution. They noted that the "neutral" section on civil union laws is meaningless and does not guarantee the enactment of these laws. (A "Yea" vote is for the proposed constitutional amendment banning same sex marriages and providing that nothing in the amendment requires or prohibits civil unions in Massachusetts. A "Nay" vote is against the proposal).

The exact language of the above amendment reads: "It being the public policy of this Commonwealth to protect the unique relationship of marriage in order to promote, among other goals, the stability and welfare of society and the best interest of children, only the union of one man and one woman shall be valid or recognized as a marriage in Massachusetts. Nothing in this article requires or prohibits civil unions in Massachusetts."

BAN SAME-SEX MARRIAGES/ESTABLISH CIVIL UNIONS (H 3190)

Constitutional Convention 94-104, rejected a proposed constitutional amendment banning same-sex marriages but giving same-sex couples the right to form civil unions with all the same benefits, protections, rights and responsibilities granted to couples who are married. The proposal also provides that gays and lesbians who married prior to voter-approval of this amendment would have their marriages converted to civil unions. Some supporters said this fair compromise protects the institution of marriage while ensuring that gay and lesbians would have the constitutional right to form civil unions and be afforded all the protections of married couples. Others said that they are actually opposed to this proposal but voted in favor of it in order to block possible passage of other more heinous proposals that ban same-sex marriages but do not guarantee civil unions. Some of those supporters said that they would later vote against this proposal but noted that if a same-sex marriage ban eventually receives approval, they would prefer this one because it also guarantees civil unions. Some opponents said the proposal, despite mandating civil unions, still inserts discrimination into the constitution by denying gays and lesbians the right to marry and treating them as second-class citizens. They also noted that couples in civil unions would not be afforded all the benefits that married couples receive under federal law. Others said they support banning same-sex marriages but do not support civil unions or prefer to craft civil unions legislation as a general law rather than as part of the constitution. (A "Yea" vote is for the proposed constitutional amendment banning same-sex marriages but giving same-sex couples the right to form civil unions with all the same benefits, protections, rights and responsibilities granted to couples who are married. A "Nay" vote is against the proposal).

The exact language of the above amendment reads:

"Section 1. It being the public policy of this commonwealth to define the unique relationship of marriage, only the union of one man and one woman shall be valid as a marriage in the commonwealth.

Section 2. The people of the commonwealth adopt this Article to protect the unique relationship of marriage. The people also wish to establish civil unions to provide to same-sex couples all the benefits, protections, rights and responsibilities under state law as are granted to spouses in a marriage, while recognizing that under present federal law, same-sex couples in civil unions will be denied federal benefits available to married couples.

Section 3. Two persons of the same sex shall have the right to form a civil union if they meet the requirements set forth by law for marriage between a man and a woman. All laws applicable to marriage, including laws relating to dissolution of marriages, shall also apply to civil unions. Spouses in a civil union shall have all the same benefits, protections, rights and responsibilities under law as are granted to spouses in a marriage. To the extent that a law adopts, refers to or relies on a federal law that applies to the commonwealth, spouses in civil unions shall have access to the full legal, social, cultural and economic protections, benefits and obligations accorded to married couples in the commonwealth. As used in this section, 'law' means any law of the commonwealth, or of any of its political subdivisions, or of any entity established to serve a public purpose, whether defined by statute, agency or court rule or regulation, ordinance, by-law, policy, common law or other source of civil law. The appropriate agencies of the executive department shall take all necessary measures to provide civil union license forms as required by the laws governing equivalent marriage forms and to provide for the maintenance of records of all civil unions and the dissolution thereof. The procedures under law for issuing a marriage license shall apply to issuing a civil union license.

Section 4. Persons of the same sex who married before the effective date of this Article shall be considered instead to have formed a civil union under section 3.

Section 5. This Article shall be construed liberally to secure to eligible couples the option of a legal status with all the attributes and effects, benefits and protections of marriage.

Section 6. This Article is self-executing, but the General Court may enact laws consistent with this Article to carry out this Article's purposes.

CANDIDATES CORNER

Janet Fogarty receives $10,000 in donations

Janet Fogarty has received an unprecedented $10,000 in individual donations from local Republican activists. A candidate for Republican State Committeewoman, Fogarty's campaign to modernize the Republican Party on the South Shore has energized local activists and earned her the endorsement of many local party leaders. Endorsements include Cohasset's own Mary Jeanette Murray, fondly known as the 'Grande Dame' of South Shore Republicans.

"I'm humbled by the tremendous support fellow Republicans have shown me over these past two months," said Fogarty, the former chair of the Cohasset Republican Town Committee. The unprecedented level of support demonstrates the growing momentum behind Fogarty, a South Shore Republican activist who has helped candidates such as Senator Bob Hedlund and District Attorney Tim Cruz.

For more information about Janet's campaign contact Elizabeth Rech at 781-740-4746.

Hilbert is endorsed by Weymouth GOP

The Weymouth Republican Town Committee [WRTC] has endorsed Anne Hilbert of Weymouth in her race to unseat the incumbent Republican State Committeewoman, Polly Logan.

Both seats on the Republican State Committee representing Sen. Hedlund's district, committeeman and committeewoman, are being contested. The WRTC was addressed last week by candidates for both offices. John Cafferty, Conley Ford, and Ron Wheatley are competing to replace Tom Barry, who is not seeking reelection; Janet Fogarty and Anne Hilbert oppose Polly Logan who, because of a scheduling conflict, was represented by the State Committeeman from Brockton, Larry Novak.

Logan has groundswell of support district-wide

From Weymouth to Duxbury, the groundswell continues to return the Vice Chair of the Massachusetts Republican State Committee — Paula A. "Polly" Logan — to another term as Norfolk-Plymouth District State Committeewoman.

More than 400 have contributed volunteer time and money to the effort to date, including an unparalleled 28 current and former GOP Town Committee chairs. These include: Weymouth — Rick Coughlin, Brian Kain, Ken Karlberg, Vin Mina and Dana Toland; Hingham — Bud Watts, Alex Macmillan, Gloria Jantzen, Stuart VanTine and Charlie Black; Cohasset — Julie Guild, Bill Weeks, Lou Eaton, John Flanagan and Jill O'Donnell; Norwell — Kim Reynolds (current), Shawni Littlehale and Chad Forman; Scituate — John Clarkson and Conley Ford; Marshfield — Tim Peterson (current), Roz Jones (current), Sam Spencer and Otis Carney; Duxbury — Rita Strong (current), Audrey McDonald and Bill Basely.

"Outstanding," stated Logan chair Guy Conrad, "and what a great team for the future!"

Cafferty trumpets Murray's endorsement

As a prominent Republican lawmaker in Hingham, Cohasset and Hull for more than two decades, Mary Jeanette Murray, has become a major player in the race for state committeeman by endorsing John Cafferty above his opponents.

"John Cafferty is uniquely qualified with his experience on the Hingham Planning Board and the Hingham Housing Authority," noted Murray, who relied heavily on Cafferty to bring her to reelection several times. "He's a hard worker and knows how to look to building our party in the long-term — that's the leadership we need!"

"My goal is to show voters I am the only one in this race who has the experience and the vision to build our party in the long term — I think that message is resonating and the feedback I've received is incredible," Cafferty says. Please vote on March 2, 2004.

Conley Ford to create Republican tidal wave

Conley Ford, candidate for Republican State Committeeman, is telling voters across Bob Hedlund's eight-town district that it's "OK to be a Republican in Massachusetts."

"My message is resonating with hundreds of people, who are tired of having a one-party Statehouse," says Ford, who is a veteran and proud, lifelong Republican.

"I will hit the ground running on March 3 with my plan to recruit new Republicans from the ranks of the unenrolled," Ford says. "I'm committed to working full-time on growing the GOP base."

Ford's creativity, energy and tireless efforts to elect Republicans are well known.

"But too many good candidates lose because we don't have the votes," Ford says. "That's got to change. The future of our great state depends on it.

"The position of Republican State Committeeman is meant for me — I can make a difference.

"I ask for your vote, March 2."

Hedlund appointed to highway commission

State Senator Robert L. Hedlund, R-Weymouth, has been appointed to a newly created bi-partisan commission that will pursue reforms designed to achieve more efficient administration of our state's highways that could potentially lead to combining the responsibilities now divided by three different state agencies that oversee various state roadways.

"I am excited about being a part of this commission because we will be considering issues I have campaigned on and supported as ranking member of the transportation committee over the last several years, such as merging the Turnpike Authority with Mass Highway," Hedlund said. "This is an idea that is long overdue.

"We are talking about a cost savings of $20 million annually with that merger alone. Massachusetts is the only state that has three different departments overseeing various state roadways. I look forward to a serious consideration of this reform in a bi-partisan, direct manner."

The commission will also consider related issues such as the maintenance responsibilities for boulevards and parkways now under the control of the Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR), formerly the MDC.

Chairing the new commission is Transportation Secretary Daniel Grabauskas. Others appointed to the commission with Senator Hedlund include: Douglas Foy, Chairman of Commonwealth Development; Mass Highway Commissioner John Cogliano; Mass Turnpike Chairman Matt Amorello; Katherine Abbott, Commissioner of the Department of Conservation and Recreation; Steven Baddour, Co-Chairman of the Transportation Committee; Joseph Wagner, Co-Chairman of the Transportation Committee; State Rep. Marie Parente; State Rep. Lewis Evangelidis; Stephanie Pollack from the Conservation Law Foundation; and Greg Beeman from the Associated Builders and Contractors of Massachusetts.

Schools seek tax increase

recommending a budget of $11.9 million which is 6.45 percent or $723,753 over last year. But during these tight fiscal times that are also facing the town side of the budget, that figure is about $400,000 more than Town Manager Mark Haddad has allocated for the schools next year.

If Selectmen agree to put an override on the ballot, it would be the second year in a row the town put a general override before the voters. Passing an override is a two-step process: first Town Meeting approves the budget contingent on the override and then a ballot question must pass by a simple majority at the polls.

Last year, voters approved a $350,000 override, 1271-1034 or with a 250-vote margin.

Town Clerk Marion Douglas said Tuesday there is still time to put an override question on the April 3 Town Election ballot.

If an override does go on the ballot and fails, it is not clear if the schools would shoulder the entire $400,000 cut from their proposed budget or if the town-side would also share the cuts. Haddad has proposed less than a 1 percent increase in the town side of budget or .68 percent over last year. The "town side" of the budget also includes school employee benefits and insurance and school debt service, according to Town Finance Director Michael Buckley.

With the $400,000 override added in, the entire proposed town budget including the municipal and school sides is $30,620,060, Buckley said.

School Committee member Chartis Tebbetts said if the town presented a united front, she was confident an override would pass muster on Election Day.

"With the support of the Advisory Committee and Selectmen, we feel very confident the community will support this," Tebbetts said.

School Committee member Mark DeGiacomo said the committee would provide a list of cuts should the override fail, so the community will understand what's at stake.

Maureen Jerz of the Advisory Committee said if the community is asked to approve an override this year, it must be the lowest number possible.

"There needs to be assurance the School Committee has examined every single line item in the budget," she said.

DeGiacomo, who described the School Committee budget discussions as going through an "agonizing task," said the meetings have been televised.

"It's been a very difficult, grueling, and unpleasant task," he said. "The lower (the override) the better chance it will pass, everyone knows that."

Selectman Tom Callahan suggested the School Department not fund the third year of the teachers' contract. He said all contracts are subject to appropriation. Callahan noted that 80 percent of the school budget is salaries and strongly suggested the School Committee take a hard line in teacher contract negotiations.

"Overrides are not supposed to be annual events," he said.

Contracted salary hikes amount to $355,432 of the increase; the other big increase is $223,000 in utility costs for the newly renovated and expanded Deer Hill and middle-high schools.

At last week's joint meeting there was considerable discussion about why the schools are proposing the addition of two special education teachers and a school psychologist for a total of $129,000. But the School Committee explained those positions would actually save $50,000 because the school department could bring more special education services "in house" and save on expensive tuition and out-of-town transportation costs.

"There are no new initiatives in this budget," School Committee Chairman Rick Flynn said. "We are trying to maintain as much as we have currently." He said the goal was to maintain class sizes as low as possible.

School Committee member Rick Flynn said enrollment in Cohasset has increased dramatically over the past five years, which is also driving the budget. Five years ago there were 478 students in grades 6-12; next year there are projected to be 735 students, he said. Next year Deer Hill, which will have grades 3-5, is expected to have 392 students and there will be 392 in grades K-2 at Osgood.

Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris said yesterday plans were to have another joint meeting with the School Committee, Selectmen and Advisory Committee. "This was the first brush some had with the (override) request and we want to review the line items in the school budget," she said. McMorris said the boards would put their heads together to see if the $400,000 override figure could be reduced if even by only a few thousand dollars.

"In my mind any efforts to bring that number down are good," she said.

"When I pulled papers in early January I did so with an expectation that I would be running a campaign for a contested race," he says. "This is what makes the Town of Cohasset a special place where the citizens care about their way of life by wanting to be involved.

"I look forward to a lively discussion of the various issues over the next few weeks and how my proven experience and dedicated service to Cohasset, and in running my own business will continue to be of benefit to the Town."

Brown, who is seeking reelection, said competition brings out the differences among the candidates.

Brown is a former long-time conservation commissioner and current member of the recycling committee. H said he is running on his record and involvement in the town.

"I think I have shown that I am concerned about the town I love," he said. "I have been very involved over the years that I have been a selectman and if reelected, I will continue to do my best for the town and the people."

If three races weren't enough, there could also be a $400,000 Prop. 2-1/2 override on the ballot. The School Committee, Selectmen and Advisory Committee held a powwow last week to consider asking voters to increase their taxes to cover a shortfall in the fiscal year 2005 school budget. (See related story page one).

Overrides and election races tend to draw more voters to the polls.

"I think it's wonderful there is so much interest this year," Town Clerk Marion Douglas said. "It's great and with a potential override there could be two things to draw people out."

Adding even more spice to this year's election are a four-person race for two seats on the School Committee; and a two-person race for a one-year seat on the Planning Board.

Stuart Ivimey, who is an attorney and chairman of the Community Preservation Committee, and Joseph Nedrow, chairman of the Senior Housing Committee, are both running for the one-year remaining of Chris Ford's term on the Planning Board. Ford, who spends time in Florida, recently resigned.

Incumbent School Committee member Pat Martin of Linden Drive plans to seek a third term, while Adrienne MacCarthy of Doane Street, Jamie Williams of Surry Drive and Scott O'Grady of Sohier Street are running for their first. Incumbent Mark DeGiacomo is not seeking a third term.

Town Clerk Douglas got her wish this year, in that all spots on the ballot will have names next to them. The following candidates are unopposed.

School Committee member Rick Shea of Margin Street, who was appointed to fill Jane Pescatore's seat in September, is running for the one-year remaining of Pescatore's unexpired term. Pescatore resigned from the School Committee to accept employment with the school department.

Mike Wescott of River Road, who is a member of the Growth & Development Committee and head of the anti-Avalon group Cohasset Action, is running for the five-year Planning Board seat being vacated by Bill Good, who decided not to seek a fourth term.

Chris Allen, 21 Pleasant St., is running for the one-year unexpired term on the Cohasset Housing Authority. The seat was vacated by Joanne Young, who moved away. Janice Rosano of 60 Elm St. pulled papers for the seat but did not return them.

Nathaniel Palmer of Little Harbor Road will run for the seat being vacated by Rob Kasameyer on the Water Commission and Elsa Miller of Reservoir Road is seeking reelection to the Board of Assessors. Steve Bobo of Jerusalem Road, chairman of the Board of Health, is seeking a third term.

There are three seats and three candidates for the Board of Library Trustees: incumbents Sarah Pease of Sankey Road and Barbara Power of Beach Streeet; and Stacey Weaver, 44 Nichols Road, who is seeking her first term. Trustee June Hubbard is not seeking reelection.

Rick Grassie recently resigned from the Recreation Commission leaving a two-year unexpired term; Lisa LoJacono, 111 Nichols Road, is running for that seat.

Recreation Commissioner Anthony Carbone is seeking reelection. Ann "Nancy" Barrett is running for reelection to a five-year term on the Cohasset Housing Authority and Sewer Commissioner Sean Cunning is seeking another three-year term.

Boys win final three games to clinch postseason berth

By Mark Goodman
CORRESPONDENT

The catchphrase around the Cohasset boys basketball locker room last week included the words "backs to the wall."

With a 7-11 record after 18 games, the Skippers needed a sweep of last week's three-game homestand to reach the magic number of 10 wins. They did just that, defeating Harwich, Hull and Mashpee in the span of four nights.

And now, after having records at various points in the season of 2-5, 4-8, and 6-10, the blue and white await the seedings of the MIAA Div. 4 tournament that come out tomorrow.

The Hull contest was without a doubt the marquee game of the week. As if the Skippers-Pirates rivalry wasn't enough, the game had postseason implications for both teams. Cohasset's were obvious. Hull had already qualified for the tournament, but needed a win to regain some momentum and improve its possible seeding.

The starting backcourt of seniors Chris Bilodeau and John Andrade carried much of the load in Cohasset's 68-61 victory. Bilodeau had 23 points, eight rebounds and seven assists, while Andrade scored 19, highlighted by five daggers from three-point land.

One of those treys came with 12:20 left and gave Cohasset its first lead of the game, 39-36. After a lot of back-and-forth action, another Andrade bomb gave the Skippers an eight-point lead with six minutes to go, and the momentum established by the shot was too much for Hull to overcome.

Sticking to the script

CHS icemen's six game win streak comes as no surprise to coach

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

We all know life does not follow a script...with the possible exception of Ben Virga, that is.

Indeed, it's almost scary to think how well the rookie Cohasset High hockey coach forecast what has happened over the last few weeks to his team.

After the Skippers dropped a 1-0 heartbreaker to South Shore League champion Abington-East Bridgewater way back on Jan. 31, Virga took a look at his schedule and told this typist there was no reason he could think of that his team (4-5-1 at that time) should not win the next five games in a row to sew up a state tourney berth, and then use the last three games to see if they were contenders or pretenders for a state title. He repeated this seemingly pie-in-the-sky call the next day at practice to his players.

Well, sure enough, here we are six wins and no losses later, and Ben Virga looks like he might be ready to make the jump from high school hockey to the Psychic Hotline.

"I just knew what this team was capable of," said the smiling Virga. "In the last six games, we've played some good hockey. There have still been a few bumps in there, but we're working to iron those out by state tourney time."

The Skippers closed out the foretold five game win streak, all over South Shore League rivals, with a 4-2 win over Harwich last Wednesday, a 2-0 win over Mashpee on Friday and a 11-6 win over an undermanned Carver team on Saturday, a game that saw Virga

"All in all, it was a great year. We were really happy with the way we wrapped it up. Sixth place is a very strong finish."
Norwell-Cohasset gymnastics coach Kara Connerty

Considering they were seeded eighth going into Monday's South Sectional championships, the members of the Norwell-Cohasset gymnastics squad can't be all that disappointed with their sixth place finish.

"No, all in all, it was a great year," asserted Nor-Coh veteran coach Kara Connerty, whose team qualified for postseason competition by winning the South Shore League championship with a perfect 10-0 regular season. "We were really happy with the way we wrapped it up. Sixth place is a very strong finish."

Despite missing two key gymnasts, defending state champion Barnstable captured its fifth consecutive Sectional crown, scoring a 140.2 at Foxboro High to easily outpoint second place King Phillip (135.275). Both of these teams will move on to next week's state championships, along with the top two teams from the North (Masconomet and Andover) and East/Central (Reading and Framingham) Sectionals, and two wild card teams (Shrewsbury and Attleboro), as determined by high score.

Attleboro (131.35) placed third, followed by Canton (131.35), Somerset (130.25) and Norwell-Cohasset (126.025). Sharon (124.9 and North Attleboro (122.9) brought up the rear.

The 126.05 was well of the Nor-Coh's qualifying average of 129.475, but judging at the state level is much more critical, according to Connerty, a position supported by the fact that six of the other seven

CHS wrestlers advance eight to state championships this weekend at home

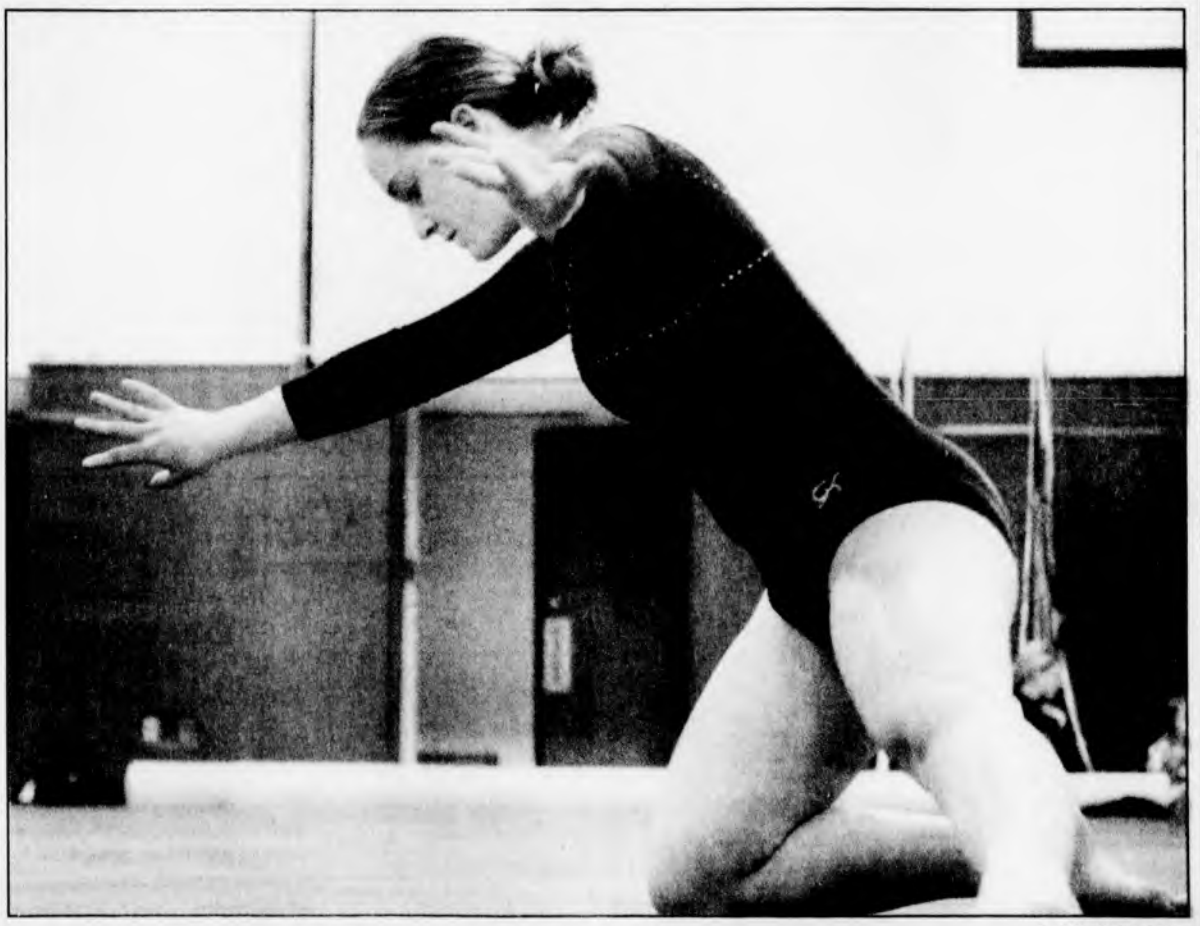
By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

The ups seemed a little grander and the downs a bit less painful for the Cohasset High wrestling team at the Div. 3 sectionals this year, the knowledge that whichever Skippers finished top six in their respective weight classes would get the chance to wrestle in front of their home town fans this Friday and Saturday.

A total of eight CHS grapplers wound up placing top six in the 19 school field, not a bad tally at all, which no doubt had more than a little to do with veteran coach Torin Sweeney's ability to move quickly past his Skippers going 0-for-5 in the championship bouts Saturday at Foxboro High to finish and take home a third place prize.

"We figured going it that we'd be right there at sectionals in that second to sixth range, so third place isn't bad at all," said Sweeney, who is in his 21st year with the CHS program. "On the whole, we did about what I thought we could, with a few guys finishing higher than I thought and few guys lower. But that's the way these things are, lot of ups and downs."

For example, getting five wrestlers to the finals was a bit above expectations. Taking no championships, however, was a bit below.



Reaching the finals with perfect records on Friday and Saturday were freshman Ryan McLellan at 103 pounds, junior Kevin Dinsmore at 125, junior Joe Kehoe at 140, senior captain Phil Strazzulla at 145 pounds and junior Matt Baroudi at 215.

McLellan and Dinsmore were underdog finalists, and lost to top seeds Dan Egan (Hanover) and Eric Rosado (respectively) in the end; no problem there.

Strazzulla, Kehoe and Baroudi, on the other hand, were expected to compete for their respective sectional crowns, and they all certainly did just that. Unfortunately, all three CHS stars came up short by the slightest of margins in the finals.

Kehoe took a 5-0 first period lead on Foxboro's Brian Dietzel, the top seed in the division, and appeared to be on the way to a possible pin when the match ref forced Kehoe to release, under the impression that Dietzel was being injured.

Lady hoopsters win final two games, await playoff seeding

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

As the Cohasset Lady Skipper hoopsters move on to postseason play, they have kept their skills as crisp as the February air. They have capped their season with a highly respectable 14-6 record and show no sign of letting up.

In the final three matchups, all on the road, the Skippers first squared off in Harwich against the Rough Riders on a very cold Feb. 9the evening. Indeed the game proved a very rough ride for the Lady Skippers, as they fall 54-21. Ouch! The usually iron-fisted Cohasset defense could not stop the league leading and undefeated Harwich team.

Despite the blowout, the Lady Skippers quickly rebounded in their winning ways. Two days later, they showed up on Hull's doorsteps. The scrappy Pirates couldn't find any hidden treasures in their own playing strategies. The result: a 48-21 Cohasset victory.

Led by the starting five of Ashley Faber, Danielle Pinkus, Casey Anderson, Jen Buckley and Katie James, the Lady Skippers controlled the game and walked out with a commanding win.

"Brisk passing and good communication on the court earned us this victory," asserted sophomore Lisa Musto. "Hull tried to stop us with a very tough half court press but it did not work."

The very next day, the Skippers avenged their earlier Cape Cod loss by overcoming the Mashpee Falcons by a 51-26 score. Both the offense and defense clicked in very nicely.

Katie James, who forced two interceptions leading to fast-break layups, noted: "What a great way for our team to end the season."

The South Shore League honored Casey Anderson, Jen Buckley and Ashley Faber by selecting them to play in the all star game on Feb 13. Despite their losing to the Patriot League players, the Cohasset all star players can feel quite proud of their selection.

At this point, no one knows specifically who Cohasset will play in the playoffs. Two challenging candidates lie in Harwich and Carver. Whatever the outcome, the Lady Skippers can look back with great pride on a 14-6 record.

The CHS girls now await tomorrow's release by the MIAA of seedings and brackets for the Div. 4 state tourney, with preliminary round games likely to get underway on either Saturday or Sunday.

Cohasset sixth grade boys bouncing back

The Cohasset sixth grade boy' basketball team is more than halfway through their first season in the Patriot League Travel program. Through thirteen games, the boys have 6 wins and 7 losses, winning four of their last six games.

Although playing in the town recreation program for many years, the boys this year are stepping up their play in the very competitive Patriot League. Wins have come against teams from Bridgewater, Taunton, East Bridgewater, Quincy, Hanson and Pembroke, where they outscored their opponents by an average of 8 points a game.

Although losses against Halifax (Coh. 36, Halifax 39) and Taunton (Coh. 29, Taunton 30) proved to be exciting action packed games, with the Halifax game running into double overtime.

Coach Dee Davis characterizes the boys as quick, athletic and smart. The boys have come together as a team, playing off of each other's strengths. Turnovers early in the season plagued the team. A little more than halfway through the season, the team has pulled together by seizing offensive opportunities and reducing turnovers. Coach Davis is assisted by Bob McCunney and Ladd McQuade.

At point guard, Eamon Davis leads the team in scoring, averaging 7.5 points per game. Eamon's court sense have led contributed to many offensive opportunities. Power forward John Maher with 6 points per game, is dominating on the boards both offensively and defensively. Guard Robby McCunney, with quick hands and feet, plays a mean man to man defense causing opponents to turn the ball over. Chris Brown, Graham Stevenson and Dean Driscoll are the big men under the boards intimidating the opposition. Center Taylor McQuade, with eleven blocks this season keeps the opposing team out of the paint. Forward Brendan Doonan, is a scrappy player and drives hard to the basket. Will Wise, at guard, leads the team in assists and makes plays happen. Guard John Kearney hustles in every game and is a strong free thrown shooter. Ollie Forrer has great defensive hands and knows where to position himself on the floor. Ian Quinlan, gives it his all, with his quickness and desire to play.

COASTAL STARS REPORT

The Coastal Stars Squirt A team deserved better than a 4-4 tie this week versus Hingham, but they will take it. Down 3-1 the Stars outworked Hingham and rallied to take a 4-3 lead late in the game. The team rallied behind goaltender John Collins, who filled in admirably for regular goaltender Kevin Kelly and earned a point as they battle for a playoff berth.

Ryan Donovan scored 2 goals, one unassisted, the other assisted by Travers Craven, and continued his strong play at both ends of the ice. He is one of the hardest workers at practice and when he plays hard he raises the level of play of everyone on the team. With the score 3-1 Tyler Martina got the Stars back in the game in the second period on a terrific shot following a battle for a loose puck. Jeff Durkin and Connor Mclean were credited with well deserved assists as they worked very hard to come up with the puck in the scrum in front of the Hingham net.

Will Schorle put the Stars ahead 4-3 in the third on a beautiful end to end rush that culminated in a Cam Neely like power move to the net and Gretzky like finish. Will, along with Matt Entwistle, Pat Cull, and Brian Scott played their best games as a group this year. They are the strength of the team and when they perform their jobs well the team has a chance against anyone. John Meehan, who assisted on Schorle's goal, and Alex Evans were also defensive standouts as they made several strong plays preventing scoring chances by Hingham. The Stars 11-6-4 are playing better and hope to be a part of the playoff picture.

After the match resumed, Dietzel wrestled a very tactically sound match and managed to pull even with Kehoe at 6-6 in the third period. With under 30 seconds to go in regulation, Kehoe tried to pull off an escape to break the tie and wound up getting flipped onto his back and pinned.

Strazzulla's bout went past regulation, as he and Foxboro's Nick Avery fought to a 1-1 standoff through the allotted nine minutes. In the one minute OT frame, Strazzulla was taken down by the Foxboro wrestler to decide the match. This was just the third loss of the season for the team captain, against a team best 33 wins, but it appears he'll have a very tough road to hoe this Saturday with three top wrestlers in his bracket.

Baroudi, who is looking to get back to the New England championships this winter, came even closer than Kehoe and Strazzulla to the win at 215, as his match with Mansfield's Tom Creedon (who he'd previously beaten this season) was forced to a second OT period with the score knotted at 3-3. Creedon had scored first in the match, and thus was able to select position in overtime. He chose bottom to start the second overtime frame, and pulled off an escape with eight seconds left on the clock to earn the necessary one point for the win.

Fortunately, all five of these guys will get to take out their frustrations this weekend in front of the hometown faithful, as will junior Jonathan Littauer and seniors Matt Casey and Jake Berger.

Casey managed to take a fourth at 160 pounds, while Littauer (130) and Berger (heavyweight) each took fifths to qualify for the state championships.

The top four finishers in each weight category this weekend will advance to the All-State championships next weekend at Salem High, with the top two finishers there then advancing on to New England's in New Haven (Conn.) the weekend after that.

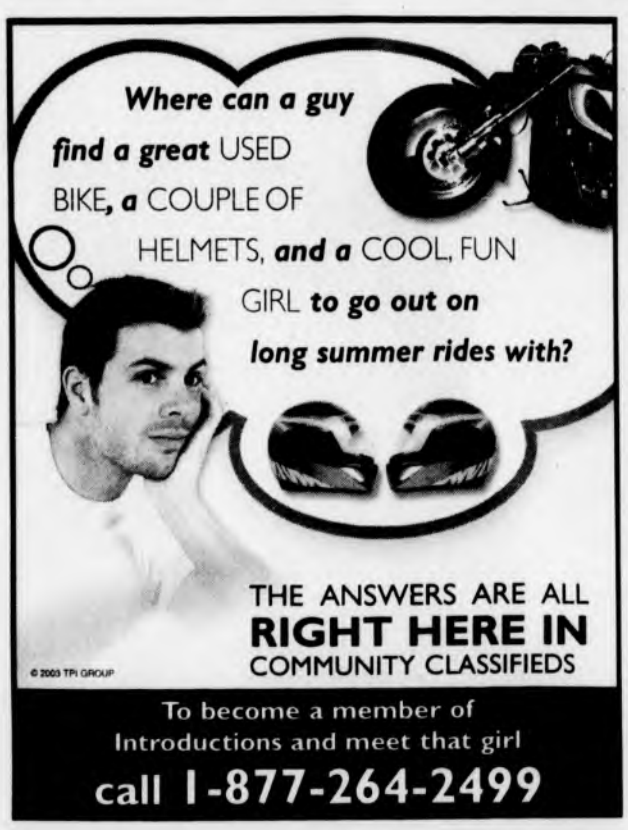
Cohasset Youth Lacrosse Looking for Coaches

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse is looking for volunteer assistant coaches at all levels for its spring season, with a particular emphasis on finding coaches for its girls teams. Cohasset currently expects to field at least 10 teams this spring, although the growth in the number of participants could push that number even higher, provided there is adequate coaching available to protect and develop the youngsters involved.

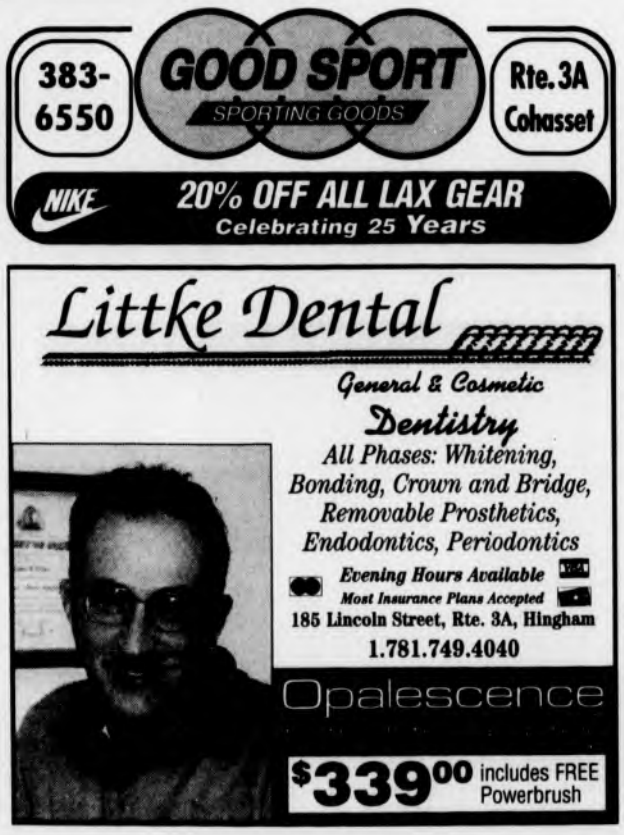
In all, Cohasset will field boys teams at the 14 & Under (7th and 8th grade), 12 & Under (5th & 6th grade) and 10 & Under (3rd and 4th grade) levels, and girls teams at the 14-U and 12-U levels, plus a weekly clinic for girls players in grades 3 and 4.

The shortage of coaches is particularly acute for girls, where the current coaching staffs are so limited that roster sizes may be kept particularly small unless more coaches volunteer.

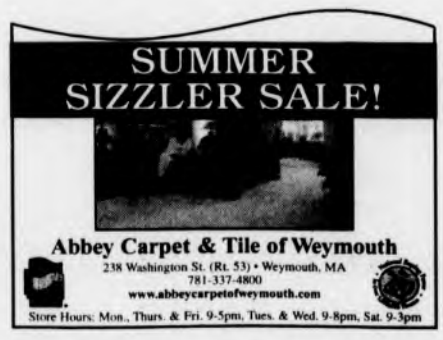
In the younger boys' age groups, more coaching volunteers could enable the program to add additional teams, keeping roster sizes smaller and more manageable, resulting in a better experience for all kids involved.



Cohasset Youth Lacrosse currently has head coaches at all age levels, but with the probability of more than 300 children spread throughout the program this year, increasing the size of coaching staffs is essential for player development.



Through its nine-year history, the foundation of the Cohasset Youth Lacrosse coaching staff has been volunteers who do not have children on the teams involved. In seeking additional coaches, the program is hoping to get both community volunteers and parents whose children will play. Experience playing or coaching the game is desired, but not necessary; coaches must be able to throw and catch with a lacrosse stick in order to teach others and facilitate drills. Cohasset Youth Lacrosse will pay registration costs to coaching clinics for those individuals interested in participating.



At all but the youngest age levels, Cohasset Youth Lacrosse holds two practices each week, and has games on Sunday afternoon. The youngest boys have one weekly practice, while the girls clinic program will be one weekly 90-minute session. Assistant coaches are not expected to attend every event, although they should be able to appear often enough to be perceived by the players as a team leader.

In addition to coaches, Cohasset Youth Lacrosse is interested in developing referees who can work its games. Interested individuals will be required to take some officiating instruction classes during the winter, and may then be eligible to work games either with a partner or solo in the spring.

For more information or to express your interest in coaching or officiating, call Chuck Jaffe, coordinator of youth lacrosse, at 781-383-9858.

empty the bench early in the second after his team had increased its lead to 9-2.

This got the Skippers to 9-5-3 on the season and locked up a tie for second place in the SSL as well as a third straight postseason berth for the program.

The so-called three game "pretender or contender" series also started well, on Tuesday, as the Skippers topped perennial Div. 3 state power Blue Hills, 3-2, at Ponkapoag Arena in Canton.

The win avenged an earlier season 4-4 tie for the Skippers to the Warriors and lifted the team psyche another notch heading into the annual Bourne Freeze-out Tourney to close out the regular season. The Skippers will open tonight versus Div. 2 playoff hopeful Stoughton (5 p.m. at Bourne's Gallo Arena) and then play annual Div. 3 heavyweights Bourne or Westwood in the consolation or championship game the following evening (6 or 8 p.m. start, respectively).

"If we can go down there to Bourne and finish strong, I'd say we're legitimate contenders for a state title," offered Virga. "I like the way the team has been playing recently, but the Bourne tourney will tell us if we're ready to compete at that next level."

Cohasset proved the better team almost from the opening drop Tuesday night, but the well coached Blue Hills players defended well in their own and then scored on their first shot of the game, capitalizing on a 2-on-1 break to go up 1-0.

"Blue Hills is as well coached a team as there is around," observed Virga. " They might bend, but they don't break a lot. They stick to their system, and then do a good job of capitalizing when their chances are there to score."

Cohasset sophomore Mark Bouchard got that first goal back a little more than two minutes later when he batted home the rebound of a Tim Pilczak slapper.

Team leading scorer Rob Carpenter (11 goals, 20 assists) gave the Skippers their first lead early in the second period when he converted off the carom of a Ted Straughn shot, but then he gave it back in his own end later I nthe frame, as his attempted clear around Cohasset's net got caught on the heel of his stick and slipped off his stick early and behind stunned netminder Stefan Parnell (20 saves).

"Rob's had a good touch around the net this year, but maybe we'll take one off his goal total for that," joked Virga.

Straughn made it a whole lot easier to laugh about that gaffe five minutes into the third when he got position in front of the Warriors net and deflected a slapper from fellow tri-captain Mike Devine from the right point past the Warriors netminder. This was Straughn's team best 15th goal of the season, and he is now just one point behind Carpenter for the team scoring lead. Fast emerging sophomore Brandon Smith notched the other assist on this tally, as he did a nice job of drawing in the defense before sliding a near perfect point-to-point pass to Devine.

This would be all the help the recently red hot Parnell would need.

The sophomore netminder also came up big in the win over Harwich on Wednesday, stopping 26 of 28 shots to backstop the 4-2 victory.

Virga also lauded the play of his four defenseman—Devine, Pilczak, Smith and Crandon Leahy—following this win.

Cohasset broke out in front with the game's first two goals. Devine scored from Durkin 1:45 in, and the lead went to 2-0 with five minutes to play in the opening frame when sophomore Matt O'Connell set up captain Mike Rasmussen for a one-timer, somehow finding him by the opposite post after splitting a pair of defenders.

"That was the type of play Matty has been making more and more of lately," said Virga of O'Connell, who has collected 12 points (five goals, seven assists) over the six game win streak after totaling just 10 (goal, nine assists) over the first 12 games. "He is really discovering his game now. You could see the talent was there from day one. He just needed the confidence."

Harwich scored late in the first to make it a 2-1 game, ,but Carpenter got the two goal lead back just 39 seconds into the second, with Pilczak and Straughn getting credit for the helpers.

Harwich would cut the lead back to one, again late in the period, but Straughn got the two goal lead back for good when he carved out some space in front of the Harwich netminder and batted home the rebound of a Bouchard shot.

The MIAA will release tourney seedings and pairing brackets on Sunday, with games expected to get underway on Wednesday.

The Blue Hills game saw Virga utilize a regular shifting third forward line for the first time this season. The newly constructed line-- featuring heady sophomore Ben Libby centering converted freshman defenseman Conor Holway and hard working junior Mark Donovan—did its job, according to the coach, while helping to keep the top two forward lines fresh down the stretch.

"Basically, we just want these guys to avoid being scored on, and they did a good job of holding the fort when they were in there," said Virga. "Those three will keep getting their chances because being able to keep those top six forwards fresh could be huge for us in the playoffs."

Three Skippers named SSL all-stars

Carpenter, Devine and Straughn were all named South Shore League all-stars by a vote of league coaches this week. Rasmussen also received a few votes for the honors.

Boys hoopsters win final three games to clinch postseason berth threes came off of a drive-and-dish from Bilodeau and Andrade sticking the shot from the corner. It is a two-man game that has been developing throughout the season.

"We have a little thing going with the catch-and-shot," Bilodeau said. "John is money in that situation. I expect him to make them."

The team's leading scorer was asked where the game ranked among all of the Cohasset-Hull games he has been a part of.

"This is definitely first for me," he said. "We needed it for the tournament. It was our last game against Hull, unless we see them in the tournament, so the seniors wanted to remember it."

The next night, last Thursday, was senior night. For the team's four seniors, Dan Tarpey, Sean Connolly, Andrade and Bilodeau, it was most likely the last time they would don the home whites. Even bigger than that, it was Cohasset's last hurdle in their run toward the playoffs, as they needed a win over Mashpee to qualify.

The Skippers got the job done, albeit not in the prettiest fashion, with a 50-41 win over a game Falcons squad who came into the contest with a 4-15 record.

The senior bigs stepped up for the Skippers, as Connolly had eight points and eight boards and Tarpey scored 11. It was a lay-up by Tarpey with five minutes left that put Cohasset up 10, effectively sealing the victory.

To the fans, that game seemed closer than it should have been, considering Cohasset's blowout of Mashpee earlier in the season. Tarpey said after the game, however, that the Skippers knew they were in for a fight.

"I think when we played them down there, they had an off night," he said. "We knew they were a tough bunch of kids."

The Falcons' toughness showed on the defensive end. They came out in a box-and-one, with senior league all-star Mike Fields matched up on Bilodeau, who was battling two bum ankles. Fields played arguably the best defense against the Cohasset guard all year, holding Bilodeau to 14 points, leaving him 16 shy of 1,000.

His team had to play through some turnovers and missed opportunities, but head coach Ron Ford said he would take the win.

"It was our fourth game in six days;" he said. "It's tough to play four good games in that stretch. I'm proud of the kids and how tough they were tonight."

Another thing for Ford to be proud of was the Skippers free-throw shooting. Something that they had struggled with all season, the CHS boys combined to make 43-of-62 freebies in their final two games, just a shade under 70 percent.

The coach was understandably content simply from the victory.

"I don't care who we play; we got in," Ford said.

Tarpey said the Skippers will be ready for tournament action next week.

"We've been playing with our backs to the wall, so we have that mental edge," he said. "When we're playing in the tournament, we'll be in a familiar situation."

teams at Sectionals finished below their season averages.

The season is not yet over for all members of the Nor-Coh squad, however, with two gymnasts moving on to compete at the state individual championships at Beverly High School on Feb. 28.

Cohasset junior Nancy Durkin has qualified to compete in three events-- uneven bars, vault and floor exercise—and Norwell junior Jen Guiney has qualified on vault.

Norwell junior Samantha Rosen missed out of qualifying on both floor and vault by one-tenth of a point on her average scores in those events.

The Nor-Cohs appear to be in good shape to defend their South Shore League title next winter, as they lose only one of 20 roster members to graduation, that being Cohasset senior Shelly Carter, a team captain.

If you want to get to know a rug, rub its back.

DOES IT FEEL TOO SMOOTH, TOO STIFF? IT'S PROBABLY A MACHINE-MADE RUG.

SOME EXQUISITE RUGS HAVE AS MANY AS 800 KNOTS PER INCH.

MOST RUGS ARE MADE OF WOOL. MORE ELABORATE DESIGNS ARE OFTEN WOVEN FROM SILK. WE HAVE SOME THAT COMBINE WOOL AND SILK.

WE HAVE THE WIDEST SELECTION AND BEST VALUE OF ANYONE IN NEW ENGLAND, LIKE THIS RUG FROM THE MAHAL COLLECTION BY SAMAD (M-101 RED/RED).

If it feels a little too smooth, if you can't feel the knots, if it feels a little stiff, then it's probably a machine-made rug. There's nothing wrong with a rug made by a machine as long as you aren't paying like it was a rug made by hand. The same design executed by a machine should cost a third of what a hand-made costs. Hand-knotted rugs are guaranteed to out-live you. A machine-made rug has the life expectancy of five to ten years. Many people buy hand-made rugs for a living room, dining room, or entrance hall. They put the hand-mades where there's a lot of traffic. They put the machine-mades where there's less traffic. That's pretty much the rule.

If you're really serious, measure an inch (the tip of your index finger in length) and count the number of knots. More knots per inch are another measure of quality. There are some amazingly elaborate works of art that have as many as 800 knots per inch. (We have some in our store.)

A simpler design might have around 80 knots per inch. The knottier rugs are often made of silk. The simpler ones are generally made of wool. We have some outstanding rugs that are a combination of wool and silk, basically the best of both worlds. At our store, Dover Rug, we can show you everything from an investment grade rug to a beautiful broadloom carpet. We have the widest selection and the best value of anyone in New England. Plus, on our hand-made rugs, we offer a lifetime (That's lifetime) exchange policy.

So, another way to make sure you're getting what you paid when you buy a rug is to turn the corner and look for our label.

'Art Appraisal Day' at South St. Gallery

The South Street Gallery will once again offer its "Art Appraisal Day" Saturday, Feb. 21, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Hingham resident Arthur Garrity, a professional fine art appraiser, will offer verbal appraisals at the Gallery at 149 South Street. Etchings, prints or original oil or watercolor paintings may be submitted for review. There is a fee of $10 per appraisal, with a portion being donated to the Hingham Library Fund. Garrity notes, "In the past, artwork has always been a hedge against inflation. Many wealthy families that once lost their fortunes during the Depression, for example, but held on to their art collections were able to rebound by selling their artwork years later."

Active in the collecting field of American and European art and antiques for more than 25 years, Garrity first began collecting art while a high school student in his native Salem, MA. Today, he lectures on collecting, collection development, investment portfolio diversification to include tangible assets. He does appraisals throughout the country, working with a network of attorneys, corporations, museums, banks and individuals, estate liquidation, authentication, conservation, proper framing of artwork and on occasion representing clients at auctions weather buying or acting as sales agent.

Kate Sotolova, Manager of the South Street Gallery, said, "This is an excellent opportunity for people to get a professional valuation of art that may have been in their household or family for years. Individuals may wish to know this information for any number of reasons, whether they want to sell, insure or just for their own knowledge."

The South Street Gallery, located at 149 South St., hosts events showcasing local artists and offers custom framing, art restorations and has an adjunct interior design service. The Gallery is open from 10 a. m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday or by appointment. For additional information, please call 781-749-0430.

King Jewelers welcomes Spring with Daffodils for Cancer

Orders for these harbingers of the warmth and hope of the season represent the strength of spirit and courageous outlook of the countless individuals touched by cancer.

As spring approaches, King Jewelers is pleased to announce its first year of participation in "Daffodil Days", an annual celebration which benefits the American Cancer Society. King's involvement in this program provides customers a convenient location to place orders for bunches of these blossoms right at the jewelry store, whether stopping by for a jewelry repair, or a special occasion purchase. Orders for these harbingers of the warmth and hope of the season represent the strength of spirit and courageous outlook of the countless individuals touched by cancer.

From now until March 5, anyone visiting the store may place an order for bouquet(s) of daffodils. Upon returning to Kings on March 24 or 25, customers may claim the flowers which will be delivered to the store freshly cut and bunched. Daffodils are $7 per bunch of ten stems. Payment may be made by cash or check (payable to ACS). All proceeds are donated directly to the American Cancer Society.

As a symbol of gratitude to all who choose to participate in this event at the store, King Jewelers is offering two lovely pieces of designer jewelry as prizes in a drawing to be held on March 24. The names of all who purchase daffodils during this preorder period will be included in the contest. Along with their daffodils, two fortunate participants will receive a beautiful bauble when their names are chosen randomly from the entries. (It is not necessary to be present at the store at the time of the drawing to be a winner.)

An ekdesigns hand tie necklace of silver, gold, crystal and exclusive hand blown beads created by Elizabeth Kissick of Cohasset has been chosen by King's as one of the donated gifts. This cheerful and stylish piece blends sophistication and taste with the beautiful softness of yellows, gold, and greens which appear as the earth is renewed by the sprouting flora.

A stunning gold brooch designed by the renowned Kurt Gutmann is the prize to be won by a second lucky customer. This piece is a striking and elegant interpretation of the awareness brooch and will be a timeless, versatile addition to any jewelry wardrobe.

While awaiting the approach of springtime, visit King Jewelers and consider participating in this event. Uses for these flowers are many. They are perfect to brighten your home, to give to loved ones, or to bring joy to those experiencing difficult times. A symbol of optimism and hope, Daffodil Days reminds everyone that spring is near and alive, as is the American Cancer Society and its works to help those affected by this devastating disease.

For more information please call King Jewelers: 781-383-1755. Kings is located at 380 Route 3a, Cohasset.

New European-style tanning salon opens in Norwell

By Seth Jacobson
SJACOBSO@CNC.COM

You can now find a touch of Europe in Norwell — and pick up a great tan while you're at it.

Sun Factory Tanning Studio, which opened a month ago, is located on Washington Street in the same complex at the Beijing House.

The owners — Steve DiStasio and Peter Cappadona of Quincy — along with manager Bebe Smolarek, say the new salon models itself after salons located throughout Europe.

DiStasio said the Norwell salon boasts the best in new technological tanning equipment and noted the salon also features one of the most recent trends, spray-tanning.

DiStasio said he is in the restaurant-furniture business, but got into tanning because of observations he made over the years.

"I was always a seasonal tanner," he said. "What I found out growing up in Quincy was that a dozen or more places in the area were offering tanning, but they weren't convenient. You couldn't just walk in and do it, the service was sometimes rude, the equipment was dirty and people were inexperienced. I thought there was a need for a high-end place in the area."

DiStasio said he did some research and after that, he bought his first Sun Factory location in Quincy. He said there, he decided to get the best equipment and added that location was the first one in Quincy to offer spray-tanning. He explained spray-tanning is like a shower and takes minimal time to get the perfect tan.

The business turned out to be overwhelmingly successful and that led to his purchase and opening of the Norwell facility. DiStasio said like in Quincy, his establishment is the first in Norwell to offer spray-tanning.

"I think the spray-tanning brings in clientele that wouldn't normally come into a tanning salon," he said. "Most of the machines we have are made in Europe, because that's where tanning is predominant. Some people like to come in during the winter and just feel the warmth of the machines for 10-15 minutes."

DiStasio said the maximum time it takes to get a great tan at Sun Factory is 15 minutes. He explained some people need less time because of their skin type. He added different machines in the salon are geared toward people of different skin types and noted the staff there keeps an accurate computerized record of all its customers so everyone gets exactly what they want every time.

"In Europe, there are tanning salons on every corner."

— Bebe Smolarek, Sun Factory Tanning Studio manager

He said many of the machines have different features, such as air-conditioning, aromatherapy, fans and mist-making devices.

He said before any customer enters one of the tanning machines, they have to fill out a questionnaire so the staff can familiarize themselves with the customer's needs.

Smolarek, a native of Poland, concurred with DiStasio that tanning is predominant in Europe.

"There, tanning is routine," she said. "It's like getting a haircut. In Europe, there are tanning salons on every corner. I was shocked when I got to this country and couldn't find a tanning salon."

"European tanning equipment is faster, more powerful and gives you a tan faster without burning," DiStasio added.

DiStasio said another good thing about the salon is its reliable staff.

"We have monthly training sessions with our new employees, all of them have a handbook and we have weekly meetings," DiStasio said."

"All of our employees are certified," Smolarek added. "It's a very professional atmosphere."

DiStasio said all of the appointments at Sun Factory are generally walk-ins. He said he wanted to conduct the business so that anyone can get a tan anytime.

"We're just trying to make everything as convenient as possible," he said. "And we have different packages that allow a lot of flexibility for the customer." He added most of the packages do not expire for one year.

DiStasio said his future goal is to open more Sun Factory facilities, including one in Boston. But for now, he just wants the people on the South Shore area to see what they are missing.

"Tanning is a nice experience," he said. "It doesn't have to be tough. It's actually one of the nicest experiences you could have."

So far, DiStasio said people are discovering that.

"We've had a lot of customers in the last few weeks and they seem to like what we're doing," he said.

"There appears to be a lot of appreciation from the customers," Smolarek added.

"Give it a try," DiStasio said. "It's not only about tanning, it's about therapy and sanity."

For more information call Sun Factory Tanning Salon in Norwell at (781) 659-9800. The business is located at 454 Washington St. in the same complex as Beijing House. Check the business out online at www.sunfactoryusa.com.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

FEBRUARY VACATION CAN BE A GREAT TIME FOR CHOOSING A CAMP!

Many camps fill up during the winter months . . .some are even full by the end of the previous summer. But, there is hope and there is help. The following tips will help many of you who still haven't signed up for camp:

Basic camp search steps:
1. Determine your family's expectations and requirements of camp.
2. Identify appropriate camp options based on the goals and priorities you have set.
3. Choose a camp from the options that you selected.

How do we determine our expectations?
List the most important elements of your family's camp search, keeping in mind your child's personality. First and foremost, ask if your child is ready for a camp experience. Consider what type of camp experiences could round out or reinforce your child's school year experiences. Is your child ready to sleep away from home for several days or weeks? (This will help you select either a resident or day camp setting.) What are his or her interests and needs? Does he or she have any special dietary or physical needs?

The following definitions may be useful:

Resident Camp
Resident camps are generally for children, ages 7-15. Children stay for one to eight weeks and may sleep in cabins, tents, yurts, tepees, hostels or a variety of other types of accommodations.

Day Camp
Day camps generally serve children ages 3-13. Campers return home at the end of the day.

Specialty Camps and Programs (Day or Resident)
Specialty camps and specialty programs at general camps offer campers the opportunity to concentrate in specific areas such as horseback riding, the arts, wilderness and adventure tripping, travel, sports or computers.

Additional Considerations
- Do you have a maximum traveling time or distance? Will your child need transportation?
- What session length will appeal to your child and to your family plans for the summer? (1-8 weeks)
- What is your budget for camp tuition? Camp remains a very affordable option for most everyone. Fees can range from $15 to $180 per day, depending upon the choice of camp, the facilities offered and the camper's needs. Many camps offer financial assistance based on need.
- What size of camp community will make your child feel comfortable?
- What kind of scheduling method will make your child most comfortable? Will he or she feel comfortable about making activity choices every day? Once a week? Every two weeks?
- What level of competition suits your child?
- What activities or program would most interest your child at camp?
- Would a single sex or coed camp be most appropriate for your child?

How do we identify appropriate camp options?
Seek out camps that you think may meet your expectations by:
- Checking at your local library or exploring the camp section of your local newspaper.
- Attending camp fairs and expos.
- Asking friends, family, co-workers, teachers, coaches and doctors for recommendations.

Once you have identified appropriate options, contact the camps and request their marketing materials.

How do we choose one camp from the options we've selected? With your camp expectations in mind:
- Review the camps' brochures, Web sites, videos, DVDs, and CD ROMs with your child.
- Talk with directors and/or camp representatives.
- Request parent references and check them.

Questions you may wish to ask finalist camps include:
- How can I stay in touch with my child during camp? Does the camp allow phone calls or e-mail?
- Does the camp have parent visitation days?
- How will the camp meet my child's special dietary or physical needs?
- What training does the staff receive on safety, supervision, counseling, problem solving and other issues unique to working with young children?
- Is the price all-inclusive or are there extra charges for transportation horseback riding food service overnights group pictures field trips waterskiing T-shirts extended care camp uniforms registration
- If transportation is offered, what are the specifics?
- If before- and after-camp extended care is offered, who is with the children and what activities take place?
- Is an open house offered before camp starts so that you can tour the camp and visit with the director?

Keeping your child involved in the camp selection process is vital. Jointly review camp materials and the answers you find to the questions outlined above, consider the expectations you set at the beginning of the search process, and make an informed camp choice!

On the prowl to solve coyote influx

Hedlund hosts meeting on issue

By Jeanne M. Rideout
JRIDEOUT@CNC.COM

Coyote pups take over the backyard of a duplex on Commercial Street in Weymouth.

A gray shadow glides through a Cohasset back yard. The next morning, Fluffy doesn't show up for breakfast.

The highly adaptable urban coyote was on the prowl.

The growing problem of coyotes in South Shore neighborhoods will be addressed in an information session hosted by state Sen. Robert Hedlund at 7 p.m. on Thursday, Feb. 26, at the Whipple Center in the McCulloch Building, 182 Green St., Weymouth.

Chrissie Henner, a wildlife biologist with the Massachusetts Department of Fisheries and Wildlife, will give a lecture and a multimedia presentation dealing with coyote encroachment and safety. Henner is a specialist in coyotes and other fur-bearing animals. She spends much of her time traveling the state giving presentations on coyote hazards and issues. She will explain why federal law limits the actions that the state and towns can take and how residents can still take personal measures.

Other invited speakers will further discuss what can be done to protect children and pets from coyote attack and why there are more coyotes than in past years. The common belief that the ban on leg-hold traps has contributed to coyote population increases will also be argued.

"Coyotes are becoming a part of life in Massachusetts. The best way for us to deal with the problem is to educate ourselves about its nature. This session will provide citizens with the knowledge they need to protect their families and pets," Hedlund said. Hedlund himself experienced the hazards coyotes pose when, last year, he had a cat killed by a coyote in his own yard.

Cats and small dogs are like candy to coyotes, according to Web site www.desertusa.com (type "coyote" in search box). DesertUSA is a monthly, Internet-based magazine by San Diego-based Multimedia.

Although small domestic animals are at risk of coyotes, the main staples of the coyotes' diet are mice, squirrels, rabbits, insects, reptiles, fruit, and carrion. The coyote, one of the most adaptable animals in the world, hunts both day and night, existing on whatever the area offers for food, according to desertusa.com.

Two hundred years ago, the coyote lived primarily in the northwest corner of the United States. Over the years, this member of the dog family has adapted readily to the changes caused by human occupation and spread throughout North America. The coyote can changed its breeding habits, diet, and social life to survive in a wide variety of habitats. Sightings are now common in New England. The near extermination of the Gray Wolf, the coyote's primary predator, has been largely responsible for the coyote's expansion across the American continent, according to the Web site. The coyote — canis latrans, meaning barking dog — is about as big as a medium-sized Collie dog.

Coyotes howl to communicate with other coyotes, saying, "I am here and this is my area. Other males are invited to stay away, but females are welcome to follow the sound of my voice. Please answer and let me know where you are so we don't have any unwanted conflicts." Coyotes also yelp, a sound often heard when pups are playing, bark to warn others away from its den or a kill, and make a huffing sound to call pups without making a great deal of noise, DesertUSA states.

While a coyote is similar to a dog in appearance, Snoopy or Lassie it's not.

"Coyotes are not your average dog. They are not to be messed with. They are smart, and they learn very quickly. They are dangerous, and, when it comes to urban coyotes, steps should be taken to avoid encouraging them to visit your neighborhood," desertUSA advised.

What these steps are will be one of the topics addressed at next week's meeting. For further information on the meeting, contact Hedlund's office at (617) 722-1646. All are welcome to attend.

LISTEN To Life

by John Klefeker, BC-HIS
Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

LISTENING TO SWEET TALK

If you whisper sweet nothings into your beloved's ear, you probably want to do everything in your power to make sure your sentiments are well received. If so, be advised that whispering into the left ear may give you an added advantage. Believe it or not, that was the conclusion reached by researchers who documented the responses of both men and women in whose ears lists of emotional and neutral words were uttered simultaneously. In the end, the subjects remembered more of the emotional words heard in the left ear. Why? Researchers speculate that messages that enter the left ear seem to be received more clearly by the right side of the brain, where passion and emotions are processed.

We bring you this column on hearing in order to better educate our friends here in the Weymouth area on the importance and benefits of taking care of their hearing, thus enhancing their quality of life. If you are having trouble hearing, or if a family member is struggling with hearing difficulties, we welcome your call at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER, 781-337-1144. We offer comprehensive services by a Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist, including free testing, evaluation, fittings and follow up care. We're located at 534 Main Street (Rte. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth, with an additional office in Abington.

P.S. Since messages that enter the right ear seem to be received more clearly by the left side of the brain, the center for analytical thinking, you might want to deliver directions in the right ear.
